DYNAMITE BOMB FOR GEN. OTIS; TWENTY DIE IN FIRE

Attempt to Kill Proprietor of Los Angeles Times Follows Explosion in Newspaper Plant in Which a Score Lose Lives

MACHINE IS SET AT HOME

Second Effort Also Made to Blow Up Residence of Chief of Commercial Organization—Reward for Guilty Persons

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.—Following the explosion and fire this morning that wrecked the building occupied by the Times-Mirror Publishing Company and resulting in the probable death of more than a score of employes of the newspaper, two dynamite bombs were discovered to-day by the police, one at the home of the publisher of the newspaper, General Harrison Grey Otis, and the other on the premises occupied by F. G. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the Los Angeles Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

Shortly after noon to-day Detective Rico, assigned to the residence of General Otis from police headquarters, together with the caretaker of the place made an investigation of the grounds surrounding the Otis home at Wilshire Boulevard and Parkville avenue. They searched among the trees and shrubbery surrounding the residence for some time and then went to the front of the place to continue their investigations. In an "ell" at the corner of the house and directly under a bay window leading to the reception room they discovered a suit case concealed among the bushes.

Infernal Machine is Case.

Thinking that the valise was the property of Mrs. Franklin Booth, daughter of General Otis, who had been preparing the home for the reception of its owner, who returned to this city early this afternoon from a trip thorugh Mexico they went into the house. Mrs. Booth disclaimed ownership of the case and Detective Rico started across the street to Wetzlaw Park to ascertain the contents. At this juncture he detected the whirring of clock work.

He cut a semi circular slash in the leather case and discussed twelve sticks of dynamite bound together with wire and an ordinary alarm clock of cheap pattern. The detective hastily dropped the suit case and made a race for a place of safety. He had retreated about fifty yards, when with a roar that shook the nearby residences the infernal device exploded. The explosion tore a great hole in the park turf and uprooted several trees.

C. C. Gabert and W. H. Fleckam, special watchmen on the Otis premises declared that they had made a detour of the place several times during the night and that the case was not in the yard up to the time of the fire. It is the belief of the police that the infernal machine was placed there early this morning.

Explosion Timed for 1 O'Clock.

The other bomb was found earlier in the day by a servant, near the foundation of the Zeehandelaar residence. It was connected with fifteen sticks of dynamite and the clock was set to explode at 1 o'clock. The mechanism, however, had been wound too tight, and the bomb failed to explode.

The discovery was made by Elizabeth Wilder, the maid servant at the Zeehandelaar home. She called a passerby, who telephoned to Police headquarters. Sergeant Adams and detectives Rico and Jarvi shurried to the scene, and Rico took the explosives and machine into the street.

The fifteen sticks of dynamite were wrapped in cotton batting and a newspaper enclosed the bundle. One stick undoubtedly connected in two places with nine feet of time fuse.

The fuse had been connected with a battery nailed on the side of the house. The battery was an ordinary dry cell, and it was connected with the small dial. A piece of brass was soldered to the alarm key so that the movement of the handle when the alarm went off would move a brass plate on a pivot. The alarm had been set for 1 o'clock, at about the same time that the explosion occurred at the Times building.

The key had been wound too tightly

Andrew Carnegie Calls Women the "Perfect Human"

Pays High Tribute to Influence of His Wife in Making His Own Career.

LUTON, England, Oct. 1.—Andrew Carnegie took occasion to-day to express himself very forcibly on the question of the rights of women. The iron master's very decided views were aired in a speech which he delivered at the opening of the free public library presented by him to this borough.

Mr. Carnegie, after declaring that he wished he were in public life in Britain as he wanted to "wake up" his native land, said: "Remember the Creator first tried his 'prentice hand on men, and it was after that experiment that He made a perfect human—the woman. There is no doubt that women here should fight for and secure a betterment of her position, but don't let them carry their 'rights' too far, because over in the United States the American husband is in total subjection to his wife.

"But speaking seriously, I would not have much to boast of in my own career, if it had not been for the influence of my wife."

Whitelaw Reid, in introducing Mr. Carnegie, announced that up to date the ironmaster's philanthropy had cost him $150,000,000.

BAY STATE CAR IN CRASH.

Was Racing Home From Vanderbilt Contest.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 1.—Speeding along the old Boston Post road eight miles beyond this city an automobile bearing a Massachusetts license tag collided with a car coming from the opposite direction about 7 o'clock to-night. The Massachusetts car was a total wreck. The injured were rushed to farm houses near by. The wrecked car bore the number, Mass. 22995. It is believed that it contained a party who were returning from the Vanderbilt cup race. As yet the names of the parties can not be ascertained.

No record of the ownership of the Mass. 22995 is in the current Massachusetts list. It is believed that the tag was recently issued for a new car.

100 DEAD IN A MINE.

Fire Damp Reported Cause of Loss of Life in Mexico.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 1.—Meagre reports received from Eagle Pass to-day say that 100 men were killed at Palau, in a mine explosion, in the lost Esperanzas district of Coahuila, Mexico. A special train left immediately for the scene of the disaster with surgeons and nurses. The explosion is said to have been caused by fire damp.

Latest information is to the effect that a first explosion occurred in mine No. 2, last night when 150 to 200 miners were in the mine. A rescue party of about 50 were sent into the mine shortly afterwards, when a second explosion occurred.

COLD WEATHER FISH HERE.

Get First Catch of Bream, So Goodby Indian Summer.

The first bream of the season were brought into T wharf yesterday. If you are satisfied to take the word of the old fishermen take heed and be prepared for cold weather. For know this, when bream appear the weather will be cold. According to the fishermen, the sign never fails. The bream were caught by the crew of the fishing schooner Harmony. They did not get many of them, in fact there were less than a dozen, yet there were enough to convince the sages of T wharf that cold weather will be here on the jump.

REPORT MANY DEAD AS WARSHIP LAUNCH IS CAPSIZED

Sailors From the New Hampshire Are Plunged Into North River in Darkness.

CRAFT WAS OVERCROWDED

Boston Man, in Charge, Proves Hero; Officers Silent as to Number Lost.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—A sailing cutter of the battleship New Hampshire, crowded with five naighty to a hundred men returning from shore leave, was swamped in mid-stream in the North River off 15th street at 7 o'clock this evening.

From information gathered from persons on shore who witnessed the accident, and from sailors coming ashore on leave, it is estimated that the death list will number between twenty and twenty-five men.

Although the offices of the New Hampshire do not admit that there were more than sixty-five men in the cutter, persons who saw the packed boat leave the foot of 157th street declared that it carried nearer a hundred, and it was the opinion of those who witnessed the tragic accident that the death list would be long.

The cutter was being towed by the steam launch of the battleship. According to those who saw the vessels leave the pier, the cutter was so filled that men were standing in her bow. She was low in the water, and there was a strong tide running.

Capsized by Big Wave.

The launch was tugging along at a good clip when a large wave struck the cutter broadside. The next minute all on board were plunged into the river—a struggling, shouting, tangled human mas. Persons ashore heard the tumult of the many voices, and could see through the gathering dusk that the cutter had disappeared—all save a fringe of bobbing heads that told how four score men were battling for their lives.

The cooler fellows swam to the towing launch and some were pulled aboard. But the greater number clung to the submerged cutter where those who could not swim grew weak and hung upon their stronger comrades.

But as the boats began to drift upstream with the swift tide and still no cheering searchlight flashed upon the death scene in the black water, some of the younger fellows lost their heads and the struggle became desperate.

Belated Help Comes.

One sailor named Ryan told later how he had held up a friend until his own strength weakened and then the other man had clutched his trousers and dragged them off before he sank and drowned. But in the main, the famous cool head and strong hand of the American sailor held him safe until help arrived. Help was long in coming.

The first old to reach the drowning men was from the shore, where hundreds had gathered to learn the meaning of the shouts for help and the cries of fear. The launch Victor from Lutz's boathouse picked up some of the men as did George Gluges in his ferry boater, the W. H. Hickey. But they could carry only a few, and besides, they were working in a dangerous tide.

Twenty minutes later the Lombana's great white flare swung down and swept the river with a wide band of brilliant light. It fell upon the struggling men around the upturned cutter and revealed here and there the heads of scattered swimmers. In its glow the launches of the fleet came rushing to the rescue. Once they reached the scene the work was quickly done. Strong, friendly arms grasped the exhausted fellows out of their watery bathdrap into the boats that seemed to swarm from every direction.

But how many they missed in the darkness, how many had gone down before they came was something that not even the officers could tell to-night.

Boston Man in Charge.

The officer in charge of the cutter was Midshipman Chevalier, a Boston man, and on graduate of the Naval Academy. If possible he erred in letting the boat be too heavily loaded, he proved himself a hero when the time of danger came.

As they were all plunged into the river, Chevalier's voice rose above the cries of terror, calling on his men to keep their heads and hold on. The young fellow seemed to possess superhuman strength. Whenever a man lost his grip, Chevalier swam after him and forced him back to the boat. Meanwhile the whistle of the steam launch was shrieking signals of distress.

Admiral Vreeland, in charge of the entire fleet division now in port, was aboard the Dublin Louisiana to-night. He positively refused to discuss the accident. Captain Rodger of the New Hampshire was on shore leave to-night, and had not been informed of the accident up to a late hour.

25 COTTAGES DESTROYED

Acres of Finest Orchards in Granite State Are Uprooted and Fruit Crops Loss.

A terrific wind and rain storm that had its origin in the foothills of the White Mountains in New Hampshire and travelled in a Southeasterly direction, coursing down the Merrimac Valley until it hit the sea, yesterday afternoon ruined a section of Wolfboro, N. H., where it did damage estimated at $200,000 and left a trail of damage, generally, in its course. Several persons were slightly injured.

The storm hit three States—New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts. It began about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when the rain fell heavily. It was accompanied by lightning and thunder. Later in the evening and last night it developed into a wind storm which in places reached cyclonic proportions.

Houses Are Destroyed.

In Boston the storm manifested itself in a short, sharp shower shortly before 6 o'clock. The weather had been disagreeably sultry during the afternoon following the wind from the fall of the storm, Boston got cooler.

The greatest damage was in and about Wolfboro, N. H. Twenty-five cottages were destroyed there. Houses and barns fell under the lash of the angry wind. Crops that stood in the field were swept through the air like feathers.

All of the telegraph and telephone wires wer smashed and Wolfboro found herself cut off from the world. The correspondent of the Sunday American was determined to get the news of the disaster to this newspaper, so he got a horse and over twelve miles of bad roads, gulled by the heavy downpour and made almost impossible by trees and limbs of trees that had been strewn about, made his way to Sanbornville, where he telephoned the news. At some places along the road the correspondent had to use an axe to cut away the debris.

People injured by Flying Debris.

Sweeping up from Lake Winnepesaukee, the storm carried everything before it. Save for a few drops of rain no warning had been given. For a distance of two miles, the land was laid waste. Flying debris resulted in injuries to a number of fleeing men, women and children. Three minutes after the first gust of wind had been noticed, the Northern section of Wolfboro had been practically wiped out. In some cases, furniture and timbers were blown for a distance of a half mile or more.

Acres of the finest orchards in this section of New Hampshire were destroyed. Fruit and fruit trees alike were uprooted. Beginning at the Lake View Cemetery, where large elms were tossed about like autumn leaves, finally falling and brushing down some of the finest granite monuments in the burying ground, the storm cleaned up a pathway for itself about half a mile wide.

Hotel Is Unroofed.

The storm stripped the roof from McDonald's famous Summer hotel and unroofed or destroyed the cluster of cottages that surrounded it. Two of these cottages were totally demolished. A third was lifted up from its foundation and carried fifty feet away, a mass of wreckage.

Charles Ellis was struck by a flying brickbat. He suffered injuries about the head. Another who was injured was Alexander J. McDonald owner of the hotel.

The roof was torn from the Ellis dwelling, which is a two story, 14-room structure. The barn was destroyed, and hundreds of dollars worth of hay and grain rained. The house and barn of John G Folsom were unroofed, and his crops destroyed. The large residence occupied by Ivan Piper was wrecked. His barn was unroofed. George Folsom's house and barn were badly damaged. Levi V. Hussy's large barn on the Davis estate was demolished.

When the wind and rain storm struck Haverhill a huge elm tree was blown over on Little street, crushing through the roof of Charles I. Bickum's house. A fire alarm was turned in, but no fire followed. Wires were blown down and streets out.

Plan to Receive Envoys.

Boston Central Branch, United Irish Leagues, will meet this evening at the American House to complete arrangements for the House Rule mass meeting to be held next Sunday evening in Symphony Hall.

MRS. WASSERMAN, NEW "BOSS" IN 8TH FIGHT FOR HOUSE

MRS. JACOB WASSERMAN

LOMASNEY'S THRONE ATTACKED BY CUPID

Little Love God Ensnares an "Insurgent" and He Is Running for the House.

WHO old Martin Lomasney, child less Father of Ward Eight, indomitable leader of the West End, is threatened at last and threatened seriously.

Many a man, some young, some old, has gone out to "get" the Hon. M. Lomasney, one by one their pelts have been added to the decorations of Donovan Hall in Green street home of the Hendricks Club.

But, now—well, the chap whom the Honorable Martin most fears, the one person on the globe who can get Mr. Lomasney's ungora, is on the war path for the Boss of the Eighth.

His name is Cupid.

It is no secret in Boston politics that Master Dan't has been trying to place a new leader over Ward Eight for years and years. Martin has apparently beaten the Little Fellow at every turn. Cupid has raised issue after issue against the Big Fellow, but none of them has got any further than resolutions adopted by the Men's Sewing Circle of West Amesbury, on the basis of terrible disloyalty concerning Ward Eight by the Saturday Evening Lasset.

"Biggest Family in Town."

"Tut, tut," Martin has always said to his people, "I have the biggest family in town; sure I'm mother and father and aunt to a thousand. I'm called out at night to go here and to there. I'd have no right to listen to this little blackguard a moment."

And the Eighth has stood by Martin.

So now, what do you think?

Well, sir, falling as an insurgent, the Little fellow has gone outside the party and is fighting as a Republican.

It came out yesterday that one of the double-tip arrows of the little archer had bought down town Henrietta Eva Thiess and young Jacob Wasserman, the attorney, that they were married last Wednesday in the Tuileries, that they are on their wedding tour, that Squire Wasserman is a Republican candidate for the House of Representatives against Mr. Lomasney, and that Mrs. Wasserman will be the campaign manager.

Never has a Republican candidacy in Ward 8 aroused so much interest. As one feet after another comes out it appears that Cupid had never exercised such ingenuity to make an enemy bite the dust.

Who They Both Are.

Mrs. Wasserman is only twenty-two, and, as the evidence herewith presented goes to prove, a mighty pretty girl. She

POLL SHOWS FOSS TIED WITH VAHEY; HAMLIN IN LEAD

CHARLES S. HAMLIN leads by a small plurality for the Democratic nomination for Governor in a poll of delegates chosen to the State Convention on Thursday, taken throughout the State. The poll resulted:

Charles S. Hamlin	281
James H. Vahey	281
Eugene N. Foss	281
Doubtful	124

The convention is entitled to 1,105 delegates, but some sixty towns failed to hold caucuses. That there will be 900 delegates taking part in the convention is a conservative estimate. The poll includes 927 of these.

Upon the basis of 901 delegates, 401 votes will be necessary for nomination. None of the three candidates will have a majority on the initial ballot.

THAYER MENTIONED AS COMPROMISE CA[illegible]

'INTERESTS' ON COMMITTEE

Fear That Resolutions Will Go Too Far Is the Only Dread of the Faithful.

By ELIAS M'QUAID.

FOLLOWING a long conference yesterday at Barre, in "Western" Massachusetts between Mayor John F Fitzgerald of Boston and Colonel William A. Gaston, one or two gentlemen close to Mr. Fitzgerald in the local Foss movement began to mention John R. Thayer of Worcester as a likely man to tie up to in case anything goes wrong this week with the Eugene N. Foss candidacy. Thayer is slated for the permanent chairmanship of Thursday's convention in Faneuil Hall.

The fact that gentlemen on the other side were talking about the possible necessity for a "compromise" candidate was declared late last night by Hamlin men to be the best possible evidence that the Foss boom is in a state of collapse. On Monday some of these Hamlin men declare the Foss boom will have completely flattened out. To use an old phrase, they say it's all over but the shouting.

Nobody knows that the Mayor and Colonel Gaston discussed at Barre the availability of former Congressman Thayer. It is not known even that they mentioned the puzzling situation in the Democratic household. It is merely written down as significant that at about the time of Mr Fitzgerald's visit to Gaston, twenty-odd miles northwest of Mr. Thayer's home city there began to be some talk hereabouts of Mr. Thayer as a "compromise" candidate.

Gaston Not Willing.

Prior to this there had been some talk here and there of Colonel Gaston himself. Colonel Gaston has not encouraged this talk. It is not coming from anybody who is up among the leaders of the party. It is currently believed, however, that the Mayor will take few definite steps in the gubernatorial contest without the advice of Colonel Gaston.

It was the best judgment of the older statesmen last night that neither Hamlin nor Foss actually controls the situation at this time and that the Vahey vote will decide the contest between them.

And the same older statesmen gave it as the best and finest of their wisdom and experience that "when the time comes" Vahey's votes will be with Hamlin. Some of them and that no eleventh-hour shift to Thayer or Hamlin can save Fitzgerald and Foss.

Vahey Not Choosing.

Mr. Vahey let it be known that he wasn't choosing between Hamlin and Foss, although he thought most of his followers would prefer Hamlin. Senator Vahey doesn't know what he will do about advising his followers. He inclines to belief that he will leave them free to do as they please.

On the first ballot, the elder statesmen say, there will be no choice. "Then," they say, "watch the disintegration of the Vahey vote."

Mr. Vahey isn't crossing any bridges until he comes to them. He still believes that the sentiment of the great masses of the party is in favor of his third nomination. Some of his friends say that if Foss is nominated the wage earners will swamp him, and that if Hamlin is the choice Fitzgerald and Fitzgerald's followers will bury Mr. Hamlin deep. It was insistent and repeated talk of this kind that probably led to some of yesterday's talk of Thayer.

Fight for Vahey Delegates.

The contest between Hamlin of Mattapoisett and Foss of Cohasset settled down yesterday to a struggle for the delegates pledged for James H. Vahey.

Ex-Senator Vahey, it was generally admitted, on the first ballot in Thursday's convention will "get a vote to be proud of." After that will come a mad scramble of much of his support to climb aboard the band wagon. In the ordinary course of politics, most of the skurrying delegates

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP THE OTIS HOME

however, and the alarm did not go off as intended. The bomb was set directly under the window of a room occupied by Miss Lois Zeehandelaar, daughter of the secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Zeehandelaar said that he was on his porch until 10 o'clock Friday night, when it began to rain.

The newspaper enclosing the explosive was not wet, indicating that the infernal machine had been placed in its position between 10 o'clock Friday night and 6 a. m. Saturday. Mr. Zeehandelaar told the police that two weeks ago, a screen covering an air chute on the north side of the house was torn off by some unknown person.

The explosive, it developed, came from the factory at Olivet, Ark., and the wrappings were dated September 20. Friday night there were four persons asleep in the house, Mr. Zeehandelaar, his wife and daughter and the servant.

Throughout to-day the police have been concentrating their efforts in a roundup of all suspicious persons found in the city.

Held for Investigation.

Shortly after the fire at the Times building they arrested Harry Plake and William Irwin. The former was after words released, while Irwin was held pending an investigation of the fire and explosion.

Irwin was taken into custody by the detectives before the wreckage had been cleared away from the ruins. Detailed to guard the building and allow no one to enter was Patrolman Thomas Collins, and Sunbernardino, who made this move, left a telephone number with the police in case they should want to get in touch with him.

Three suspicious looking men were seen lurking about the building early Friday morning. The watchman of the Iron Works nearby saw them and reported the matter shortly after.

Although no bodies have been removed from the destroyed Times building, it is well known that among the other employes killed or injured in the fire and explosion were the following men last night: Harry Elder, night editor, who jumped from the building and died a few hours later in a hospital; Harry L. Crane, managing editor; Grant Moore, head machinist, and Reuben Kerr, a pressman. Several others, including Linotype Operator Sawyer, the Western telegraph operator, and Foreman Mather, are in the hospital, but their injuries are not serious.

The entire force of the mailing department, a force of 100 men has been at work since noon, addressing copies of the paper to those of the men who are reported by officials of the company to be missing. A number of men were also engaged in tearing down the walls, which seemed to be in the greatest danger of falling, to prevent a rescue force.

The ruins, however, were found too hot for a great deal of any extended search, and a number of firemen were engaged in pouring thousands of gallons of water into the ruins in order to cool them off.

Harry Chandler, manager of the publishing company, this evening reiterated in the statement that the fire was of incendiary origin. He declared that the explosion occurred between 10 and 11 o'clock Friday night, and that within a few minutes after fifty employes were at work in the building, carrying the early shift, had left to attend Yom Kippur. Two persons were in the building at the time of the explosion, a watchman and a telephone girl, beneath the composing room. The floor of the department was lifted clear through the building. The compositors and linotype operators being hurled through the windows into the streets. Probably the building was enveloped in flames and within a few minutes escape from the composing room floor was impossible.

The floor of the printed employes room from the second and third story windows into the street. The entire city fire department responded to the alarm and a number of arrests were brought under control almost at once.

Managing Editor Andrews issued the following statement during the afternoon as supplementary to a statement he issued before entering the explosion:

"Dynamite bombs and fire are this paper's reason for such a disaster. We have received numerous threats that this should be done, and we shall be diligent in our efforts to apprehend the guilty ones and entitled to pursue their lawful occupation."

Issued One Edition.

In spite of the chaotic conditions, a full edition of the Times was issued during the afternoon, a branch office was established and was quickly seized in by thousands who thronged the streets. Immediately after the wrecking of the building, a special session of the grand jury was called, which stood ready to begin investigations at 10 o'clock this morning.

At a special session today Mayor Alexander Bacon Conrey appropriated $25,000 to be used to investigate the destruction of the building. Of this amount $2,500 is a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the destruction of the building.

Frank Pacific, publisher of the Times paper, today estimates the loss to the building at $150,000. Mr. Pacific says that two presses were also slightly ruined, and that the other units in the building were not injured. The remainder of the equipment was destroyed. The paper is carried a heavy insurance, which will nearly cover the loss.

First Year Men Win Annual Rush on Rogers Steps After Mighty Battle.

THE FRESHMEN beat the Sophomores "to a frazzle" in the annual rush to capture the steps of Rogers Hall last night.

The Freshies "rushed" the second year men from the steps of Rogers after a dizzy swirl, in which the 400 students were jammed into a frantic mass of struggling bodies. The Freshmen not only captured the steps, but they grabbed five luckless Sophomores, lugged them willy-nilly down to the Public Garden and ducked them in the pond.

To make the Freshmen victory complete, Theodore Kreuger, temporary chairman of the class, who was kidnaped to Manchester by the Sen by the Sophs earlier in the week, broke loose last night, and rejoined his classmates in time for the finish.

Job for the Police.

It was the first in some years that the freshmen have won the big rush and they celebrated the event to a late hour. The police had a busy time in finally dispersing the streets which were not cleared until an hour after the struggle.

The annual dinner and smoker to the entering class was held at the Tech Union at 6:30 o'clock. The freshmen had been urged by some of the faculty to do away with the annual "rushes" but before the reception was half over the sophomore leaders had begun to lay the foundation for the ground to every "freshie" that it was no use to do away with the rushes, and the verger had escaped his captors and would be on hand for the fray.

Sophs Prepare for Riot.

Heartened by the news the Freshmen formed in Trinity Place for the fray. Hats were secured in bundles or packed and neatly buttoned. Many of the Sophomores had gone to their rooms and changed their clothing. They had soon gathered on the steps and with tight fitting sweaters and heads tucked under the Freshmen were on hand.

And the Freshmen were on hand in force. They marched in columns of fours, singing. We are, we are, we are, we are the class of fourteen.

Two colors at Berkeley and Clarendon streets marked the strains of the sophomores war chant, which closed with "And we are Freshmen still."

The theatre crowds stopped, while curious people hopped from their cars and automobiles and filled the streets. Then about fifty place cops came to the rescue and soon locked together increased their force, and across the Commonwealth Avenue they plunged and with the crash the two living bodies of men came together.

Crowd Cheers Rushers.

They pulled and squirmed, and the freshmen shoving on from behind spied the sophomores over the high edge of the pond. Coats, shirts and collars had already been torn off in the melee. No one was injured and the big crowd which by this time filled the streets howled with glee.

Suddenly the rush seemed to be over. A few wrestling matches on the green were in progress but these were stopped the freshmen had the steps.

Then they turned and rushed down upon the unwary sophomores in three more ranks. Remembering the Lilliputian tactics of temporary chairman Kreuger, selected Charles H. Strang of Brookline, T. Wheeler of Boston, S. M. Hunter of Utica, N. Y., John B. Welch of Winchester and George P. Carter of Canton Junction.

With the cry "Duck 'em in the pond," the mob was off down the Commonwealth Avenue mall. Again the captured sophomores were hustled within the centre of the fighting every step of the way. The big crowd followed and followed to the pond at the Public Gardens. Here the hardest fight of the night occurred. The captured freshmen fought like demons to escape. It was like taking the family cat to the bath tub. But the freshmen stuck to the task and planted each man in the water.

ROMANIC CUTS NAPLES.

Changes Schedule to Avoid Cholera-Infested City.

The White Star Liner steamship Romanic, which sailed for Mediterranean ports yesterday, will avoid Naples. This arrangement was made by one of the officials of the company. The cholera epidemic now raging in that city is given as the reason why the Romanic will not land passengers at the port. Twenty-five persons who had engaged passage on the Romanic cancelled their reservations when the announcement was made. The Romanic carried 40 cabin passengers, 40 second cabin and 420 steerage.

DEBAT EON HIGH LIVING.

Congressional Candidate Puts Cost Blame on Monopoly.

MELROSE, Oct. 1. The Melrose Democratic Society at its meeting here tonight had for speakers, ex-Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, and Rev. W. Lenthrop Meaker of Revere, who is a candidate for Congress against R. W. Longorth. The subject discussed was "The High Cost of Living." Mr. Luce argued that the increase was due to the overproduction of gold and Mr. Meaker found a cause of high living in the monopoly of wealth in a few, and declared himself in favor of Government ownership of natural resources, and a system of single tax.

GIRLS IN A STAMPEDE TO WIN THE HEART OF A COUNT

Regular Blizzard of Tender Missives Swirls Down on Titled Visitor to United States.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The American presents to-day the second of the series entitled "The Love Letters of a Count," being the love-lorn and lovely epistles mailed, expressed and delivered to the young Count Guido Von Amerongen in the last few months. Let us take the widow's first, as a sample.

Grand Hotel Astorgen, Waldorf Hotel.

My dear Count—I have read with a great deal of pleasure that you will never marry for money, but only for love. It is the same with me. The divine spark was kindled in my breast many years ago and I married my first husband. He died and left me six children. I loved my first husband dearly but I think I could learn to love you just as ardently. You will probably want to adopt my six children.

The letters have come from all over the country, New England, the West and the East, seemingly about the same number of young ladies "who'd be a countess."

A surprisingly large number of the letters are from girl cashiers in restaurants and in moving picture shows. Here is one from a moving picture cashier in Boston:

Dear Count—Hurray for you! You want brains more than money and beauty more than gold. I have both brains and beauty. I am cashier in a moving picture show and have received most of my education in watching the beautiful films being spun out on the canvas. I like the love films the best. By watching them I have become well educated in the art of classical love making.

If, after we meet you think my education ain't what it should be then we can part forever. Send me your picture, care of the General Postoffice, Boston, and I will call for it under the name of Miss Wilson.

TELLS HOW GERMANY AIDS WORKINGMEN

The German system of Workmen's Insurance for sickness, industrial accidents, old age pensions and invalids was explained by Richard G. Krogmann, a twenty-five members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at an informal dinner at the Parker House last night.

The Chamber is considering the question of workmen's compensation for accidents and the exposition of the German methods was heard with much interest. Mr. Krogmann is President of the Seebering-Krogmann school, which is a German marine insurance association. He said in part:

Germany began the policy of providing for its sick and injured as long ago as 1883. At that time a compulsory insurance act was passed compelling every industrial workman and every employe whose earnings were under $500 per year to insure themselves against sickness. All employes who are sick are paid enough to live on for a period of twenty-six weeks and receive free medical treatment, drugs, etc. In case of death, the heirs receive a pension amounting to 60 per cent in some cases of the salary of the dead man. This insurance law applies to all trades.

Now comes the accident insurance. Under this law every employer is compelled to insure his workmen against accident as long as each employe's salary does not exceed $500 per annum.

FITZGERALD URGES AN 'INCREMENT' TAX

In urging the Finance Commission to consider some plan by which the community will get some benefit from the abnormal increase of down town realty, Mayor Fitzgerald in a letter last night criticised the late Andrews Tomfordre, the millionaire restaurant keeper, for his lack of public spirit, and called for an unearned increment tax law. In his letter the Mayor said:

"Among the parcels of real estate comprising the property of the late Andrews Tomfordre never the buildings at 37-41, 45-47, and 51 Court street, with the land attached, thereto. Investigation reveals a striking though not unusual state of affairs in connection with this property. The value of the land alone increased in twenty years from $288,000 to $695,100, an increase of $407,100 or nearly 200 per cent. In the meantime the building, either through neglect or from natural depreciation, decreased in value $42,100 or in round numbers sixty per cent.

"This fortunate investor is reported to have made no public bequests, yet he owed every dollar of this added value to the public. No intelligent method of taxation was displayed by him in acquiring it, and no form of service was rendered. The only talent was to purchase and to keep.

HORRID RULES FOR JACKSON 'FRESHIES'

Sophs at Girls' College Draw Up Six Commandments for New-Comers.

The Sophomore girls at Jackson College have framed a set of rules for the guidance of the tender "Freshies." The rules are called the SIX COMMANDMENTS. The fourth and most aggravating one forbids the "Freshies" from all masculine company. Here are the "Commandments."

"I. A suitable emblem of your green organism has been provided. Wear it in sight and keep it in mind.

"II. Eliminate all prep school plus. They don't belong here.

"III. You shall not be seen cutting on the street, nor shall you loiter in drug stores or confectionery shops.

"IV. You must not be seen with men. Observe this carefully.

"V. Campus restrictions: (a) All paths are denied to you except the gravel walk leading to Bolton, the chapel and the gymnasium, and the road leading from Professors row to Jther and the library. These are to be used only for recitations and chapel services. (b) In case of successive recitations the walk from the museum to Miner may be used. (c) The Lime grass on the common is too tender for the verdant feet of freshmen. Keep off. (d) The bubble is reserved for your superiors. (e) Keep off the flez unless accompanied by upper classmen.

"VI. Always show deference to upper classmen by (a) carrying their dress suit cases and bundles; 2, allowing them to enter theatres first; 3, offering them chairs and in other ways making yourself useful; 4, always showing them respect and proper humility of spirit.

To add insult to injury, the Sophomores signed the set of rules thus:

"Signed by THE class of Jackson College, 1911."

Each one of the twenty-five Freshies read the "Six Commandments" and sniffed audibly. Then she read the signature and bridled over.

"The very idea," she gasped, "calling themselves THE class. I guess we're THE class of this institution in 1914. We'll see about your horrid old rules, so there."

TURNBULL "ARSENAL" PROTECTS 'LUCKY' BALDWIN'S GIRL

Brookline Doctor Declares He's Ready to Shoot Kidnappers or Other Pursuers.

SHE IS BACK FROM WEST

Physician Says He Will See That Fair Claimant for Fortune Is Safeguarded.

SAFELY back from California, where an attempt was made to carry her off to Honolulu or possibly take her life, Miss Beatrice Anita Baldwin Turnbull, the claimant to a large share of the millions of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, will not have to run any further risk of annoyance unprotected, because her foster father, Dr. William R. Turnbull of Brookline declared last night that he will shoot the first man who makes a move to interfere with the rights of the girl.

Dr. Turnbull is already a walking arsenal, and he said that he would guard the girl's every movement and accompany her, so that she may be properly protected until her fight for her rights results in victory.

Mrs. Turnbull, accompanied by Miss Anita, had just returned from the Pacific Coast and had related their thrilling experiences to the Brookline doctor when he talked with a reporter of the Boston Sunday American.

Will Protect the Girl.

"Where the girl and her mother go I will go hereafter," asserted the doctor, and you may feel assured that they will be properly safeguarded. When they go to California again I shall accompany them.

"I also assume you that I shall be a walking arsenal. I am convinced that the enemies of the young lei would stop at nothing to defeat her just suit for the Baldwin property.

"And it is a just suit. I have known it ever since I edorsed her. Before adopting the girl I had detectives trace out every detail of her parentage to my own satisfaction. I, therefore, knew that she was a lawful heir, but I have never mixed into the case at all, but remained passive, allowing things to take their course, nevertheless acting for the publicity of the litigation which must ensue were she to recover her just belongings.

"Now I feel differently. I can tell you. The most dastardly attempt was made to get the girl away, kidnap her and take her to Honolulu or possible kill her. You see, in California when a girl is eighteen she can sign away her rights to anything. Here in Massachusetts she does not come of age until seventy-one, which is my mind is a much wiser provision.

Tells How Girl Has Trailed.

"Detectives have been everywhere upon the heels of my family. One employed in a Los Angeles hotel from San Antonio, Texas—a villainous-looking specimen, who would stoop to anything, as I have since learned, and he engineered a plan intended to deprive us of our daughter and deprive the girl of her share in the Baldwin estate, if not of her very life. He was thwarted. The whole gang were thwarted. Poor little Beatrice doesn't know which way to turn or who is her enemy. She is the nicest little girl in the world and right here and from this on I do things.

"Hereafter I shall devote my every energy toward the prosecution of my daughter's interests. Where she and her mother go I will go and I will be prepared to resent every hostile move from law or lawless. A deputy constable's badge is one thing, but kidnapping innocent, seventeen-year-old girls is enough to stir anybody.

"A few weeks ago a bearded man met me under false pretenses to talk of the case. Within a few days he has called again with his beard dyed another color. But I recognized him. They will hang about our premises no longer and they will persecute the girl and her mother no longer. I'm stirred very deeply and I am also heeled and from now on I'm on the job."

DRAPER SPURS PRINTERS.

Wants Them to Hurry with Job of State Lists.

After learning of the delay in the work on the printed lists of State officials and employees, with their salaries, Governor Draper yesterday talked with the State printers, who promised to work night and day so that the lists may be ready for distribution in a short time.

The law requires that the lists be distributed not later than October 15. Word they had not appeared yesterday, the Governor started an investigation. The delay is said to have been due to difficult nature of the undertaking

MAUD KEHOE, WHO WAS CRUSHED TO DEATH BY A CAR

MAUD KEHOE

LITTLE GIRL KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC CAR

Mother, Recognizing Little Pink Dress, Fights Madly to Reach Crushed Form.

MAUD KEHOE, five years old, was killed by a Somerville car at the corner of Eliot and Warrenton street yesterday afternoon. Her body was placed in an ambulance and taken to the City Hospital morgue.

As the ambulance started a piercing scream startled the big crowd which watched the tragedy. It was the little girl's mother who had recognized the pink dress of the child as she was being lifted into the ambulance.

"It be my little Maud," she screamed. "Oh, let me get to her."

She tried to force her way through the dense crowd but hose near her held her and told her it was not her child. The ambulance disappeared and Mrs. Kehoe was taken home where a messenger from the hospital found her and told her that she had not been mistaken.

Has Tragic Holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. aMrtin Kehoe lived to No. 108 Warrenton street a few days ago. Little Maud was going on six years, and she was taken to school for the first time last Monday. Yesterday was her first holiday from school and the child was very proud. At dinner she told her father that she didn't have to go to school on Saturday and he laughed and gave her a cent to spend.

A little while later Maud pouled her mother by the skirt and said: "Can I go out and spend my cent at Young's grocery? I want to buy an apple."

Mrs. Kehoe, who is a young and attractive looking woman, told the story with many sobs.

"I was busy with my work, getting settled in this house, and I said for her to go along. A few minutes later I heard shouting in the street and I heard the woman next door holler out of the window.

"What's the matter?

"A little girl's been run over," somebody shouted.

"I felt an awful pain catch hold of me in the heart, and I got so weak I could hardly get down stairs. 'Suppose it should be my little Maud,' I kept saying. I ran down to Eliot street and there was a great crowd around a car. I tried to get through but nobody would move for me.

Knew Little Dress.

"'Who is it?' I asked the man next me, but he said he didn't know; some kid or other. They were lifting the car, and, all I could do, I couldn't see who was under it. An ambulance was there, and finally they got the body out and started carrying it up the steps to the ambulance. I saw the little pink dress I made myself and I gave a scream and tried to fight my way to her.

"Don't be foolish, it isn't your child at all,' people near me said. But I knew it was. I don't know how I got home but the next thing there came a policeman to tell me that it was my little girl."

Mr. and Mrs. Kehoe have one child left to them, Robert, who is seven years old.

Stock Sale Enjoined.

An injunction was issued yesterday in the Suffolk Superior Court by Judge Pierce restraining James F. Scott and the Boston Georges Creek Coal Company from transferring stock pending a hearing on a bill in equity brought by Samuel Lebowich. The plaintiff claims that Scott owes him $1,500.

Restaurant Keeper Will Marry Cashier

A romance that had its beginning in the waiting room of the Boston Elevated station at Mt. Auburn will end in the chiming of wedding bells to-morrow night when George Francis Emery and Miss Orletta Gertrude Dumas are married at the parochial residence of Rev. Thomas Corcoran, rector of Sacred Heart Church, in Mt. Auburn. Mr. Emery is the owner of the restaurant and news stand in the Mt. Auburn waiting room. Four years ago he engaged Miss Dumas as his cashier and manager. Another engagement of a different kind followed.

The bride-elect lives at No. 15 Prospect street, Cambridge. After their wedding supper the couple will leave on an extended honeymoon to New York.

Honeymoon Auto Trip Through Berkshires

Edward S. Loomis of New York city, and his bride, formerly Miss Ann Elizabeth Klemm of Dedham, are on an automobile honeymoon through the Berkshires. Their trip will take them eventually into Allegash County, Me., where Mr. Loomis has a shooting lodge. They will remain there till New Year, when they will take up their permanent home in New York. The wedding took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the rectory of St. Mary's church, Dedham. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father John H. Fleming. Following the wedding there was a reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth F. Klemm of Eastern avenue, Dedham.

"Miss Ananias" Is Highly Popular

YOUNGSTON, Ohio, Oct. 1.—Colonn and Harris presented at Park Theatre, for the first time, Miss Adelaide Thurston in a new comedy, "Miss Ananias," by Catherine Chisholm Cushing. The audience was very enthusiastic. "Miss Ananias" is the best play Miss Thurston has ever had and there were numerous curtain calls at the end of the second act. Miss Thurston responded by making a short speech thanking the audience for their appreciation. "Miss Ananias" is booked to play New York city after the holidays.

Customs Men Sieze Girl's Opal Necklace

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—A year ago Miss Primrose Gordon Alexander of the Hotel Gotham laughed at the ancient superstition that opals are unlucky. Now the young woman is not quite sure whether the gems have some connection with misfortune. At that time she was given by the Countess de Radlior of Paris an opal necklace of unusual brilliancy and value, which she wore every day until to-day when the necklace was seized by the customs authorities and sent to the public stores.

65 SUMMER STREET

FALLING TREE LIMB CRUSHES OUT LIFE OF BOY AT PLAY

Chum Calls in Vain to Frankie Woodward, Then Grieves Over Bruised Body.

EUGENE LANCASTER'S chum, Frankie Woodward, is dead. And Genie, heart-broken, his eyes bright with tears, cannot understand why Fate permitted Frankie to stand directly in the path of 150-pound tree limb which crashed down into Cedar street, in Roxbury, yesterday afternoon.

It is the first great sorrow which has come into Genie's life. They were only thirteen years old, Genie and Frankie, and they were chums and no boys were ever more devoted. Now Frankie is gone and Genie will never see "the best feller I ever knew."

For years the Lancasters lived at No. 133 Cedar street, opposite them. No longer terrace, lived the Woodwards. And little Genie and Frankie first naturally were pals.

Then the Woodward children began to play in the streets, for they were getting older, and the family moved to Dorchester, out in Dorchester, out where there was plenty of room to play and lots of good air. And besides, Mr. Woodward's health was not of the best.

Sorrow Comes to Home.

But there was not "room enough" to play without in Gleason street, where Frankie's new home was. He lost sight of Genie, too, for weeks at a time, for he had to change over to the Dudley Street Opera School from Dudley Grammar.

Last year Frankie started a bicycle. Boys on bicycles fell under trains, it was dangerous. But finally one day he could get help but buy the bicycle for Frankie, so he worked assiduously on Saturday mornings, folding the paper bokes at the Woodward feather curling store on West Newton street.

Two days after the bicycle came, Frankie's father was brought home dead. He had been stricken with heart failure. Frankie's mother had to leave the child even every day to do over town and take care of the store.

Had Jolly Time at Games.

Yesterday morning he walked down the street with his mother to the grocery store. She bought the Sunday dinner and Frankie, placing the parcels in his basket, gave him twenty cents to buy his fare. They have seventy-nine over to Genie's house in Roxbury.

Frankie kissed his mother good-by and sped home. Mrs. Woodward walked down the street to reach the car line. It was the last time the neighbors were to see him.

So who he left the car line he hurried up to the Lancasters, and Genie was ready for him. They chatted right in the open a good time. First they played catch and Genie, who is left-handed, caught the ball against the wall and Frankie tried to catch it. When he did he seemed content to let Genie bat it out. Frankie lost the game by the score of 11 to 2. Still Genie had a chance to practice than he did.

Last Game Was Fatal.

After that Marion Berry, who lives across the street, and Betty Lancaster came up into the yard. They came over to play some of croquet.

Then Harry and Carl Sandman to get his football and then kicked a few punts.

They had a fine time. Kicking the football pulled out on the street where they know they were kicking it about. And a lot of other boys joined in. Then only Frankie and Genie were left kicking the ball when Mrs. Lancaster called them to dinner.

"Let's have one more kick," said Genie, and he boosted it as far as he could. Frankie caught the ball near one of the big elm trees. Look out, I'm going to put it over your head!" he cried.

He kicked it at his best, and it went over Genie's head. Genie turned and ran after it. As he did he heard a roar and then a crash. He turned and looked. A big black limb had fallen down and there lay the still body of Frankie.

Crushed Under Limb.

"Frankie! Oh, Frankie!" yelled Genie. But for the first time since they were chums Frankie didn't answer. Genie rushed to where he lay. He saw the crushed head and knew his chum was dead.

The big limb, torn by an extra heavy gust of wind, had broken off a hundred feet from the ground.

Genie didn't eat any dinner. Mrs. and Father went to tell Mrs. Woodward, and she went to get home with them. And from there to the City Hospital she tried in vain to quench her tears as she gazed on the still, four-year-old Frankie. Eugene Lester and seven-year-old Irene Frankie was the oldest.

VINCENT CLUB GIRL BRIDE

Miss Anita Clark Is Now Mrs. John Varney Woodward.

Boston, New York and Philadelphia society people filled St. Paul's Church in Brookline yesterday afternoon when Miss Anita Clark, a member of the Vincent Club and daughter of Mrs. Homer B. Richardson of Dedham, became the bride of John Varney Woodward, son of Mrs. Charles F. Woodward of Bangor, Me. The ceremony was performed at 12:30 o'clock. Rev. Prescott Lecky, rector of the church, officiating.

The bride's sister, Miss M. Frances Clark, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Josephine Heard of New York, Florence Burton of Cotuitmiet, L. I., Cornelia D. Hall of New York, Elinor Quincy Sherwood and Miss Ruth Clark, sister of Elizabeth Jackson of Boston.

Percy Hall of Chicago was best man. The ushers were William C. Gilbert of Chicago, Louis Starr, jr., of New York, Henry E. Widener of Philadelphia, Harry Wilmer and Benjamin Loring Young of Boston.

A WISCONSIN PIONEER

Says Pe-ru-na is "Worth its Weight in Gold."

John Paulin, Sr., Says: "Peruna Cured My Catarrh."

Mr. John Paulin, Sr., a pioneer of Port Washington, Wis., 119 Franklin St., is held in high esteem by the residents of that place. He is one of the oldest citizens. In a recent letter he says:

"I have used Peruna with good results for coughs and colds which troubled me every fall and winter. It has also cured my catarrh, which always became worse when I suffered with but a slight cold. I am recommending Peruna because it is worth its weight in gold."—Mr. John Paulin, Port Washington, Wis.

Pe-ru-na Is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

Hale and hearty old age means simply healthy organs and healthy functions retained beyond the usual time.

As a rule, at the age of 60 or 70 years, the functions begin to wane and the various organs to lose their natural power.

This need not occur. At least not in all cases. Many a man and woman have retained their health and vigor much later in life.

We have on file several letters from octogenarians who have found Peruna of priceless value to them as their declining years advanced.

Has Reached Four Score Years and Weighs 156 Pounds.

Mr. Levi Kegg, Rainsburg, Pa., writes:

"Your medicine has done me so much good I intend to keep it on hand all the time.

"I had all the symptoms of systemic catarrh. My eyes were red and inflamed, my throat, stomach and bowels troubled me, was nervous, had nervous headaches. I am now entirely cured by Peruna.

"I am eighty years old, and I never weighed more than 140, but now I weigh 156 pounds."

FRANKIE WOODWARD.

Left kicking the ball when Mrs. Lancaster called them to dinner.

'PARENT ABDICATES!' OLD 'SHALT NOT' SYSTEM GONE

Prof. Moore of Chicago in Lecture at Newton Says We're Losing "Apron Strings."

"The parent has abdicated. The sunday School is a reminiscence. The old system of 'Thou shalts' and 'Thou shalt nots' is passing away rapidly as an influence among men.

"The race is cutting loose from its traditional apron strings and is in danger of reaping large harvest of wild oats.

"We are at the mercy of our intellegence. We need no longer expect to be saved by some fatherly and athletic personage from without.

"The time has come for a New Evangelism.

"The eyes of the universe are on the school."

THESE somewhat vitriolic utterances were voiced yesterday afternoon by a mild-mannered man in an immaculate dove-gray colored suit, a man with close-cut hair and with the cast which was intensified by the cleft like scarf he wore. The speech took place in the large unique reception hall to a home in Newton—a room filled with curios from all parts of the world, wonderful in its simplicity of its charm.

The speaker, perfectly tame mannered man was Prof. J. Howard Moore, of Chicago Public Schools and Chicago University, and the place was the home of Mrs. F. R. Moore, No. 54 Commonwealth avenue. The audience included many well-known Boston teachers, especially invited, and Dr. Francis G. Peabody, of Harvard.

The whose gist of Prof. Moore's talk was that all the striking human beings in history have been those who have come out and forbidding the other, just as sheep do. He preached that we are being too much governed by the men and deeds of the past, that we are living too much in the thousands of years ago and without any reason for so doing, according to the lecturer.

"Emancipated in Spots."

"We are emancipated in spots. We have gone to extremes on some things and utterly neglected others," declared the professor. We get somewhere near to chance in throwing off the shackles of our own. Progress is without symmetry or proportion. We have invented photography and are about to fly. We have invented the reap-hook into the harvester and the sewing into the factory, but in the architecture of men and women, we are using the same old models and the same old recipes that have been used by mankind for hundreds of years.

"In our enthusiasm to chain the light ning and make big dirigibles we overlook the fact we have overlooked ourselves.

"We are making a shocking waste of some thing, we scarcely know what, but without much cooperation with each other and with very little understanding of the conditions and ends aimed at.

"If the whole human race would only sit down and think for a while and see where it is going, and then go to work in a business-like way and formulate a plan and then work with land us at our destination—that's what we need—intelligent, conscious control.

"The school is at fault. It falls in its function. The great mass of human young grow up like weeds. It is much more important that the young human mind should feel right about evolution than it is that it do things than that they should acquire facility in reciting a table reluctantly from memory or in reducing fractions. We have perceived a person of the name of Spencer.

Pre-Darwinian Congress.

"Look at our jails and police courts, our hospitals and sanitariums, our armies and navies. Look at the poverty, the ignorance, vice, corruption, selfishness and inhumanity that are everywhere and the chaos and unconscious and stupidity that are in human and overstanded civilization.

"Our courses of study are pre-Darwinian. They were made out in our sleep. They are based on the assumption that the human young is distinction from the young of all other animals, and that the two are pure and spotless. The great facts of human origin and heredity are ignored. We have known for something like two generations that man's origin is not what he was supposed to be, but no poky effort is in adjusting ourselves to new truths that our whole education and practice still proceeds on the hypothesis that the raw material of human character is celestial.

"Go back into the past only a few thousand years and you will find people who represented by beings so different from that we are by day and night, basking in such sartorial simplicity that we would to-day run for disorderly life if we should meet them in the road.

"Man Came from Jungle."

"Man did not come from the skies. He came from the jungle. We are out of the sun. We are children of the sun. Man is an animal. He acquired his two-bodged fit for the earth by ages that he acquired his backbone. In all not everything. It was handed on. The ancient trunk tendencies of human nature are the same tendencies as those which from the foundations of animal psychology everywhere. Instincts of self, selfishness, of motherhood and of altruism are as old almost as protoplasm.

"Even ethic peoples are only superficially civilized. Scrape off the garbed of the most pretentious of human beings and you will come to something as primitive and mentary that it has to be kept religiously to the background. If we human beings were transparent, and could see all of the thoughts and feelings that roam and prowl in the jungles inside each one of us and could know how anxiously we strive to show our bright parts and hide our dark parts out of sight, we would understand much better than we do how well placed beings we really are.

"The great core of human nature is barbaric. Civilization carries a corpse in its cargo—the elemental instincts and passions which have been bequeathed to us by the ages all the animal.

"There is no systematic recognitions of this fact by educators, much less any hopeful effort to cope with it as a pitfall. Here is naturally, the biggest, stern fact and the most important fact in human nature, yet it stands here generation after generation without any recognition whatever in our curricula. It takes no part in determining those programs of activities which are designed to fit the human young for successful living. It is a terrible comment on human understanding, a crushing demonstration of the failure of some force to perform the function which in the next decade of evolution are allotted to them."

RACES TRAIN FOR BRIDE.

Bridegroom Gets Taxicab and Beats Cars to Tacoma.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 1.—To regain the side of his lost bride, Charles O. Marvin, a Yale man, had the ride of his life in a taxicab and an engine, when he left Station in Seattle he beat a railroad train to the depot in Tacoma. The wheels of the automobile were still rolling as it pulled out of the automobile, rushed into the trainshed and aboard the parlor car, where he gathered into his arms a young woman, who, with tear-stained eyes, had been gazing through the windows. It was not necessary to be told they were bride and bridegroom. They acted their parts.

The distance between Tacoma and Seattle by rail is forty-one miles, and the distance by road is thirty-six miles, giving the automobile five miles advantage in the race.

POLICE PIANO, LIKE HARP OF TARA, IS SADLY MUTE

Melody in Back Bay Station Plugged by Edict of Hard-Hearted Captain.

JUST as Illmpressario O'Mears indict had troubles enough, lately, the police department is threatened with mild mutiny—a sort of pop mutiny, as it were at the Clarendon Street police station. Captain Frank I. Jones of Station 16 in the Back Bay has shut down on the police singing school.

The ribbon in the music room of the Back Bay station in the old days known as the guard room and still thus vulgarly designated in the police stations of South Boston, Neubun, N. H., Chicago and St. Louis, reposed last night in correct imitation of Tara's famous harp.

There was a card on the piano which said:

NOT TO BE MONKEYED WITH AFTER 6 P. M.

Scribbling away at the blotter, Lieutenant Jim Sargent appeared to be sketching "Tears Like." The lieutenant said "a body can write in peace now."

Bad for the Technique.

The younger men of the station are all for the piano. Many of them are studying with the best of the local masters, and when one doesn't keep up one's practice on the piano, as everybody knows, one's technique is hurled to go on the rifle.

Captain Jones, who came from Lebanon, Me., some years ago, has very little soul, it is said, for syncopation. Says he, "Boston cannot understand them. The Yankee ear is tuned to every-day, double-footed Yankee cop, and he had about as soon hear a policeman on the Strideon sing the golden curls and a Russian pony muff as have glee clubs pattern around.

Yesterday the Captain let it be known that the piano had to go up the back room—would be closed hereafter at 6 P. M. This is all right for the night plankies, who go on duty at that hour, but hard on the day accompanists, who now have no time for practice at all at all.

The Captain said that there had been "complaints of the noise." As a matter of fact the next door neighbors are the firemen of Engine 33, who have a dandy piano and their cow and a glee club that has been practiced in the morning and across the way are the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hellen Railroad.

May Call for Arbitrator.

Daniel J. "Bright Eyes" Cronin, James W. "Dolly" Gray, Ed Carty, "Parker" Monahan and "Steve" Flaherty walked around the Bay yesterday with hearts bowed down. They pulled their hats far over their eyes and sighed in pathos. Inasmuch as the day planists are just as much as the night players for the music, it may be necessary for the Fourth Estate to may have to be arbitrated.

In the meantime, Brigadier Kruger of St. James's dropped into the music room of Engine 33, next door to the police station, last night, and gave a little program. He entertained a perfect swarm of passers-by.

The engineers seemed to have more fire in their inside than ever before. Captain "Mel" Mitchell acted as director and the Pyrotechnic Quartette was organized again and again. "Jake" Desmond, "Val" McGuire, Louis Hooper Boudreau, "Joe" McLaughlin and "Bill" Gilman sang some of the latest popular songs. Tom Cheney, just back from Atlantic City, rendered a touching little ballad, which, he says, he all the rage down there, inquiring whether any gentleman in the audience this evening has lately perceived a person of the name of Spicer.

Not at all Highboards.

Of course it wasn't the kind of stuff that Mr. Nickerson or Morton Brock have been playing in the police station. Though Humoresque, Chopin's Polonaise, Rubenstein's Melody in F, and that kind of junk, it is said, are not the kind that the folks passing by in the street, and it went strong.

Meanwhile the cops of "10" wonder who, in this neighborhood, replaces it as symphony in the station house—kicked on piano lessons between the hours of 6 and 8 p. m.

They say in police and fire circles that there has never been such a musical force. Then they seem to think of something, in a fluid like, and they beg your pardon and excuse them. The Tennis and Racquet is located on the next corner.

SUSPECTS ON "JOY RIDE."

If you since was ransacked and your clothing stolen, would you feel like inviting the alleged thieves to take a "joy ride" in your automobile? That's what Mr. Paxson, a leading Quincy business man, did yesterday. Thursday night the clothing store of the aPxson, Mitchell Clothing Company of Quincy was broken into and $80 worth of clothing stolen. Yesterday Mr. Paxson learned the three alleged soldiers to a South End boiling house. Then he called for inspector Mitchell and Special Officer Mitchell of Police Headquarters in his automobile and they were whisked to the house where the men were stopping. The three men were taken into custody and then hustled off to Police Headquarters in Mr. Paxson's machine. They are Charles names—William F. Burke, Providence; Frank Finn, Winthrop, and Michael Mullen, Quincy.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WIN

The Boston Chamber of Commerce nine administered a beating to the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange by the score of 27 to 11 at the American League grounds, Huntington avenue, yesterday afternoon. The game was the third and deciding one of each team had won a game. Over three hundred guests, among them were the President Arthur T. Cummings and Vice-President Leslie C. Smith of the Produce Exchange, the directors, many prominent railroad men and members of the Chamber

Pay of 3,000 Street Car Men Advanced

Boston & Northern and Old Colony Adopt Four-Year Agreement.

Three thousand motormen, conductors, shop and car men employed on the Boston & Northern and the Old Colony Street Railways systems are given an increase in wages ranging from five per cent. a day under an agreement signed late yesterday afternoon by a committee of the men's unions and the executive officers of the two companies.

The committees have been in conference for two weeks. This agreement was adopted Tuesday, as a compromise measure, and later submitted to the men for approval.

In case of a serious dispute, the men are to select a representative, and the companies another. These two select a third. Pending their decision, the matter is to be allowed to rest, and their decision will be given in final and binding on both parties.

The conductors and motormen are given an increase of two cents a day over the old scale. Formerly, men were started at twenty-one cents an hour, which was increased to twenty-five cents after seven years' service. The wages of the shop and carbarn men are raised 5 per cent.

The agreement which was signed yesterday is in the nature of a compromise, and is binding for four years. The committee which carried on the negotiations for the men consisted of sixteen. William F. Lynn was president, and P. F. Sheehan of Brockton was secretary.

FEDERAL EMPLOYES URGE PENSION BILL

At a meeting of over 1,200 Federal employes in Faneuil Hall last night, the following resolutions were adopted:

We urge the Congress of the United States to enact a law providing for the retirement of superannuated and disabled Government employes on a plan that will not arbitrarily reduce their present income.

The meeting was held under direction of the United States Civil Service Retirement Association and was called to promote the retirement of aged and incapacitated Federal employes on pensions. Several women were among the gallery spectators.

While the gathering was assembling there was music by the Boston Letter Carriers' Band. Nicholas S. Lawless, President Brand 54, National Association of Letter Carriers, called the meeting to order. G. L. Cain, President of the National Association of Government Employes, was permanent chairman.

Explains Gillette Bill.

In the absence of the Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, who was detained on account of an accident, the first speaker was Rev. William J. Kane, S. J. Father Kane gave a summary of the Gillette pension bill, now of Engine 33, next door to the police station, last night, and gave a little program. He entertained a perfect swarm of passers-by.

The engineers seemed to have more fire in their inside than ever before. Captain "Mel" Mitchell acted as director and the Pyrotechnic Quartette was organized again and again. "Jake" Desmond, "Val" McGuire, Louis Hooper Boudreau, "Joe" McLaughlin and "Bill" Gilman sang some of the latest popular songs. Tom Cheney, just back from Atlantic City, rendered a touching little ballad, which, he says, he all the rage down there, inquiring whether any gentleman in the audience this evening has lately perceived a person of the name of Spicer.

Congressman's Plea.

Congressman John A. Ke ber, who received loud applause, said in part:

"The best thought on the subject is agreed that the Government would profit financially if those employes, whose physical and mental capacity have been reduced by age and service, were retired and the younger and stronger men given their places. The idea of turning out of office with no provision for their care, men and women who have given the best years of their life in the civil service of the country is repugnant to the American people."

Other speakers were Peter J. Hamilton son of the Boston postoffice, George A. Wood, national secretary of the railway mail service, and M. P. O'Donoghue of Washington.

General Electric Wins.

PRESIDENT IS KEPT BUSY IN NEW YORK

Forced to Change Plans to Leave on Midnight Train for Beverly.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—President Taft was kept on the jump from the time he arrived at the Pennsylvania station, in Jersey City, this afternoon, until after the banquet of the National Republican League in the Hotel Astor. He was so busy that he changed his plans to return on the midnight train and decided to wait until tomorrow before starting for Beverly, Mass.

Robert C. Morris, chairman of a committee of fifteen members of the League appointed by Mr. Hanmond, met Mr. Taft at the Pennsylvania station and accompanied him to an automobile, which immediately proceeded by a Twenty-third street ferry boat. When the party arrived at the foot of West Twenty-third street an escort of mounted police joined the party and led the way at a brisk trot to the home of Henry W. Taft, the President's brother, in West Forty-eighth street.

As the President's party turned into Forty-eighth street from Fifth avenue, one of the servants of the Taft household started to put out an American flag. The folds of the flag caught about the staff and the servant was unable for some time to get it beyond a position of half-mast. President Taft noticed it, as did Captain Butt, his military aide, and both laughed heartily over the efforts of the man to get the flag to the head of the mast. He accomplished it as the President started up the steps into the house.

The President and his party went to the Republican Club, where he was the guest of the evening at the banquet given by the League. Henry L. Stimson, Republican nominee for governor arrived at the club a few minutes before the President and was greeted with a cheer as the Next governor of New York.

Mr. Stimson and the president were in conference for more than an hour, but refused to discuss what passed between them. It is known that the President is pleased with Stimson's nomination and will aid in every way in his election possible. The President also personally congratulated Mr. Stimson upon the result of the Democratic convention in Rochester.

TWO STEAMERS AGROUND.

New Pacific Liner May Be a Total Loss.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 1.—The new steel steamship Kulshan of the Puget Sound Navigation Company went aground to-day at Deception Pass. It is feared she will be a total loss. The Canadian Pacific steamship Princess Ena went aground to-day in a fog in Vancouver Narrows. She is not believed to be in a dangerous position.

DAN CUPID AFTER LOMASNEY'S THRONE

has had a thorough business training, being the daughter of Fred Tibes of No. 88 Parkway, Chelsea, manufacturer of wicker ware at No. 174 Commercial street, and for seven years has been associated with her father in business. Recently she has had charge of the clerks; has been mistress of the business.

Lawyer Wasserman, who is twenty-six, has offices in Barristers' Hall. He is the son of David Wasserman of No. 251 Dudley street, not far from the Lomasney place in Hanover street. Like Martin, the elder Wasserman is in real estate.

The young folks had known each other ever since childhood. They became sweethearts a year ago, and they were married on Wednesday by Rabbi M. Eichler of the Union Park Street Synagogue.

When the Republicans of the Eighth failed to nominate a man for the House of Representatives at the primaries it became noised out that the Democratic candidate would be Lomasney. Mr. Wasserman determined to enter the field in the interests of "honest government."

It was after the eve of the wedding and the bride-elect was giving the past pat to Mr. Wasserman, but interrupted on by "Rose" Cupid—she found time to help in framing up campaign for the holidays.

They All Saw Mrs. Wasserman.

So this letter found its way last night to the newspapers:

"I am willing to serve as Representative from Ward 8 next year and I have decided to turn over to a committee of Ward 8 residents the salary attached to the office, to be used for such public purposes as in their judgment seems best.

"I know that many of the Ward 8 people feel advertising, but my candidacy is in the interests of honest government and my desire is to represent the people of Ward 8 honestly and without regard to any affiliations."

Naturally the letter attracted the deepest interest of city editors, and they all sent their best young reporters around to see Mrs. Wasserman. Some of the reporters speculated on the amount of the salary to be relinquished by Representative-elect, the from Ward 8, but they all saw Mrs. Wasserman and the bill of fare comfort to defeat, and young Mrs. Wasserman would please to write it up. So far the paper became—because—well, because we have certain personality to overrule in point of support—that we cannot divulge at this time.

And on the way out, whom did one of the reporters see hiding behind the door, chuckling as if his heart would break, but the Little Boss, D. Cupid!

Poor old Lomasney!

TAFT IN CAMPAIGN KEYNOTE DEFENDS REPUBLICAN RECORDS

President, in New York Speech, Also Praises Action of the Saratoga Convention.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—President Taft to-night made public his definition of "progressive Republicanism" and gave definite notice of his friendly feeling toward that wing of the party.

The occasion was his first political address of the congressional campaign, a "keynote" speech delivered before the banquet of the National League of Republican Clubs. A progressive Republican, according to the views of the Chief Executive, is "one who recognizes existing and concrete evils and who is in favor of practical and definite steps to eradicate them."

Three times during the speech the President referred in complimentary terms to Ex-President Roosevelt, first thanking him as the executive whose administration marked a "rising tide of progress" for the party; again as being chiefly instrumental in organizing a crusade against political corruption, and finally without mention of his name as "hearkening" the cause of Republicanism "by a brave declaration of principle" in the convention at Saratoga.

The President said in part:

The President's Speech.

Gentlemen of the National League of Republican Clubs:

I am here because I believe this league is a most important aid to the upbuilding and defense of Republican principles. As President I prefer to avoid partisan controversy, but there are occasions, and it seems to me the present is one, when it is not improper for me to discuss the issues soon to be considered and decided by the electorate.

In the pursuit of promises made in its last national platform, the Republican party, in the short period of eighteen months, presented to the public, as accomplished facts, the following most important legislation and executive action:

The powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission were enlarged.

The commission was empowered to suspend any proposed increase of rates until the shipper shall have a chance to be heard as to its reasonableness.

New Court of Commerce.

Interstate telegraph and telephone companies were brought within the regulation of the commission.

A new court of commerce was provided, in order that shippers and railways might Railway employes were protected by new safety-appliance law.

The employers' liability act was perfected.

An inquiry into workingmen's compensation for injuries received was instituted.

An inquiry into the issuance of railway stocks and bonds was inaugurated.

A new customs court was established.

A postal savings bank system was authorized.

A corporation tax was adopted, which is an important source of revenue, and a new and effective method of assisting the Government in supervising corporations.

Two battleships were added to the navy.

A Bureau of Mines was established.

Seventy million acres of the public domain were legally withdrawn from entry.

Twenty million dollars in bonds were authorized to complete reclamation projects, after a board of army engineers now at work should complete its investigation of existing projects.

Enlarged appropriations were made to survey public lands.

A definite commitment was made against the "pierce-arrow" or "pork-barrel" system of river and harbor improvement.

A peace commission was authorized.

An investigation into business methods of conducting the Government was begun.

The appropriations for the current year were cut $26,000,000 below the appropriations of the year before.

Revision of the Tariff.

The tariff was revised without the usual disturbance of business. Because of its reduction of tariff rates, its maximum and minimum provisions, the free trade it secures for the Philippines, its fine revenue-producing qualities, the Payne law is coming generally to be recognized as a most creditable bill.

Our platform promised to revise the tariff immediately and also to revise it to accord with the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad. Those two promises proved somewhat inconsistent, in that immediate revision conforming to such a plan was impracticable, because the information needed was not at once available; but the inconsistency was met by the provision of a tariff board to report the necessary facts.

The new tariff commission, for the work of which $250,000 was appropriated, has already completed its preliminary report, and the commission is now at work on its final report. I have authorized the chairman to make a public statement of the purposes and methods of the commission, but I have directed him not to make that statement until after the election, because in so far as possible I desire the tariff commission from its very inception to be kept free from the vicissitudes of partisan politics, so that it will gain the respect and the confidence of the whole country, regardless of party lines.

Finally since the bill passed I have recommended and heartily every Republican candidate for Congress and Republican state platforms generally have declared that hereafter when the tariff shall be revised by Republicans, it shall be revised on schedule at a time, instead of by a general revision of the entire tariff.

We have provided the machinery for a further revision on the protective principle when the necessary information has been secured. In my judgment, the country will hesitate before intrusting a further revision of the tariff to the Democratic party on free trade or tariff for revenue principles. That party has not, within our memory, revised the tariff without creating profound business disturbance, and its revision was immediately repudiated by the country after a short but bitter experience.

Achievements of 18 Months.

I have thus summarily stated the Republican accomplishments of a short eighteen months. Everything foreshadowed in our platform, however, there was not time to consider and carry out.

We agreed to adopt measures for the improvement of our foreign merchant marine, which everyone will admit to be in a condition of decadence disgraceful to a country of our size and power.

We agreed to pass a law embodying the best practice in the issuing of injunctions without notice. When this be carried out it will, I believe, do much to remove a fruitful source of political discussion, which arouses prejudice and class feeling and which is fed by ignorance and misunderstanding.

We agreed to provide for the making of limited traffic agreements but with interstate railways subject to the approval of the commission.

Then there is badly needed legislation for additional safety appliances, to refer to the bills pending in Congress for the Government inspection of locomotive boilers and for the elimination by Government direction of danger to employes from overhead and sideway projections.

We need the enactment of laws authorizing the disposition of coal, phosphate oil, and gas lands of the Government, and the waterpower sites owned by the Government along streams in which there is valuable water power, now uncontrolled and unappropriated, under leases or grants which shall induce investment of private capital in the development of these lands, but shall continue the Government as ultimate controller of the properties, with an equitable provision for readjustment of terms at comparatively short periods. Indeed, the affirmative part of the whole policy of conservation awaits action, and the Republican party is pledged to give this subject the attention it deserves.

We need a new government for Alaska, with laws properly protecting the government domain in that vast empire.

We agreed to supplement and strengthen the anti-trust law in so far as it might seem necessary. Existing anti-trust laws have been vigorously enforced.

We are hoping for a readjustment of our relations with Canada that shall bring the two countries into a closer commercial union, beneficial to both.

Finally, we are committed to an elimination of the defects in our banking and currency system, with respect to which the Monetary Commission has accumulated much material.

A party of true progress is not a party of radicalism. It is not a party of unbridled conservatism. A progressive Republican is one who recognizes existing and concrete evils and who is in favor of practical and definite steps to eradicate them. Now, what are the specific evils that have roused our people? I believe that they have been growing in this country for years and years, and they can be briefly stated thus:

First—The corrupt control of legislative and governmental agencies for the establishment, maintenance and enjoyment of unjust privileges by individuals or corporate wealth.

Evils Confronting the Public.

To make this control effective, there have been organized and maintained corrupt machines within both parties which break the current of communication and responsible action between the people and those who are elected to serve and represent them.

Second—Combinations of capital in industrial business, generally brought together for the ostensible and commendable purpose of reducing the cost of production and distribution, have too often had the real purpose of suppressing competition, controlling prices, and maintaining monopoly.

Everyone who is frank must admit that great progress has been made in fighting these evils. Fifteen years ago the liberty of the people to use natural resources were freely disregarded. The natural resources of the nation are now in the way of being conserved for the people who are the ultimate owners of such resources and ought to remain so.

Fifteen years ago the general control of legislation by corporate influence and corruption was far greater than it is to-day. The crusade initiated by Mr. Roosevelt and carried on during his term of office has resulted, first, in arousing the entire community to the necessity for reform, and, second, in inducing many corporation managers to abandon methods that were objectionable and to have politics to other hands.

Praises New York Action.

I cannot close these remarks without a reference to the action taken by our party in the State of New York during the present week. The cause of Republicanism has been heartened by a brave declaration of principle and by the nomination of an exceptionally satisfactory ticket, with a candidate for governor of the highest character and ability. Henry L. Stimson has been the powerful ally of good government in this administration and the last. He has been a terror to evil doers. I rejoice in his selection.

It is impossible in such a government as ours to lose deserved popular approval through misrepresentation and misunderstanding. But instances of this kind are not permanent. Let us constantly remember that if we stick to our principles, and insist upon efficiency in government, if we perform our promises in the future as in the past when opportunity offered, if we stand shoulder to shoulder in the determination to carry on the work of progress as we have undertaken it, because we are an effective and progressive party, because we know how practically to carry on government, because we have principles by which we propose to stand in the face of victory or defeat, we shall certainly be continued in power.

"I AM TO MARRY MISS DEACON," DECLARES MR. PEABODY

Boston Clubman Disposes of All Rumors of an Engagement Broken Off.

GEORGE LEE PEABODY, the Boston banker, clubman and athlete, last night at his home in Salem, put to rest finally the rumor that his engagement to the beautiful Miss Edith Deacon of Newport had been broken off by making this emphatic statement to a reporter of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"If there was a report of the breaking of the engagement between myself and Miss Deacon, it was unwarranted and untrue. We shall marry, perhaps in January, certainly near that time."

About the same time that Mr. Peabody made this statement Miss Deacon was reached by telephone and asked about the report that the proposed marriage was off. She confirmed Mr. Peabody's statement with as much emphasis as he had used. Miss Deacon said:

"I most certainly will marry Mr. Peabody and that's all the report is worth. People may say whatever they please to the contrary, but one wedding will take place this Winter—just as soon as Mr. Peabody fully recovers from an illness that has been troubling him. That may be about January or before."

Miss Deacon now in Boston.

Miss Deacon, accompanied by a maid, has been in Boston for some time. Yesterday she and Mr. Peabody enjoyed an automobile spin. It was said that Mr. Peabody, who was overcome by the heat in the Summer while playing tennis at Newport, was getting along very well and that it is only a matter of a short time until he is thoroughly well again. It was reported when Mr. Peabody was sick at the Beverly Hospital last July that there would never be a marriage. When on one occasion Miss Deacon was permitted to see her fiance, at the hospital, for a brief ten minutes, the first time she had seen him after being stricken, she told relatives and friends she would marry Mr. Peabody on his sick bed if he asked her.

No one has attempted to interfere with the marriage, which was set for September 15, save the physician attending Mr. Peabody in the hospital in Beverly. He merely advised Mr. Peabody not to marry on the date set because of his illness, both the patient and Miss Deacon decided to abide by the doctor's advice.

Few Friends at Wedding.

The wedding will be attended by relatives and a few friends, with Miss Sadie Jones as maid of honor. Who will marry the couple is known only to Miss Deacon and Mr. Peabody. He is a divorced man and Miss Deacon a devout Catholic, at [illegible] attending St. Mary's church, when in Newport.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Crowninshield Peabody, the first wife of Mr. Peabody, who was divorced without the hint of scandal of any kind, told her friends in Newport this Summer when she heard the report of the forthcoming marriage of Miss Deacon to Mr. Peabody that the girl would get the best man that ever lived.

"Miss Deacon is the most lovely woman I ever knew," declared the former Mrs. Peabody. "Mr. Peabody is the best man that ever lived. Sorry that we couldn't get together. I am sorry that the wedding had to be postponed because of George's illness."

MRS. TYTUS, WHO ASKED A RAILROAD FOR OLD FIREPLACE

MRS. ROBERT DE PEYSTER TYTUS

MOVES ENTIRE WALL TO GET FIREPLACE

TYRINGHAM, Oct. 1.—Two railroads aided Mrs. Robb de Peyster Tytus to obtain a coveted ancient mantel and fireplace for Ashintully, her new home on one of the hills in this beautiful southern Berkshire country.

The fireplace and mantel were once in the sitting-room of her great-grandmother, the wife of Dr. Timothy Childs of Pittsfield. The fireplace is of cavernous size, and above it is a soft pine, highly-polished and hand-carved mantel of great antiquity and beauty.

The fireplace and mantel came from the old Childs mansion in Pittsfield, now or recently occupied by Mrs. Andrew T. Mink[illegible], widow of a veteran conductor on the Boston & Albany road. That road now owns the Childs homestead, and to get permission from that corporation to remove the whole side of the sitting room and transplant it to Ashintully was not an easy task. Railroads are apt to be wound up in red tape in such a transaction.

Representative Robb de Peyster Tytus is a warm friend of President Mellen of the New Haven road and through him learned that the Boston & Albany owned the old Childs house. With such a friend at court as President Mellen, Mr. and Mrs. Tytus were able to present their wish to the highest executive circle of the B. & A., and were aided there by such railroad powers as General Manager Hustis and Superintendent James H. Truden.

Both understood the sentiment which actuated Representative Tytus and his wife in wishing to have placed in her sitting room what had once been the wall of the similar apartment of her great-grandmother. In the end all red tape was cut and Mrs. Tytus got permission to remove the side of the room she wanted. Carpenters carefully took it out and Mrs. Tytus superintended its being reset as a wall in Ashintully.

BUBIER, DIVORCED, WEDS MISS PATON

Brookline Man Gives Society a Surprise by New Hampshire Ceremony.

A sequel to the Henry H. Bubier divorce case, which agitated Boston, Brookline and Swampscott society less than a month ago, comes in the marriage of Henry H. Bubier to Miss M. Idella Paton, who was named by the first Mrs. Bubier in her bill of divorce against Bubier.

Bubier and Miss Paton were married in Nashua, N. H., Friday, by City Clerk Cyr of that city. The marriage was not known among Bubier's friends till yesterday.

The first Mrs. Bubier obtained her divorce decree nisi from Bubier September 8 last. By the terms the first Mrs. Bubier cannot wed in Massachusetts till the decree is made final six months hence, nor can Bubier wed in this State for two years. This two-year difficulty was easily side-stepped by Bubier by going to New Hampshire for his marriage ceremony.

Henry H. Bubier comes from the wealthy Bubier family of Lynn, which rolled up a fortune in the leather business. He now lives in Brookline and is interested in State Street financial affairs. He is a member of the Boston Athletic and other clubs. With him in his Brookline home lives his mother, Mrs. Emma C. Bubier. His sister, Miss Jennie Bubier, is known through the country as "The Blind Librarian."

The first Mrs. Bubier was formerly Miss Alice D. McKay, daughter of D. H. McKay, a contractor. She was married to Bubier in January, 1902. Two children were born to them, Henry Hooker Bubier, Jr., now six years old, and Donald M. Bubier, four years old.

A month ago Brookline society was stirred by news that Mrs. Bubier had filed suit for divorce, naming Miss M. Idella Paton of No. 76 Farragut road, Swampscott, in her bill of complaint.

Bubier met Miss Paton last Summer at the Cliff Club, Marblehead. Miss Paton became a member of Mme. Schumann-Heink's company and attained some prominence on the musical stage.

'3 TIMES AND OUT,' RULES MR. ROURKE

Superintendent of Streets Rourke yesterday made public a new set of rules. The most important thing about the announcement is the superintendent's determination to discharge an employee whom he finds it necessary to suspend temporarily for the third time. The discharge works automatically with the third suspension. Referring to the condition of the department at the time he took charge Superintendent Rourke said:

"I find there is no uniform method in the department for suspending men, nor does there seem to be any limit to the number of temporary suspensions which an employe may have placed against him and still remain in the service. In the future, after two temporary suspensions for just cause, on the third offense requiring suspension, the employee should be discharged."

Regarding the method of applying the punishment of temporary suspension the superintendent says: "Any violation of the rules and regulations of the department by any employe which requires more than a verbal reprimand from his superior should be punished by temporary suspension."

CHAUFFEUR COURSE FOR HIGH SCHOOL

John Hays Hammond Pays Bill for Instructing Boys at Gloucester.

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 1.—"Chauffeur" is the name of a brand new course at Gloucester High School.

The object of the course is to teach boys to become expert chauffeurs. It is free. John Hays Hammond, the rich mining expert and patron of education, pays all expenses.

Mr. Hammond is weary of ill-trained and careless chauffeurs. He thinks Gloucester boys have "the stuff" in them to become adept at the steering wheel. Hence his offer to Gloucester School Committee, of which he is a member, to take any ten boys in the senior class this Fall and pay the cost of automobile lessons for them.

Ten boys have been chosen. They will begin lessons soon. They will receive instruction two afternoons a week for four months. It will cost Mr. Hammond $40 for each boy, $400 in all.

Mr. Hammond will pay $500 in case of unavoidable accident to any boy during his course of instruction. But accidents are not figured upon. The boys are to be careful.

The School Committee has accepted the automobile offer. Dr. Thomas Conant of the committee will look after Mr. Hammond's interests in the matter.

DRIVER IS HURT AS RACER RUNS AWAY

One man was injured and scores of men, women and children came near being trampled on by a maddened horse which broke during a race and ran madly through several streets in Dorchester late yesterday afternoon.

The injured man is Frederick Eldridge of No. 8 Angell street, Dorchester, who is suffering from a broken collarbone.

The horse's name is Kremella, a bay gelding, owned by A. M. Johnson, a well-known real estate man in the Dorchester district. The animal was entered in a number of races at the Franklin Park Speedway under the auspices of the Dorchester Driving Club, and was driven by Frederick Eldridge. He was attached to a sulky.

In Blue Ribbon Final.

Kremella was rated in the Class E trotting and pace, and was running against Carl C., also a bay gelding, which was driven by F. O'Hearn, its owner.

The race had gone three heats, Carl C. winning two of them, and there was one more to go for the prize, a blue ribbon. The horses were started off by Frederick Haddock.

When the horses reached about half the distance of the last lap the right hand rein attached to Kremella snapped, causing Driver Eldridge to fall backwards out of the sulky.

Smashes Into Carriage.

The horse dashed madly out of the speedway, out on to Helen street, down that thoroughfare to Bernard street, to Harvard street, barely missing trampling on a number of laborers who were working in the street, and collided with a carriage owned by Warren M. Colb of No. 84 Aspinwall road, smashing the rear seat of the carriage and damaging the rear right wheel. This caused the animal to stop and walk into his stall in the stable attached to the Eldridge homestead, where he is kept.

Patrolman Patrick J. Williams, the mounted officer at the Speedway, made several unsuccessful attempts to keep up with the horse and catch him, as did also a number of citizens.

Mr. Eldridge was attended at the Speedway by Dr. McDonald and later taken to his home and put to bed, where he was treated by the same doctor.

LOVE FEAST AT OYSTER BAY.

Nassau Delegates Discuss Victory at Sagamore Hill.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Theodore Roosevelt had the Nassau delegates to the Saratoga convention up to Sagamore Hill to-day and they had a corking love feast. The delegates went in automobiles and there was a cluster of motor cars on the ex-President's driveway. The Nassau men had luncheon and then swapped reminiscences of the convention until far into the afternoon. Colonel Roosevelt was in fine humor. He had recovered from the cold that he brought back from Saratoga. The delegates laughed gleefully as they recalled how the colonel had routed his adversaries in the convention. Colonel Roosevelt would have nothing to say on the nomination of John A. Dix as the Democratic candidate for Governor. He has every confidence that "Harry" Stimson, as he calls him, will win.

PAYNE MUM ON FIGHT.

Father of Tariff Bill Won't Discuss "Vindication" Battle.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Sereno E. Payne, sage of Auburn, father of the much discussed Payne-Aldrich traiff bill and candidate for reel ection to Congress as a vindication of the wisdom of that law, is in Washington on "Departmental business." "The Republicans of New York are together since the Saratoga convention," said Mr. Payne. "The tariff law speaks for itself. It has done what I claimed for it. We will win in New York on our platform and endorsement of the tariff and the administration of President Taft."

"What about the fight on you in your district?" Mr. Payne was asked.

"Umph—" growled Mr. Payne, as he moved away.

METZ AND SHEPARD SPLIT.

Bickering at Rochester Convention Parts Old Friends.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—As a result of the bickerings over the Democratic slate for State officers at Rochester, Former Comptroller Herman A. Metz and Edward M. Shepard are reported to have parted bitter enemies after a friendship of twenty years. Mr. Shepard held Metz responsible for the refusal of the Democratic leaders to accept his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination and in retaliation Mr. Shepard prevented the naming of Metz as the candidate for State comptroller.

Car Service Changes.

During track construction at Causeway and Canal streets, commencing at midnight last night, all East Cambridge Sollay square via Portland, Sudbury, returning Cornhill, Washington, Merrimac, Portland and Causeway streets. The North Station cars will be run north via Merrimac, Portland and Causeway streets, returning Canal street.

SOARS 9,121 FEET FOR NEW RECORD

Wynmalen Sets Another World Figure by Wonderful Flight in France.

MOURMELON, France, Oct. 1.—M. Wynmalen, the aviator, established a new world's record for altitude to-day, rising to a height of 9,121 feet.

The earlier best mark of 8,409 feet was made by the late George Chavez.

Wynmalen rose until his motor failed him, and then made a perilous descent. He suffered intensely and his exciting experience was similar to that of Leon Morane, who on September 3 ascended 8,271 feet, establishing a record that stood until eclipsed by Chavez.

Wynmalen started at 6:28 o'clock and warmed up by circling the aerodome several times, testing his engine. When everything was working shipshape he gradually rose in a spiral course. At an altitude of 2500 metres he encountered biting cold. His ears and fingers were numbed and an icy gale that slashed his face checked and at times drove back the machine. Nevertheless, the aviator continued to struggle upward.

At a height of 2,760 metres (9120) feet the motor stopped and Wynmalen found that his fuel was exhausted.

There was nothing left for him to do but to plane down to the earth. This was accomplished in 18 minutes, but the graduated descent required a battle with a wind that threatened to crush the biplane to the ground. The airman landed safely, but was thoroughly exhausted.

An examination then showed that the carbureter had been frozen at the high altitude, thus crippling the power of the machine. The flight was official and the record will stand.

OLD STATE HOUSE BREAKS NEW LAW!

The Old State House was the first one to violate the new public drinking cup law.

While the Old State House might be considered as old enough to obey the law and the statutes, it is a painful fact that, when the new law went into effect yesterday, there was a public drinking cup attached to a chain and hanging over the faucet of the marble wash basin on the second floor.

Later in the day word was telephoned to the office of the State Board of Health that the chained cups at the South Station were still in use.

The new law, in effect October 1, makes it a misdemeanor to maintain a common drinking vessel of any kind in any public building, institution, hotel, theatre, public hall, school, railroad station or train or ferry boat. If water is to be furnished, it must be drunk from a "bubble" fountain or from individual drinking cups.

Railroads will have to serve water from individual cups in this State hereafter, whatever usage they make in other States.

In most of the hotels the public drinking fountain has been removed. It is rather difficult to get a drink of water free in a hotel now, unless one asks a bartender for it.

In the State House individual paraffine cups have been installed. They cost the State one-half cent apiece.

An interesting point has been raised concerning how the new law will be construed in regard to communion cups. The State Board of Health hopes the churches will take that matter up themselves.

CRIME DECREASES.

Court Records for the Year Made Known.

A decrease in crime, although an increase in the actual number of offences of all kinds, is shown in the annual report of the clerk of the Boston Municipal Court for the past year.

The total number of offences brought before the Municipal Court in its various sessions the past year is 43,054. For the year previous the total number of offences was 42,318 or 736 less than last year.

But, when the nature of offences is considered, it is shown that the more serious ones decreased. The gain over the preceding year is on lesser offences. For instance, there were 31,773 cases of drunkenness heard in court last year, compared with 29,094 heard the year before. This was an increase of 2,679 in that class of offence alone.

The past year there were 2,287 cases of larceny before the court. The year previous had 2,464. This shows a decrease of nearly 200 cases in this class for the past year.

For violations of the ordinance regarding the Lord's Day there were 706 cases last year and only 193 this. Last year there were 266 vagrants brought into court, while but 193 were summoned this year. Neglect of family increased, there being thirty-six more cases this year than last.

Among the offences seldom before the court were such as: abandoning child, four; conspiracy, one; kidnapping, one; contempt of court, two; escape and aiding, one; violation of fire escape laws, one; bucket shop keeping, two; unregistered pharmacist, one; refusing to move vessel out of lock of Charles River Dam, one; selling cigarettes to minor, two.

BOSTON HORSE LOST.

Prince Hampton Only Finishes Fourth in Steeplechase.

Prince Hampton, the six-year-old bay steeplechaser, by Sandringham and out of Dorothy Hampton, owned by A. Henry Higginson of this city, was a starter in the rich Canadian classic, the Hendrie Steeplechase Handicap, at the Woodbine track, Toronto, yesterday, but could only finish fourth. The local fencer tired in the three-mile journey, and had but little left at the end.

Expansionist, the nine-year-old chestnut son of Norwood, who was in prime form, won the race, and was rated at 9 to 5 straight, 2 to 1 place and 4 to 5.

VETO SITE FOR SCHOOL.

Commissioners Turn Down Plan for Roxbury Building.

The Schoolhouse Commissioners have vetoed the suggestion that the new Elementary School in the Lewis District, Roxbury, be erected in Washington Park, because there is strong objection among the people of Roxbury to the use of any part of the pleasure ground for that purpose.

Cyrus L. Plummer of No. [illegible] street, Braintree, dropped dead in [illegible] No. 25 Faneuil Hall Square last night. He was employed as a shoeworker in Boston and was about sixty years old. He is survived by a widow, one daughter and two sons.

Three Cardinals to Aid at Dedication

Church Prelates Will Honor Occasion by Their Presence.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The solemn consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth avenue, one of the finest Gothic edifices in the world, will take place this week. The ceremonies will begin next Wednesday. There will be three cardinals present, Vannutelli of Rome, Gibbons of Baltimore and Logue of Armagh, Ireland. Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis will preach the consecration sermon. Apostolic Delegate Falconio will preside at solemn pontifical vespers in the evening.

Although St. Patrick's has been dedicated to divine worship more than thirty years, it could not be consecrated until it was out of debt, as the law of the Catholic church makes consecration of a building impossible while there was still a chance of its desecration.

Both civic and religious ceremonies will be included in the week's program. One of the features of the celebration will be a solemn pontifical mass in the Cathedral for all the Roman Catholic children of the city. This mass will take place at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. The responses of the mass will be sung by 6,000 of the children of the parochial schools of the diocese, and children will fill the pews of the big Cathedral to hear the mass chanted.

On Friday there will be a solemn pontifical mass for all the religious orders of the diocese. Members of the religious orders of the diocese number more than 30,000, and this event is expected to be one of the most largely attended of the consecration.

The three days' ceremonies will close with a reception to the forty visiting prelates at the Catholic Club, at which Cardinal Vannutelli will be the guest of honor.

PLANS APPROVED FOR NEW FISH PIER

The negotiations between the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commissioners and the directors of the Boston Fish Market Corporation for a new fish pier to be built on the east side of the present Commonwealth pier in South Boston have been approved by the stockholders of the corporation and by the Governor and Council and the commission will close the contract for the construction of the pier immediately.

The Boston Fish Market Corporation stockholders met yesterday on T wharf and unanimously approved of the plans presented for their sanction by the directors, which was the last step to be taken in the negotiations.

The new pier will not be ready for occupancy before 1913, and probably not before October in that year, but when completed it will be the finest fish pier in the world. It will be of solid masonry or concrete construction.

Will Be 1,200 Feet Long.

The pier will be 1,200 feet long and 300 feet wide, or about five times as large as T wharf. There will be a basin 150 feet wide and 25 feet deep at low water on the West side of the pier and one 400 feet wide and the same depth on the East side. There will be a breakwater at the Easterly edge of the East basin where fishing vessels may lie up in stress of weather.

A roadway 100 feet wide, with railway tracks, will extend down the middle of the pier, on either side of which will be three-story concrete fish houses. It is proposed to erect a large administration building on the outer end of the pier, which will contain a museum, an aquarium, club rooms, meeting rooms, etc.

Instead of unloading from the vessel into wooden carts, it is proposed to have some sort of an overhead arrangement for conveying fish from the vessel to the various fish houses.

Outlay of $1,500,000.

Stores and offices for ship chandlers, sailmakers, provision men, eating houses, commission men and the other establishments dependent upon the fishing industry will be built.

The new pier will probably cost more than $1,500,000. The corporation will expend nearly half a million on its buildings and the State and city will probably spend more than a million in building the pier, laying sewers and water pipes, dredging the basins and extending the streets.

DENY LORIMER TESTIMONY.

Rumor Move Against Witness on Charge of Perjury.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Letters and telegrams which directly impeached the testimony given by Michael J. Link yesterday were produced before the United States Senatorial sub-committee investigating the Lorimer bribery charges to-day. A sensational rumor was put in circulation to the effect that States Attorney Wayman would immediately seek a new indictment against Link charging the Mitchell County "farmer statesman" with perjury. State Senator Joseph S. Clark of Vandalia testified that he had voted for Lorimer because of personal preference and not because he was bribed. He denied every having been approached.

FIGHT OVER SHERIFF.

Insurgent Democrats Oppose Endorsing Republican Candidate.

Tuesday evening the Democrats will meet in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, and nominate candidates for district attorney and sheriff. Although the meeting place of the convention is in a spiritual atmosphere, there is liable to be some trouble, largely caused by an insurgent wing of the Democracy which is opposed to renominating Sheriff Fred P. Seavey. The district attorney convention will be held at 7 o'clock. District Attorney Pelletier will be renominated with no opposition. The county convention which will nominate the sheriff is slated to be called to order at 8:30 P. M.

Woman Dies From Lockjaw.

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Honora Corcoran, forty-two, and one of the best known of Brockton women, died suddenly at her home on Chestnut street, to-day, of lockjaw. A few weeks ago she received a small scratch on her arm in bumping against the old stump of a tree. Tetanus resulted.

BOY, 11, YOUNGEST IN BOSTON HIGH SCHOOL

Louis R. Keane of Roxbury Also Leader of Athletic Companions.

SCARCELY eleven years old, Louis R. Keane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Keane of No. 104 Cedar street, Roxbury, has enrolled as the youngest student to enter a Boston high school. Louis, who is an athletic youth and not a grind as athletics call smart school children, has an enviable record in the various classrooms in which he has been a student.

Louis was born September 27, 1899. When five years old he went to the Bartlett Street Primary School, and in his very first year of schooling showed an aptness for study as well as play. He next went to the Dudley Grammar School, and here also he showed proficiency in the class rooms.

He showed such ability in the second year in the Dudley school that he was promoted to the fourth grade, thus getting a double promotion. Last year, when he was in the seventh grade, he was urged by Miss Antonette Getchel, his teacher, to take the examinations for high school. Sept. 14 and 15 last, Louis took high school entrance examinations and passed. He is now at the branch school of the English High School on Winthrop street.

"I like arithmetic and history better than the other studies which I have taken up," said the young student at his home yesterday, "but I hope to find the studies which I have mapped out for my course in the high school to be as interesting as those which I studied in the grammar school."

Louis is manager of the Alerts, one of the fastest twelve-year-old baseball teams in Roxbury. He plays first base. When football season comes around, Louis is always one of the first to appear in uniform for practice and arouses enthusiasm among his companions. This year he plans to play fullback on a team which is being organized among his companions.

French, algebra, English and ancient history are the studies which young Keane has selected for his first year's work in high school.

LORD BISHOP AT ALBANY.

Noted English Churchman Was Guest of Bishop Lawrence.

Bishop John Wordsworth of Salisbury, England, left Boston last night for Albany where he will preach in the cathedral to-day. From Albany he will go to Cincinnati to attend the general convention of the Episcopal Church. He will lecture at the Sewanee College in Tennessee before going to Chicago to deliver seven lectures. While in Boston he was the guest of Bishop Lawrence.

GUILD, HOME AGAIN, FULL OF PRAISES FOR MEXICO

FORMER GOVERNOR CURTIS GUILD, JR., just back from Mexico, where he was sent as a special ambassador from this Government to attend the Centennial Anniversary of that nation's freedom, says the country is wonderfully prosperous, that President Diaz has the confidence of the people and that the representatives of this country were able to thoroughly dispel any idea that may have prevailed there that this government would interfere in any way with the republic to the south of us.

Incidentally, Former Governor Guild tells of an unusual example of courtesy shown to him when he practically got stranded at the National Capital in the midst of 100,000 ... through the mistake of a ... r. When the immense crowd ... that he was headed for the palace ... lane for him, which is more than ... ve been done in a big city in this country.

In the course of his talk the former Governor said:

"The celebration by Mexico of the Centennial Anniversary was in every sense of the word a success. The Mexican Revolution was inaugurated by a village priest, Miguel Hidalgo, who summoned his congregation by ringing his church bell and led them out from his village, Dolores, with a battle-cry called the 'Grito de Dolores.' Every year on the anniversary of this event the President of the Republic rings this same church bell, the Independence Bell of Mexico, now suspended on the front of the National Palace and repeats at the same hour, 11 o'clock at night, the old battle-cry which is echoed by a crowd of tens of thousands who assemble in the great square. There are, of course, fireworks, music and the most brilliant decorations.

The celebration consisted, however, not merely in this annual ceremony, but in a long series of public audiences and ceremonies, balls, banquets, garden parties, but particularly in the dedication of great public buildings and public works for the good of the entire Mexican people.

Mexicans Were Appreciative.

The United States was not merely represented by a Special Ambassador as well as by the regular Ambassador. It was also represented by a delegation authorized by Congress to represent the people of the United States. This delegation consisted of three members of the United States Senate, three members of the House of Representatives and three delegates at large, selected by the President.

"Congress has never before authorized any such representation and the compliment was keenly appreciated by the Mexican people as well as by the Government. The Chairman of this Congressional delegation, Congressman David J. Foster of Vermont, aroused a special enthusiasm at a dinner given by the members of the Mexican Congress in which he in a most statesmanlike fashion proclaimed in unequivocal terms the attitude of friendship and non-interference, not merely of the Executive but of the legislative branch of the government of the United States.

"President Diaz in thirty years has raised his country from a distracted mass of heterogeneous factions with no credit and practically no banks or railroads or public works into a nation of the first class, whose credit compares favorably with that of many of the great European nations, whose army is well disciplined, its artillery being in some points superior to ours, whose public education is increasing and improving every year and whose conditions of law and order even in the wildest parts of the country command respect and admiration.

"Diaz Erect As a Pine."

"The President, though eighty years of age, is as erect as a pine, with the square jaw of a strong man, oddly enough combined with a pair of the kindest eyes in the world. He is taciturn rather than talkative, but in his conversation, not merely forcible and dignified, but in his own home and among his friends genial and witty. He speaks, however, only in the Spanish language.

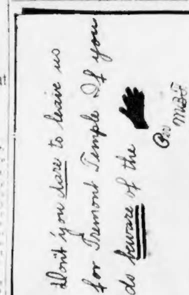
"President Diaz moves about freely among his people. I have seen his open carriage passing at a walk through a crowd so close to the President that he could easily have been touched by the hand of the multitude.

"On the night of the celebration by the liberty bell, a stupid coachman, taking the wrong direction, became involved in a crowd that was said to number a hundred thousand people in the midst of the great National Plaza. He was unable to go forward or backward. The representative of the United States, who was alone in this carriage, alighted in this mass of human beings, hoping to be able to reach the palace on foot with the help of a little football tactics. It was quite unnecessary. A few words to the nearest who were actually blocking the wheels to the effect that an official personage was seeking to make his way to the palace to assist in their celebration was all that was necessary. The crowd of its own accord opened a lane through its midst, the word being passed on from man to man, and the American in his evening dress passed through the centre of this vast mass of human beings, spontaneously making way for him without escort, a wonderful evidence of the genuine courtesy of a people to a foreign guest.

"I think that the American delegation, fortunately representing as it did, not merely the executive but the legislative branch of the Government, has succeeded in dispelling even the suspicion that the American people or the American Government have any wish or desire to interfere with the independence of Mexico or with her institutions in any possible way. We tried at least to give them to understand that the relations between the two nations should be as those between two friends on an equal footing with mutual regard and respect. The Mexican Government and the Mexican people certainly showed to us their desire was not merely to be good friends, but the best of good neighbors."

Mr. Guild, after a few hours' stay in Boston, left for New York, where he presides over the convention of the National Forestry Association, which opens its sessions in that city to-morrow.

NOTE OF WARNING FROM "BLACK HAND," AND BARITONE SINGER



NELSON RAYMOND

BLACK HAND NOTE JARS FOUR SINGERS

THE Lotus Quartet, which has a melodious collection of musical notes, now has an unexpected note added to its list—a Black Hand note.

It reads thus:

"Don't you dare to leave us for Tremont Temple. If you do, BEWARE of the BLACK HAND.

Per M. B. F."

The Lotus Quartet has been singing at the Warren Avenue Baptist Church for the last three years. It is a notable group of singers. It made a tremendous hit at the Chapman-Alexander revival meeting last Winter.

When the Rev. W. W. Bustard went from this city to the Euclid Avenue Baptist church in Cleveland—the famous Rockefeller church—he tried to engage the Lotus Quartet to move to Cleveland and sing for John D. Rockefeller and other parishioners of the Euclid Avenue edifice. But the quartet sets its price at $10,000 and this was too much, even for the Standard Oil millions.

Will Change Next April.

However, the Lotus Quartet did accept two months ago an offer from Tremont Temple. They go to Tremont Temple next April. Announcement of this coming departure of the Lotus Quartetters from the Warren Avenue Church caused deep regret among the latter congregation. The quartet received all kinds of requests to remain at Warren avenue.

Now comes the Black Hand note.

It is taken for granted by the members of the quartet that the Black Hand epistle is to frighten them into remaining at the Warren Avenue Church. Some earnest friends of the quartet, however, kindly suggest that the note may really be from the neighborhood of Tremont Temple. The inference from this suggestion, of course, is that the Black Hander is trying to scare the quartet away from Tremont Temple. But that is a mean insinuation, says the quartet.

Thinks It Is a Joke.

Nelson Raymond, the baritone, says:

"We think it only a joke. Without a doubt it is only that, or perhaps the method some one has taken to tell us that we will be missed at the Warren Street Church.

"It is certainly not meant to scare us out, but is rather a friendly note. We have received many, of course, since our plans became known, and this is only one of the series. This is the only anonymous communication we have received, however.

"We have enemies in our business, but none who would take this way of showing it. It is a purely friendly joke."

The quartet members wonder who "M. B. F." is. Someone said the initials stand for: "May Be Funny."

The Lotus singers say: "May Be Foolish."

PUT MUTT AND JEFF ON A 5-FOOT SHELF

Here's Your Chance to Get This Noted Comedy Team for Your Library.

Speaking man to man, and entirely regardless of whether the Democrats pick a plute or one of the common folks on Thursday, have you ever noticed how tired one gets of "The Apology, Phaedo and Crito" of Plato?

The first ten chapters aint so bad, where it tells about Mame meeting Herbie for the first time down to Condit's, but after that there's no action.

It's the same thing with "Areopigitica," you might as well say, and with "The Sayings of Epictetus," who, when all is said and done, merely pinched a lot of James J. Morton's best stuff.

What is one to do, therefore, on a rainy night, with the wires down and no chance in the world to make up a five-handed game of button-button-who-kepps-the-post-office?

Bud Fisher in a Book.

The question has agitated the world of belles-lettres for centuries. It remained unanswered until the Ball Publishing Company, of Boston, Mass., decided to put Bud Fisher behind the—or, in other words, between the covers.

"The Mutt and Jeff Cartoons," just out in covers long enough and broad enough and almost heavy enough to take the place of father's slipper, fills a long-felt want.

If you will glance casually, now, at your five-foot shelf, you will notice a crevice—that is to say, an ugly opening—between Mister Cervantes's "Don Quixote" and Jack Bunyon's "Pilgrim's Progress."

How Dr. Eliot could have evolved such a plan of juxtaposition is beyond the ken of some of his best friends. Cervantes and Bunyon vis a vis! Parbleu! Angora!

However, there's the opening, and Mr. Bud Fisher's book is just in time. "The Mutt and Jeff Cartoons," in a nifty cover will be just the thing to slam Willie with, makes up a happy medium between Cervantes and Bunyon. Mutt and Jeff is a book entirely unlike "Don Quixote"—O, my, entirely! O, my, I assure you! and at the same time Mutt and Jeff—take my word for it, Madame—is no more like "Pilgrim's Progress" than the show at the Old Howard this week is like a Battle of Gettysburg cyclorama.

One of Mutt's Best.

The cartoons cover a period of approximately one year in the life of Mutt and twelve months for Jeff. They include some of the very best of the Fisher drawings. There is, for instance, that lesson in perfect politeness, wherein a beautiful young woman approaches Mr. Mutt and says:

"Pardon, sir, would you mind holding my dog a moment while I run into this store?"

"I'd hold a tiger by the tongue for you," says our hero, spoken like a gentleman.

There is, again, that other incident, describing Mr. Mutt's experiences as a member of the finest police force in the world:

"Say, Sergeant, a couple of guys just robbed a safe on my beat. I was going to pinch them, but they wouldn't believe I was a policeman!"

It is a lively work of art, this, with something doing on every page. It describes in detail the trip of Mr. Mutt and Mr. Jeff to San Francisco, on the occasion of the late unpleasantness. It's a good book to take to bed with you—when you don't want to sleep. Stick "the Mutt and Jeff Cartoons" into that crevice in the Five Foot Shelf and you won't feel so sore about it.

How to Get Book.

And, now the question is, how do we get "the Mutt and Jeff Cartoons," Professor?

Somebody please ask me that question. Thank you!

After all, it is very simple. All you have to do is live a blameless life, vote the Prohibition, Socialist, Democratic, Republican or Social Labor ticket, take the BOSTON AMERICAN every day, clip seven coupons of consecutive dates from the daily or SUNDAY BOSTO NAMERICAN, and present them with 35 cents at the Mutt and Jeff Curtoon Department, No. 272 Devonshire street. By mail the book will cost 10 cents extra for postage. Mail orders should be addressed to P. O. Box 227, Boston. It will take a day or two to catch up with the mail orders, possibly, so for the love of Mike be reasonable.

JOHN CARMICHAEL DEAD.

For Eighteen eYars Was Truant Officer at Cambridge.

John Carmichael of No. 1541 Cambridge street, Cambridge, died at his home last night, aged seventy-eight years. He was born in Tempo, County Fermagh, Ireland. For forty-eight years he was baggagemaster on the Lowell Division of the Boston & Maine and for the last eighteen years truant officer in Cambridge. He was a prominent church worker, being superintendent of the Sunday school at the Church of the Sacred Heart for fourteen years, and was interested in charities. He leaves besides his widow, four sons and two daughters. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at St. Mary's Church, Cambridgeport.

OPPOSITION TO WALKER.

Veterinarians to Take up Cattle Bureau Appointment.

The Massachusetts Association of eVterinarians will hold a special meeting tomorow night at Young's hotel to discuss the Governor's failuse to reappoint Dr. Austin Peters as the head of the Massachusetts Cattle bureau and the appointment of a layman, Fred Freeland Walker of Burlington, in his place. The veterinarians state that Governor Draper's failure to reappoint Dr. Peters was equivalent to ousting him from the place. The argument is made that in opposing Mr. Walker the veterinarians are not personal, but that they feel that it is necessary to appoint a technically trained man to succeed Dr. Peters.

Toadstools Poison Man.

Mistaking toadstools for mushrooms, Frank Ciwolo, 60, of No. 82 Park avenue, Mt. Auburn, Cambridge, is at the Cambridge Hospital in a serious condition. He is unconscious and his name has been placed on the dangerous list.

Woman Bigamist Fined.

QUINCY, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Vivian Lottie Lambert was fined $300 for bigamy by Judge Avery in the district court here today. James Reed, arraigned with her, was fined $100. Both paid the fines. They are negros. About five years ago the womrn married William J. Lambert in Cambridge. Last August she married Reed in the Old Court House in Boston.

Irish League Meeting.

John E. Redmond Branch, United Irish League, will meet this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Armory Hall, No. 63 Warren street, Roxbury. Mark H. Crehan will preside. Action will be taken in connection with the meeting to be adressed by the Irish envoys in Symphony Hall next Sunday.

MAGAZINE PICTURE RESTORES MEMORY

Lawrence Hall of Bradford Is Identified by Relative Whose Photograph He Saw.

Lawrence Hall, a young man of the Bradford district, Haverhill, has identified himself in the Ossining, N. Y. Hospital after being under treatment there for two days for loss of memory.

Hall identified himself by aid of a magazine picture of his cousin, Miss Adelaide Nutting, an instructor in Columbia University, according to dispatches from New York last night.

He was taken to the Ossining Hospital last Thursday from a train which he had boarded in New York. He was sound and well except for inability to recollect even his name or address. He could talk and read intelligently, but could not tell who he was.

On the second day of his hospital treatment he was reading an illustrated magazine. His attention was suddenly riveted upon a portrait of Miss Adelaide Nutting.

"Why, that's a photograph of a cousin of mine," he exclaimed.

This circumstance and a description of the patient were telephoned to Miss Nutting. She said:

"He must be Lawrence Hall of Bradford, Mass."

The name and address were written on a piece of paper and shown to Hall. The patient immediately recollected who he was. He said he was the son of J. S. Hall of No. 157 Main street, Bradford, Mass.

Telegraph information was sent to the home in Bradford. Mrs. Hall left immediately for Ossining.

Lawrence Hall is employed as shipping clerk in a hat factory in Haverhill. He is about thirty-five years old. A few years ago he was severely ill with diphtheria, which left him subject to fainting spells.

He was spending his vacation in New York when seized with the attack which deprived him temporarily of his memory.

JEWS TO WELCOME NEW YEAR MONDAY

With the setting of the sun to-morrow evening, more than 75,000 Jews will assemble in the temples and synagogues of Greater Boston to welcome the New Year, 5671, in the Jewish era. "Rosh Hashonah," as the New Year is known in Hebrew, is welcomed in all of the Jewish temples by the blowing of the ram's horn, or "shofar."

"Rosh Hashonah" is the first of the most important and most generally observed of the Jewish holy days. The season of penitence begins at sundown to-morrow, continuing until a week from Tuesday, which is "Yom Kippur," the Day of Atonement. The penitential season symbolizes the regeneration of religious life among the devout and faithful.

The observances continue in the orthodox synagogues for two days, while in the progressive and reformed congregations the New Year services are held to-morrow night and on Tuesday forenoon.

Rabbi Charles Fleischer will conduct the New Year's services at Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue and Blandford street, to-morrow evening. Rabbi Fleischer will take for his subject to-morrow evening, "Watchman, What of the Night." Tuesday morning his text will be, "A New Beginning."

At Temple Ohabel Shalom, Union Park street, Rabbi M. M. Eichler will preach Monday evening on "Memory and Hope," Tuesday morning on "New Year's Wishes," and Wednesday morning on "Social Responsibility."

Rabbis Wolf Margolies and Solomon J. Friederman, assisted by a cantor and a choir of 150 boys will participate in the services at the Baldwin place synagogue. Thirty different tones will be given on the ram's horn, each typifying a prayer in the ritual.

$128,300,000 FOR NAVY.

Two More Battleships and Two Colliers on the Program.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The total estimates for the naval service during the next fiscal year were announced to-day to be $128,300,000. This stands against appropriations of $137,013,000 for the fiscal year ended last July and $132,384,000 for the present fiscal year.

Besides two battleships and two colliers already announced as the naval program for next year, several vessels of minor class will be asked for including two seagoing tugs. There may be some supplemental estimates submitted later on.

A saving of nearly $10,000,000 will be made in the appropriations for the War Department as a result of the pruning of the estimates by the cabinet. The total appropriations for the current fiscal year amount to $146,000,000 while the estimates for the next fiscal year will aggregate about $137,000,000.

TO OPEN NIGHT SCHOOLS.

Sessions Will Be Resumed All Over City Tomorrow.

The public evening schools of Boston will open to-morrow night.

The schools are distributed over the city. The Central evening high school offers instruction in commercial and classical high school subjects. There are four evening commercial schools in Charlestown, East Boston, Roxbury and South Boston. Civil service preparation will be a feature of the studies at all the high schools. Lowell school mathematics will be a specialty at Central evening high. There are three evening industrial high schools, the Central school, located in the Mechanic Arts High School, Back Bay; one in the old Dearborn school building in Roxbury, and one in the high school building, East Boston. In addition to these there are thirteen evening elementary schools.

AVIATOR CHAVEZ BURIED.

Seven Vans of Floral Tributes at His Funeral.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Seven large vans were insufficient to-day to carry the floral tributes at the funeral of George Chavez, the trans-Alpine aviator who died from injuries sustained in his special flight. The funeral was one of the most imposing ever held in Paris, and was attended by scores of Government and municipal officials. President Fallieres sent a personal representative. Full military honors were accorded the dead aeronaut. Chavez was a Peruvian, and the Peruvian Government cabled that it would pay the expenses of the funeral.

Held on Hold-up Charge.

Frank Wilson, twenty-five, was arraigned in the West Roxbury court yesterday on a charge of larceny from Philip A. Gahm, a restaurant keeper of Sudbury street. Because of the illness of Gahm, who was injured in a tussle with a couple of young men who assailed him at the Forest Hills terminal yesterday, the Government asked for a continuance. Wilson was held in $1,000. Gahm was robbed of $300 during the assault.

PATHETIC LAST NOTE OF MUTE AND BLIND GIRL IS REMARKABLE

THE last letter written by Edith Mabelle Thomas, the brilliant girl who was blind, deaf and dumb, is printed to-day in this newspaper. It is a most remarkable letter, illuminating, instructive—the letter of a girl who couldn't see, who couldn't speak, and who couldn't hear, and yet wanted to know.

She wanted to know about little things in life that normal young folks many times pass over without giving a moment's consideration. Her sightless eyes were interrogation points: her deaf ears listened for the answers to innumerable questions that formed in her brain: her speechless lips were eager to ask about the great world from which she was shut out.

Letter to the Brother.

Miss Thomas died last Monday night in a hospital at Palmer. She was buried on Friday from her home at Cliftondale. On September 4, less than a month ago, she wrote the following letter to her brother:

My dear Brother Ralph,—It is a long time since I wrote you a letter, so I thought I would write a few lines to-day to pass the time away. How are you? I am pretty well. You probably are at home now, as it is Sunday, but I hope you are enjoying yourself just the same.

I have made four tomato pin cushions and four pairs of baby socks, and may make some more of each, which articles I am going to send to a big store in New York, where they sell things made by sightless people. At present I am knitting wristers for an order and am going to send them to a store in Boston for sale next month.

Wrote for Magazine.

Do you know how to play the game of forty-two? I had a piece about it in the September number of the Zeigler Magazine, and it is played with ordinary dominoes. There was a picture of the ordinary domino in it which is made with raised lines and raised round spots for three and six. I have a raised picture of the electric bell and one of the electric telegraph which came in the magazine. It is all very interesting.

I am now reading about the coal mines in Pennsylvania, and there is a raised picture to show where the coal fields are in the eastern part of the state. It is mostly anthracite coal there, and that is the best, because it gives little or no smoke. There is another kind called bituminous, but it is soft where the other is hard.

I like the coat very much that you got for me the time I was home at Christmas, and I meant to thank you but did not have the chance to see you before I went away.

How is Spot? He must be a little bit larger and perhaps fatter since I saw him last. I heard from Mamma that they had sold Jimmy. Does Spot miss him?

Where do they get those boxes of the small fishes they call sardines? I was thinking I might get one or two some time. They are tiny little fishes, I wonder where they are caught? Did you ever catch any when you went fishing? Have you been out fishing this summer yet?

I am going to drop Mamma a postal card to ask her what she is going to do about my watch, which I sent home, as she did not say in her letter whether she got it or not. I am thinking that if I can not buy a new one or get the old one fixed, perhaps a little clock may be cheaper and I might buy one, as I cannot get along without something to tell time on, but I do not know.

Please ask Nellie if she got some pictures and tell her that I want her to write me and tell me what she thought of them and what she is going to do with them.

I have another but smaller magazine which is called the Christian Record and its very interesting too. There are pretty songs and poems in it.

Dog days, you know, will be over tomorrow, as it is the fifth. I often wonder why they call it Dog days? Do you know? If you have a few spare minutes, please sit down and write me a few lines at least. With much love to you and the rest

Your loving sister,
EDITH.

Death Comes Suddenly.

Last Monday night the nurse came in on her nightly rounds, and noticed that Miss Thomas was shaking, as though with cold or excitement. Talking with her fingers the nurse asked her what was the matter.

"Nothing," replied Miss Thomas, "I just can't help shaking."

The nurse bent down to take her pulse, but she could not find it. She tried first one wrist and then the other, then she rang the emergency bell for the house doctor. The doctor came on the instant, but before he and the nurse could reach the girl's bedside she had passed beyond their help or reach. It was a hemorrhage of the brain.

In striking contrast with the long cruel struggle of her pathetic life was the quick, painless release of her harried body to freedom.

Miss Thomas was thirty-one years of age. Diphtheria and scarlet fever attacked her when she was a child of four and left her blind and deaf. When nine years old, little Edith entered Perkins Institution for the Blind in South Boston.

Gradually with the wonderful patience, and almost sublime intuition which those who deal with the deaf and blind seem to possess, the teachers at the Institute taught the little girl how to read and write, and then to master the typewriter.

Dextrous With Her Fingers.

Edith was wonderfully dextrous with her fingers, and soon became an expert at sewing. To the very week of her death, dressing dolls was one of her chief delights. She was a constant reader. She was very fond of history, especially of Irving's "Life of Washington."

Five years ago, a few months before she was to graduate from Perkins, her mother began to notice an increasing nervousness on her part. She was working very hard with her algebra and geometry which were the most difficult for her of any of her studies. Her mother urged her to drop them, and said they were not worth the worry, but Edith in spite of her handicaps, or perhaps all the more because of them, was very ambitious to graduate from her school.

But on the day when proud and happy, her schoolmates were receiving the coveted hard-earned diplomas, Edith lay miles away in a sanitarium in Palmer, burning up with fever, her mind clouded for the time, her indomitable will power fighting for the mastery again. And again her will power triumphed. For several years both her physical and mental condition were excellent, and her one remaining struggle was with occasional attacks of nervous hysteria which were becoming more and more rare.

Last Summer she was at home with her parents in the little village of Cliftondale for two months, and they were looking forward to the time when she should come home to them permanently when her end came suddenly.

BROOKLINE VINCENT GIRL IS A BRIDE

The first in the brilliant array of October weddings was that yesterday at noon in the First Parish Church, Brookline, of Miss Anna Mills, second daughter of Mrs. Arthur Mills of Irving street, Brookline, and John Whitman, 3d, son of the late John Whitman, Jr., also of Brookline.

The quaint little church with its decorations of white crysanthemums, ferns and bay trees made an ideal setting for the hundreds of beautifully gowned guests, who gathered from all the shore and mountain resorts to witness the ceremony.

The bride, who is a well known member of the Vincent Club and one of the most talented members of that set, was most attractive in her gown of white satin and long veil of tulle. She is tall and slender with brunette coloring, and never looked more lovely than when she came back from the altar a bride.

In their clinging gowns of pale green chiffon over pale green satin, their large green hats and bouquets of pink bride roses, the group of attendants made a most artistic foil for the white robed bride. Miss Mary O. Whitman, a sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor, and her gown was of pink chiffon, as was also her hat. Miss Katherine Higginson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Higginson of Seaver street, Brookline, and Misses Sarah W. Bliss, Janet Ritchie and Dorothy Coburn made up the quartet of bridesmaids. Lucius M. Thornton of Brooklyn was best man, and the ushers were Hendricks Hallet Whitman, Arnold Whitman, Charles A. Vinal, Charles F. Salvey and Bruce L. Sheraton.

At the conclusion of their bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. Whitman will reside in High street, Brookline.

Among the guests in attendance both at the ceremony and reception were Miss Marie Lee, the handsome daughter of the George C. Lees, who looked more striking than ever in her gown of wistaria and hat to match, both setting off to perfection her pretty brunette coloring. Miss Dorothy Pierce, who is also to be a bride in October, was in white cloth and large picture hat. She was with her sister Sally, who was also in white. Mrs. Dean Pierce was in dark gray chiffon and Mrs. Philip De Normandie was also in gray. Miss Amy Lowell was in pale blue cloth and Miss Margaret Stackpole in white.

LEVERONI HEADS DIVISION.

Judge of Juvenile Court to Aid Columbus Day Parade

Associate Justice Frank Leveroni, of the Juvenile Court, has been named as the marshal for the first division of the Columbus Day parade. This division will follow the military escort, which will consist of 1,200 bluejackets and marines, four companies of coast artillerymen, the Ninth regiment of State Milytia and the Ninth regiment Veterans Association. The first division will consist of the Italian societies.

RICH AUTOIST IN CELL.

Rosenheimer Has Been Indicted for Girl's Death.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Edward T. Rosenheimer, the wealthy young automobilist indicted for the murder of Miss Grace Hough, August 18, to-day surrendered himself at the criminal courts building. He was committed to the Tombs to remain until Monday, when he will appear before Justice Mulqueen for arraignment. The prisoner almost collapsed when ordered to a cell.

FILENE TELLS OF TRIP TO EUROPE

Boston Chamber of Commerce Delegate Recounts Experiences at Dinner.

"If you receive me like this, I shall make frequent trips to Europe simply for the pleasure of the return," said Edward A. Filene at a dinner and receptiou tendered him in Copley Hall last night by 800 members of the Filene Co-operative Association. Mr. Filene is just back from London, where he represented the Boston Chamber of Commerce at the international conference of commercial organizations. The Boston delegation was awarded the next convention in 1912 for this city in the face of much competition.

Mr. Filene received a tremendous ovation from his employes last night. He responded with an intersting account of his trip through England, Belgium and Germany.

"We got the next convention for Boston by promising the Europeans a near view of the American girl," he said. "They think the American girl is the best thing that walks the earth. Indeed, some think that she does not walk at all, but flutters.

"A man in Belgium has just devised a universal catalogue sytem for libraries," he continued, "so that all rare books and their depositaries are known in every corner of the world where there is a notable collection of books. As a remarkable result of this, Belgium is now preparing to hold an international exposition of international organizations something unique in expositions."

After the dinner there was a concert followed by dancing. President T. G. Toomey of the co-operative association was in charge, assisted by L. T. MaMahon and George Pierce. Among the store officials present were Recording Manager E. J. Frost, Store Manager T. K. Cory and Advertising Manager F. W. Tully.

DIVORCE FOR LYNN MAN BRINGS MONEY

LYNN, Oct. 1.—As a result of the divorce granted him to-day from Marian Josephine (Hill) Edwards, whom he married secretly seven years ago, Edwin Walden of No. 270 Summer street, brother of Charles H. Walden, president of Hoag & Walden, shoe manufacturers, is soon to come into a large sum of money from the estate of his father, former Mayor Walden of Lynn.

When Walden entered his suit last December, his friends and relatives here learned for the first time that he was a married man. To-day in the Essex County Court at Salem, Judge Fox returned a decree in his favor. Walden would have been able to derive money from his father's estate had his wife consented to sign certain papers with him. His divorce means that he will be able to go ahead with proceedings to bring about a division of the estate, as he no longer needs his wife's name.

The grounds on which the divorce was given were that Mrs. Walden had married the Lynn man inside of the time limit fixed by the court when a divorce broke up her marital felicity with Jesse C. Edwards of Wakefield, her first husband. At that time the court ruled that the woman could not marry inside of three years. It is alleged that she was married to Walden inside of thirty months.

The marriage to Walden took place in Providence, February 3, 1903, and so well was it concealed that few, if any, knew of it. Later the Waldens separated, and it is alleged that Mrs. Walden posed for a time as the widow of George D. Harmon, a Boston & Maine fireman, who was killed in Somerville.

Guild to Present Play.

Women members of Columbus Guild of Lynn are to present "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works" next Thursday evening under the direction of Mrs. Anna Mangan. There are sixteen members in the cast. The guild has voted to send a float to the Boston parade on Columbus Day.

LONG FAMOUS HYMN IS UNDER BAN OF EPISCOPALIANS

"From Greenland's Ice Mountains" Is to Be Taken From the Church Song Book.

THE famous hymn which begins with the line, "From Greenland's icy mountains," is to be taken from the Episcopal hymnal. It will be removed, it is expected, at the general convention of the church at Cincinnati this week. Here is the stanza to which objection is generally taken:

What though the spicy breezes
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle,
Though every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile.
In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strown,
The heathen in his blindness
Bows down to wood and stone.

Laymen say that the line declaring that only man is vile is distasteful.

Sung for Nearly Century.

The hymn was composed ninety-two years ago in England by Bishop Reginald Heber before he went to take up his work in India. Ever since then it has been sung at all the missionary meetings of the Episcopal Church.

Another objection against it is that the hymn does not represent the modern spirit in the mission cause and has outgrown its usefulness.

Archdeacon Samuel G. Babcock, at the head of the missionary work of the Episcopal Church in the State of Massachusetts, believes that the objections against the hymn are not well taken. He said:

"I think that we are making too much of the objections against this famous hymn. It has been sung for years at the missionary councils of the Episcopal Church, and I sincerely hope that no influence is strong enough to have it removed. There is much sentiment in this hymn that we must respect, but our broad and dry methods would slim to condemn.

Bishop Heber a True Poet.

"The hymn came to light under one of those inspiring moments when the cause of missions was taking a new turn, and Bishop Heber, its author, was a true poet and simply but effectively expressed in this hymn the missionary impulse.

"The objection that it appeals to nature in an unattractive way is weak, as we have other hymns that may err in this direction more conspicuously.

"I have no sympathy with the movement that would take this hymn, as well as other hymns like 'Our Blessed Redeemer' or 'He Breathed, 'I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord,' out of our hymnal. It is a false sentiment and in fact instead of taking any more hymns away from us I should be glad to see more hymns added. I believe that the convention will vote down the attempt to remove this from the hymnal."

MAYOR A WITNESS.

Will Testify in Mrs. Glover's Fight for Her Home.

Mayor Edward A. Walker of Waltham is to be a witness for Mrs. Lillian M. Glover in her suit to recover the Glover home on Main street in Waltham, from her brother, Toby LeBlanc. After conference yesterday between Mayor Walker, Mrs. Glover and her attorney, F. X. Hayes, it was announced that Mayor Walker would testify. The hearing is set for Wednesday. Mrs Glover alleges that the property is really hers, although in her brother's name, she having furnished the money with which it was purchased. Mayor Walker was the real estate agent who acted in the transfer of the property in January, 1906, from William J. Pierce to Toby LeBlanc.

CHELSEA LIBRARY OPEN.

Made Possible Through Gift of $57,500 From Carnegie.

The opening of Chelsea's new public library yesterday marked an epoch in the building and growth of the city. The old Fitz house, used for a library, was destroyed in the big fire, April 12, 1908. The new library was made possible through the gifts of Andrew Carnegie. His official gift was $50,000, but this was increased when it was found necessary to have an additional $7,500 to finish the building. The insurance money received as a result of the destruction of the old library, $20,000 in all, will be used in the purchase of new books.

SYMPATHY FOR DUPE.

Osborne Gave $6,000 to a Mythical Sweetheart.

SOUTHINGTON, Ct., Oct. 1.—George D. Osborne, the watchmaker who gave $6,000 to "Grace Wilson," a sweetheart, who never existed, has recovered his faith in womankind. This recovery is due to a large number of letters writing to sympathetic women in various cities expressing their admiration for one so trusting as to be so duped. "These women rend of my trouble in the Boston papers," said Osborne to-night. "They know how I paid the expenses of my mythical sweetheart through her mythical illness and even settled the real bills for her mythical funeral. Their letters have given me a new hope. I now have courage to make my way again in the world although I expect to fight my battles alone."

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN GROWS HOT IN CITY AND THROUGH STATE

CONTEST FOR VAHEY'S DELEGATES LIKELY AFTER THE FIRST BALLOT

Former Senator Refuses to Say If He Would Throw Strength to Either Foss or Hamlin.

John F. McDonald said last night, for Mr. Foss, that the famous Congressman will be nominated on the first ballot. Victor Robert J. Crowley said that Charles A. Hamlin would be nominated on the first ballot. Obviously one of the gentlemen is mistaken. The prevailing sentiment is that both of them—on this subject—are away off.

James H. Vahey said for himself that a few hundred delegates are coming to Boston instructed to vote for James H. Vahey. Mr. Vahey looks to see them do so. Mr. Vahey looks back home expect them to do so. Vahey delegates who jump the track (so rarely will have some explaining to do when they get back among the folk who elected them.

Lots of Letters to Show.

There was a good deal of talk at Vahey headquarters last night about certain alleged statements by Mr. Vahey to the effect that he would not be a candidate if Mr. Vahey was to be a candidate. Like the Hamlin people, the Vahey folks have baskets full of letters to show. The tenor of most of the letters is "Stick." The Vahey people claimed last night to have received votes a plenty during the day to justify Mr. Vahey's decision to issue this warning to his delegates:

I am gratified to note the sentiment of the electors which come in from the principles of the contest, and the wonderful interest in the primary election I would have except the present withholding of my name as a candidate. I want to counsel and urge my friends everywhere to support the Democratic party nominees which are bound to be made because they are aware that the people, even those who was elected to the committee, will either go himself or send a substitute in a proper and legal way to the primary election and vote for the man about the nomination, there will be no question as to the result. I will be honored.

There is great danger that credentials may be contested, and I hope and believe that this will be overcome by the public spirit and zeal of the Democrats who have been selected to call upon my friends everywhere to support the Democratic party now and the time when the convention's work is done. I thank you for your kindness in the interest you have taken in every way in their power.

"Flying in Face of Fate."

Senator Vahey spoke of Mr. Foss yesterday as if the latter would be had enough politically almost to show.

"From my own observations and new reports from all sections, I am surprised to be told and believe I have received from a large number of Democrats in various sections, it is my sincere belief that before next Thursday's convention is seated Eugene N. Foss will be eliminated from the contest.

I do not see how the Democratic party in Massachusetts can afford to fly in the face of Fate and defeat a candidate who is pledged just that if I nominates Eugene N. Foss.

A large number of those who are with me in the contest say they will stick with me all along, have come to desire Mr. Foss. They wouldn't vote for him to be the nominee.

Many of those friends of mine would be absolutely sure that I am not in the contest if there is a large number of the Democratic people instructed to vote for Foss.

Will Not Coerce Delegates.

Mr. Vahey dictated this statement solely to a reporter took it down. The dictation stopped right here but Mr. Vahey would not say that he would not use his influence to make any choice between Foss and Hamlin. If he talks of a nomination in the convention, he is instructed to say that he would be delighted to have his friends of Third district Democracy think a man for governor. Foss and Hamlin. Nobody could see Mr. Vahey attempting to suggest the name of a new candidate.

Mr. Eugene N. Foss apparently responds to the call of the regular candidate right given to the opening of the state convention.

When it became known yesterday that Charles H. Cole had called on Mr. Foss to make the Hamlin nominating speech, an inquisitive person from the Boston newspapers went down to the office of the H. F. Hamlin Company, either street to ask Mr. Foss the name of the gentleman who will declare for Mr. Foss.

Foss Is All Smiles.

Foss smiled all over.

"Why, my boy," said he, "you know that I am merely a receptive candidate."

And the name of the receptive candidate is a receptive speechmaker is—what. Mr. Foss?

The Congressman from the Fourteenth laughed out loud.

"Before that," he said, "I don't know. I haven't given the matter a moment's thought."

Mr. Foss was told that somewhere in this great and glorious Commonwealth a certain party has undoubtedly been at work on the Foss nominating speech for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, occasionally rehearsing it to the family.

Mr. Foss was plainly surprised.

"You don't say so," he said; "well, I haven't had the least idea who he is."

It was suggested that he might be the Hon. John F. Fitzgerald.

"He'd make a dandy, now, wouldn't he?" said Foss.

This attitude of Mr. Foss is plainly getting on the nerves of some of the older campaigners. They say they know that Mr. Foss has been putting up the money for all the work of organization, and all the touring and so on that has been going on for months and years in the name of the Democratic state committee, and they really believe that they say, that Foss ought to be frank about it. They say he wants the nomination for Governor and he wants it bad, and he doesn't want anything on earth. They think he ought to say so in plain English.

Some of the Democrats who are "with Foss" say would like to have him speak out frankly. One of them says Mr. Foss feels that the people of Massachusetts want a Democratic Governor this year, and that he will and that this ought to be sufficient reason for him to say that he has been trying to explain to Mr. Foss that a Democratic convention with Foss and Hamlin stands between him and the people that is all.

Mr. Foss said his admirers "looks now almost as a child of Destiny, and that he had decided to go along with the ride all through the State last Fall. Some Foss will be nominated for Governor. Foss will be elected. He came so close to it that he "lost" but all will be well in 1910. Foss is more anti-Fitzgerald, indeed, than Hamlin. Therefore, if Fitzgerald is with this vote will be against."

Attempt at Harmony.

It was admitted that this kind of talk will not "get anybody anywhere" without organization. Last night it was said that the anti-Fitzgerald ward leaders were preparing to get into action in addition to an effort to agree upon a program.

Ward Leader Gallagher of the section 10 told timers is the strength of the feeling for Foss, whereof Fitzgerald is the head, that Representative Tom Riley is not the only ward leader in the city for Foss. Riley is the only one who frankly tells about it. Others have been quietly at work in the matter of their discomfiture on finding out that as usual, they are delegates to the State Convention, but are not going to vote to support James H. Vahey.

Riley presided at the caucus in Ward 3, Malden. The caucus there is usually attended by two or three hundred voters. The name the local orator for the State Convention, shake hands with him and go home.

This time fifteen of them showed up. They named Alfred Welch for the State Convention and Mr. Riley made them tell him why this humiliation. And here he has a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Welch Resigns.

The boys of Ward 3 told the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives that Vahey and Mansfield could not carry there the night before, that a good deal had been said about Vahey's work in the State Senate and on the stump for the Democratic ticket, that some things were said about Tom Riley personally, and that the Malden boys were making up their minds that they were not quitting a faithful and regular young Democrat just because he is poor.

Riley said if they felt that way about it they could vote for Welch, and Welch resigned.

In several places in Essex County, too, gentlemen who might fairly be described as of the Democratic Old Guard find that they are permitted to come again to a State Convention but "instructed" to vote for Vahey.

Some of these gentlemen have said in the presence of the writer that they propose to keep faith by voting for Vahey on the "first" ballot, but think that's as long as he will last.

Which is the reason for stating that the Vahey vote in the convention will decide the issue between Mr. Foss and Mr. Hamlin.

GALVIN IS CONFIDENT.

Feels Certain He Can Defeat Curley at Polls.

"I will be the next Congressman from the Tenth District. There is no donot of that fact."

J. Mitchell Galvin, Republican candidate for Congress made this prediction last night on the eve of the active fight which he will wage in the Tenth District from now until election day.

The leaders believe that the Tenth District can be swung over to the Republican column. Galvin will have the State Committee and the influence of the State machine behind him. Ex-Governor Guild will stump the district for him, as will Ex-Governor John D. Long. Former Attorney General Parker will be another of his star orators.

The district headquarters were opened yesterday in the Kimball building. They will have been established before the every ward of the district.

"A great many factors are of the opinion that the year 1910 will go down in political history as a Democratic year," said the Honorable J. Mitchell Galvin. He says:

"I will defeat Councilor Curley because conditions throughout the district are better for me than they were two years ago when I was only defeated by four votes.

"Hundreds of voters came to me after that fight and said that had they realized that it would be as close as it was they would willingly have voted for me. They will vote for me this time. I will get every vote that I got two years ago. That is enough to carry me through to victory by a wide margin."

"I shall engage in a clean fight on clean issues. There will be no personalities in my campaign."

day as he was with the several bike ribbons that he captured the other day at the fair of Matapoisett Grange, Patrons of Husbandry. Mr. Hamlin, as is well known, is a Granger. He was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

"Neighbor" Hamlin toted home the blue ribbons for tobacco, for onions, for Long fellow corn, for potatoes and for turnips. When Jake dropped in at No. 14 Beacon street yesterday—apparently from the Foss headquarters—the rooms of the State Committee—to ask, "Well, how does it look?" Mr. Hamlin was as apt as not to say: "I should say it closely resembles the Connecticut leaf. Of course we aren't doing much with it, yet—just a first attempt but it strikes me as remarkable," etc., etc.

Regardless of which fact Colonel Charles H. Cole and Major Robert J. Crowley went right along opening larger fires for delegates to Thursday's convention and taking out pledges for "Hamlin, first, last and all the time." Folks who couldn't wait to be registered by mail called up on the telephone.

"I can see nothing but the nomination of Mr. Hamlin on the first ballot," Major Crowley said.

"We are satisfied with our progress in Hamlin," Col. Cole added, "and we have not yet ready to show our hands."

The Hamlin people think it will be nothing short of suicide for the Democratic party to reject the services of a lifelong Democrat, political progressive and demonstrated friend of the wage-worker, to put in the empty place on the ticket which got the nomination for Lieutenant-Governor unanimously on account of the fact that within six months was nominated and elected to Congress.

Everywhere outside the inner temple of the Fitzgerald Foss people it has been said for late past three days that Mr. Hamlin would get a hard times of it swinging the 238 Boston votes to anybody.

Watching the Patronage.

On the street they say the Mayor will not send a delegate out of the O'Connell ward, 20, out of the Shaw ward, 5, out of the either Donovan ward, 9; this as a result of the congressional fights. Some folks think Curley will go to the Hamlin ward, 12, the McNary ward, 15 parts of Wards 1 and 2, 24 and 2 and 4 and all of Ward 22.

Mr. Fitzgerald—so runs the usual answer to this kind of question—has for years yet to serve as Mayor of Boston. He knows that. He knows that means a passage that means that however individual leaders may be disposed toward Mr. Fitzgerald, the delegates from Ward 17 Tammany Club to the convention is going to forget that either they or their fellow delegates are slaves of any leader. The bulk of Boston, practically all of Boston, will oppose Fitzgerald.

Just the same, this talk that much of Boston will break for Mr. Moody on account of Fitzgerald, regardless, "A large part of the vote will be there," is not to be "but all will not be anti-Fitzgerald. It is more anti-Fitzgerald, indeed, than anti-Foss. Where Fitzgerald is with this vote will be against."

Attempt at Harmony.

It was admitted that this kind of talk will not "get anybody anywhere" without organization. Last night it was said that the anti-Fitzgerald ward leaders were preparing to get into action in addition to an effort to agree upon a program.

Ward Leader Gallagher of the section 10 told timers is the strength of the feeling for Foss, whereof Fitzgerald is the head, that Representative Tom Riley is not the only ward leader in the city for Foss. Riley is the only one who frankly tells about it. Others have been quietly at work in the matter of their discomfiture on finding out that as usual, they are delegates to the State Convention, but are not going to vote to support James H. Vahey.

Riley presided at the caucus in Ward 3, Malden. The caucus there is usually attended by two or three hundred voters. The name the local orator for the State Convention, shake hands with him and go home.

This time fifteen of them showed up. They named Alfred Welch for the State Convention and Mr. Riley made them tell him why this humiliation. And here he has a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Welch Resigns.

The boys of Ward 3 told the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives that Vahey and Mansfield could not carry there the night before, that a good deal had been said about Vahey's work in the State Senate and on the stump for the Democratic ticket, that some things were said about Tom Riley personally, and that the Malden boys were making up their minds that they were not quitting a faithful and regular young Democrat just because he is poor.

Riley said if they felt that way about it they could vote for Welch, and Welch resigned.

In several places in Essex County, too, gentlemen who might fairly be described as of the Democratic Old Guard find that they are permitted to come again to a State Convention but "instructed" to vote for Vahey.

Some of these gentlemen have said in the presence of the writer that they propose to keep faith by voting for Vahey on the "first" ballot, but think that's as long as he will last.

Which is the reason for stating that the Vahey vote in the convention will decide the issue between Mr. Foss and Mr. Hamlin.

GALVIN IS CONFIDENT.

Feels Certain He Can Defeat Curley at Polls.

"I will be the next Congressman from the Tenth District. There is no donot of that fact."

J. Mitchell Galvin, Republican candidate for Congress made this prediction last night on the eve of the active fight which he will wage in the Tenth District from now until election day.

The leaders believe that the Tenth District can be swung over to the Republican column. Galvin will have the State Committee and the influence of the State machine behind him. Ex-Governor Guild will stump the district for him, as will Ex-Governor John D. Long. Former Attorney General Parker will be another of his star orators.

The district headquarters were opened yesterday in the Kimball building. They will have been established before the every ward of the district.

"A great many factors are of the opinion that the year 1910 will go down in political history as a Democratic year," said the Honorable J. Mitchell Galvin. He says:

"I will defeat Councilor Curley because conditions throughout the district are better for me than they were two years ago when I was only defeated by four votes.

"Hundreds of voters came to me after that fight and said that had they realized that it would be as close as it was they would willingly have voted for me. They will vote for me this time. I will get every vote that I got two years ago. That is enough to carry me through to victory by a wide margin."

"I shall engage in a clean fight on clean issues. There will be no personalities in my campaign."

Political Notes.

Figuratively speaking, there were 170,000 words spoken by the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Tenth District, most of them being on the high cost of living, not mentioning the interruptions by excited partisans. If put together in book form they would make excellent reading material on a stormy night close to a red-hot stove.

Just think of it! Tom Giblin made 106 speeches in his canvass for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ninth District. And it was in one day at that! The political editor has been asked to tell how many words he spoke. An analysis of his speeches showed that he repeated the word "formaldehyde" 275 times in his argument on the condition of children's food and the high cost of living. The total number of words spoken by Mr. Giblin, leaving out "formaldehyde," was 31,800.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell is recuperating after his strenuous campaign in Wilkesbarre. He is to be married next month. Simultaneously with his defeat the clerk brought his married sister, Mrs. Mary, lives in Pittsburg, a baby girl. Dispatches from that place say that mother and child are doing nicely.

Former Councilman Tom Joyce of Ward 17, who was defeated for the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives in Ward 17 by eighty votes, blames an "eleventh hour scrubber" for his downfall. He characterizes such tactics as not compatible with fair play. Yesterday he announced that he would be an independent candidate for the House on a platform of "vindication."

The Congressional fight in South Boston put a number of State candidates in as members of the "In Bad Club." Because of the political strength of the individual Democratic candidates for State offices in the name of the Democratic ticket. Some folks odd the Richard ward, 21, the Bond ward, 12, the McNary ward, 15 parts of Wards 1 and 2, 24 and 2 and 4 and all of Ward 22.

Mr. Fitzgerald—so runs the usual answer to this kind of question—has for years yet to serve as Mayor of Boston. He knows that. He knows that means a passage that means that however individual leaders may be disposed toward Mr. Fitzgerald, the delegates from Ward 17 Tammany Club to the convention is going to forget that either they or their fellow delegates are slaves of any leader. The bulk of Boston, practically all of Boston, will oppose Fitzgerald.

Just the same, this talk that much of Boston will break for Mr. Moody on account of Fitzgerald, regardless, "A large part of the vote will be there," is not to be "but all will not be anti-Fitzgerald. It is more anti-Fitzgerald, indeed, than anti-Foss. Where Fitzgerald is with this vote will be against."

BIG CONGRESS FIGHT IN RHODE ISLAND

Cannonism the Issue, but State Democratic Ticket Looked on as Weak.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 1.—The State ticket named by the convention in Thursday's convention has failed as yet to bring about predictions that the victory of James H. Higgins, of Pawtucket, who won an election as governor two years ago is to be duplicated this year.

The candidates of Democracy, Lewis A. Waterman of Providence, for governor and Dr. Philip E. Clarke of Newport, are regarded as lacking in strength, and the greater interest in the campaign seems to surround the contests in the two congressional districts.

The Republican convention will not be held until Oct. 19, and the entire ticket of last year from Governor down to Attorney of Woonsocket, down will be renominated with the possible exception of the present lieutenant governor, Zenas W. Bliss of Newport, who is looked upon by many as having ambitions to become the successor to Senator General Brayton, the blind boss of the State.

Republicans Seek Harmony.

The Republicans are particularly desirous of maintaining the harmony and integrity of the State machine, while the Democrats are trying as best they can to take advantage of the split in the Republican party, which is the death of their leader.

The various candidates of the parties for the other State offices are: Secretary of State (Republican), Alberic Archambault of Woonsocket; (Democrat), Thomas D. Rabocek of Westerly, and (Democrat), William P. Greenough of Providence; General (Republican), Herbert L. Pratt of Providence; (Democrat), Attorney-General (Republican), William H. Greenough of Providence; Treasurer (Republican), Walter R. Stiness of Providence; (Democrat), Joseph H. Conway, a resident of Cranston and a good campaigner.

Cannonism an Issue.

Both O'Shaughnessy and Cooney are pledged against Cannonism, and they have already their opening campaign.

The platform adopted by the Democratic State Convention is regarded as attractive to the voters. It denounces the "aldrich tariff," declares for the enactment of a law giving the people the right of appointing power, our reforming the election laws; especially of the form of ballot; an act regulating the lobby and to prevent corporations from the enactment of employers' liability law, a direct primary law and a public service commission.

GIBLIN IS RECEPTIVE.

Former Alderman Ready to Take Field for Congress.

Former Alderman Thomas J. Giblin, one of the leaders of the Democracy in the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ninth District, says he is in "a receptive mood for support as an independent candidate for Congress against Councilor William H. Murray," the nominee of the party. He says he will wait until the Democratic State Committee meets and formally knows his intentions.

"I'm a poor man, without money and such a campaign as I would wage as an independent candidate for Congress in the Ninth District would cost me. But if conditions point that I can get backing, and the party Committee winds up as I do not think it will and a wave of resentment grows over the defeat of Congressman Murray, I see no reason why I shouldn't be in the fight.

Since primary day I have been the recipient of hundreds of letters asking me to enter the Independent campaign for Congress. People meet me on the street and urge me to make the fight. East Boston will stand behind me, they say.

"I am receptive to the idea and giving due prominence to them as an argument in my favor, I would say that at this stage of the game that I am in a receptive mood for support as an independent candidate for Congress against Councilor William H. Murray."

SEES DEAL FOR DIX.

Murphy's Plan Since Spring Say Defeated Candidates.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 1.—"Boss Murphy framed up the Dix nomination for governor months ago," is the charge made by Democrats for State chairman in the Spring. He used Gaynor, Shepard, Parker and others as dark horses, so that when the break came others in the open to cover up until he got his juggernaut well greased. Then he put stress on the name of Dix, and knew every candidate in sight except Dix."

This accusation was uttered to-day by one of the most distinguished aspirants for the Democratic nomination for governor. It was accompanied by the declaration that not one of the leaders except Murphy and McCoy, who participated in the final conferences favored the selection of Dix.

On the contrary, William J. Conners, William F. Sheehan, Patrick E. McCabe, Morgan J. O'Brien, "Big Tim" Sullivan, Chairman Norman E. Mack of the Democratic National Committee, John B. Standfield, George Foster Peabody, and, indeed, all but the Tammany contingent and his Kings County lieutenant violently protested against Dix's nomination made defeat certain and the conduct of a campaign absolutely useless.

QUINN LOSES AND WINS.

Opponent Alleges Forged Names on Recount Petition.

Certain names were forged on the petition of John Quinn, defeated for the Democratic nomination in the Third Councillor District, according to what the ballots be counted, according to the charge made yesterday by Edward D. Collins, Jr., winner of the nomination by a majority of one, before the Election Commissioners.

Collins declared there were names of dead men and of non-residents on Quinn's petition. It was found there was one man on the petition whose name was written "Lowell" instead of another himself. Two names were found on the petition, but not signed on the voting list.

At the close of the hearing, Quinn was denied a recount in Wards 2, 4, 5, 13, 14 and 15, but the recount was granted in Wards 3, 7, 8, 12, 16, 17 and 18.

Berth for Lomasney Man.

Ward 8 will be remembered by the administration again within a few days. Robert K. McKirdy, who is a ward of Martin Lomasney's lieutenants, and who served the present year in the House of Representatives, will be placed in the collecting department at a salary of $1,500 per week. He will take the place made vacant by the transfer of Reginald H. Mair, one of the late Mayor Hibbard's secretaries, who has gone to the election department.

WHICH OF THESE TWO DOMES WILL GO TO CONGRESS?

SAML. W. McCALL

FREDERICK J. McLEOD

"Baldheaded" Mac the One Best Bet In 8th District

Chairman Macleod, Who Is Running Against Congressman McCall, Gives Tip to Friends.

The name of the next Congressman from the Eighth Massachusetts District almost cropped out yesterday.

Honorable Fred J. Macleod of Cambridge will make the Democratic fight there against Congressman Samuel W. McCall of Winchester.

Chairman Macleod was at Young's yesterday. "I see," said a friend, "that the next Congressman from the Eighth will be a Mac."

"He will," said the head of the Democratic State Committee, "he will be a bald-headed Mac."

DANGER FOR HARRIS.

His Opposition to Buchanan May "Come Back."

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—Republican workmen in this city shake their heads at the approach of the Congressional campaign in the Fourteenth District and wonder if Robert Orr Harris's words will not return to plague him.

Judge Harris, a justice of the Superior Court, was beaten for the nomination at the special election last Spring by William R. Buchanan, publisher of the Brockton Times. Mr. Buchanan had been private secretary to William L. Douglas, Democratic Governor in 1905.

Buchanan was beaten at the polls by Eugene Noble Foss, a new recruit to the Democracy, in a district which had been Republican ever since the landing of Columbus. The vote was 25,000 to 24,950, a "Democratic" plurality of 5,617.

It was said at the time that the true good in Republican politics were led to go out and hand it to Mr. Buchanan by three words of Robert Orr Harris, publicly stated and never retracted:

"I don't know which is the better Republican, Foss or Buchanan, but I am inclined to think the former is."

Judge Harris is apparently going to have the nomination this month for the full term without contest. Buchanan, in a new role as Christian Forgiving, says it is with him. Buchanan's friends say a great variety of other things.

BROWARD IS DEAD.

Former Governor Was Soon to Go to the Senate.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 1.—Napoleon B. Broward, United States Senator-elect, and former Governor of Florida, died suddenly this afternoon.

Gov. Broward was born in Duval county, Florida, April 15, 1857, in extreme poverty, and was reared up, by his own exertions, from childhood. Both his parents died when he was 12 years old, and he and a brother, two years older, worked out their own salvation in the little homestead clearing, whittled out at night each one plug and pine log together rafts of timber, then in turn rafted

Napoleon became at seventeen a cook and assistant engineer on St. Johns river steamboat, and earned money to secure two years' schooling at New Berlin, Fla., his entire education. He was next a deckhand on a lumber schooner bound to Boston, and at the age of eighteen got a Grand Banks fishing trip in the dead of Winter, and sailed in Kentucky jeans and a gingham shirt; then sailed South before the mast and became a roustabout and wheelsman on St. Johns River boats.

By the time he was twenty-five he bought part ownership of one of these boats. At thirty he was elected sheriff of Duval County, in which Jacksonville is located, hanging a negro murderer in the line of his duty. At forty-three he was made member of the general assembly of Florida, and four years later, in 1904, he won his election to the governorship.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA BLOOD AND NERVE REMEDY

Women Who Work

The army of women who work.... Stores, factories, offices, hundreds in their slaves. Day after day the same hard routine. A chance for rest. No time to be sick. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the honest aid such hard workers need. It is the safe and sure strengthener. There is no exaggeration in saying that multitudes have been helped by it.

Miss Ida Hunter, 226 W. 121st St., New York City, says: "I was on the verge of nervous prostration. Everything upset me. I was in a state of nervous that I couldn't stand anything. In the morning I would wake up tired. When I would get up I had to force myself to go to work. I suffered greatly from dizziness and dark headaches. My back ached so that I felt like lying down all the time, and I was in a constant state of fear. I was awful to stand. I was always 'blue' and depressed, and felt weak and tired and languid, and utterly unfit to attend to any work. Now I wished I might have a vacation and take a rest. Someone suggested that I take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I did so and I want every one to know how much good Dr. Greene's remedy did me, and how thankful I am for it. If all the women and girls who have to work hard would only take Dr. Greene's Nervura, there wouldn't be so many headaches. I believe it is the best medicine there is for a run down condition of the nervous system. Men blame women for being cross and irritable over every little thing, and think they should never get 'blue.' They don't realize that most women and girls have to work hard for their strength."

Miss Hunter's letter is but one voice out of thousands who owe everything to Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Dr. Greene, 36 Temple Place, Boston, Massachusetts, will advise you free. Call or write.

SHOES ALMOST GIVEN AWAY

We may as well be honest with you. Times are bad—about as bad as we have ever seen them. Shoeless has been slow with all dealers. We have not complained—we are not complaining now—but if it were not for the dull business of the past three weeks you can rest assured no such slashing of prices as we make for the coming week would be possible.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FIGHTING HARD FOR DELEGATES

MR. HAMLIN DECLARES PEOPLE ARE NOT REPRESENTED

Candidate for Democratic Nomination Attacks State's Legislative System.

WORCESTER, Oct. 1—Hon. Charles S. Hamlin, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, to-night attacked the entire legislative system of the State, declared that it did not represent the people, advocated a law prohibiting corporations from contributing to campaign funds and declared that direct nominations offer but partial relief for the existing non-representative form of government.

I shall have prior thereto to make known system of government, in which system I citizen can dispassionately view existing

Mr. Hamlin made these charges in a speech delivered at the Bay State House at a reception tendered him by the thirty-seven delegates to the Democratic convention in Faneuil Hall, Tuesday. Prominent Democrats from all over Worcester County were present. Mr. Hamlin said.

Mr. Hamlin's Speech.

"The time of the convention approaches and this is probably the last opportunity I shall have prior thereto to make known my views. I ask the people to look squarely into the face of existing political conditions. We have a representative system of government, in which sytem I firmly believe. But what I wish the people to consider is this. While we have the form of representative government, we are confident that we have the substance as well? I believe no thoughtful citizen can dispassionately view existing conditions without being satisfied that while we have the outward form, we do not have the substance.

"The Legislature of our State is elected to represent the people of the Commonwealth. Do they, under existing conditions, represent the entire people? Consider how legislative nominations are made under the convention system. Does the average citizen realize the methods now in vogue? Does he know the secret of influences invoked to secure nominations? Does he realize the political subways with which our State is undermined, and has he ever tried to trace these subways to the original source?

People Not Represented.

"I firmly of the opinion that under existing conditions the Legislature does not represent the uncontrolled will of our people. I do not wish to be misunderstood in what I am saying. I am not in any way impugning the good faith of our Legislature, but I am attacking a system which I believe to be fraught with danger to the commonwealth. Secret insidious influences under present conditions, can be, and I believe are, constantly invoked by which the popular will is thwarted. These influences and subtle forces can be brought to bear against the honest man, as well as in favor of the self seeker. The most potent influence of present political methods is the unseen, hidden influence which can be invoked, and all must admit is frequently invoked, but which would disappear as the mist before the sun under a fair system of direct nominations. Some progress has been made already along these lines, but the whole matter should be promptly settled once and for all by the Legislature.

Condemns the Lobby.

"I do not forget that a bill was enacted in the last Legislature providing, under certain conditions, for direct nominations; but in my opinion that bill will give little relief, as the conditions are made so onerous that in practice it will be found almost impossible to comply with them.

"This then is my last proposition that the Legislature, under existing conditions is not truly representative of the people of our State.

"When the Legislature convenes, another extraordinary condition is revealed. We find a powerful body, known as the lobby, not recognized by our constitution, exercising a most profound influence upon legislation.

"I do not for a moment charge corruption, but I believe that the influence of the lobby is of the kind usually called undue, although it is sanctioned by law.

"The third proposition which I advocate is the prohibition of the use of money by any person or corporation to advocate the nomination or election of any candidate."

SENATOR JOHN J. MITCHELL

MITCHELL OUT TO WIN IN THE FOURTH

MARLBORO, Oct. 1.—One week from next Wednesday the Republicans of the Fourth Congressional district—in theory, at least—meet in this city to name a candidate for Congress.

As a matter of fact, of course, 149 delegates—or their alternates or their credentials—come together to speak for the members of the party.

And after that, after a majority of the delegates have declared for Representative Harry L. Pierce of Leominster or for William H. Wilder of Gardner, you will begin to see a lot and hear a lot about the Hon. John J. Mitchell of this city.

John Mitchell will again be the candidate of a united Democracy for Congress. Two years ago he ran against the late Charles Q. Tirrell of Natick and amazed the Commonwealth—and particularly the Republican leaders thereof—by rolling up a total of 15,431 against the 18,842 cast for Congressman Tirrell.

For many years the Democrats had made practically no contest at all; on one occasion, at least, they actually made no nomination. Here was a young Democrat coming within 1707 votes of victory.

Wilder, manufacturer of oil stoves, and Pierce, promoter, are fighting hotly and bitterly for the Republican nomination. Both claim it. Some say that Wilder has sixty-five delegates and Pierce fifty-six. Both are scrambling for the twenty-eight men who apparently haven't declared themselves.

Pierce and Wilder are both wealthy. Each has spent a ton of money for printer's ink. They have said things about one another which, if true, some folks say will make Republicans hesitate a bit voting for either. Which doesn't, at all describe the fight, which has been slam, bang, and bang, slam, from one end of the district to the other.

CARMICHAEL UNOPPOSED.

Casey of Lowell Drops Out of the Race for Congress.

LOWELL, Oct. 1.—Colonel James H. Carmichael will go before the Fifth Congressional District Convention unopposed from Lowell for the Democratic nomination to Congress as a result of the retirement of James B. Casey, who announced to-day that he would not contest the nomination with Colonel Carmichael. Casey had petitioned for recounts in Wards 1, 4 and 5 of this city. The recounts showed net losses for him. The friends of Carmichael are claiming forty delegates out of a total of seventy-two to attend the convention.

STANDPATTERS WILL DRAW TARIFF PLANK FOR G. O. P.

Taft's "Best Ever" Will Sound Very Modest After Thursday's Convention.

WHEN President Taft reads the Massachusetts Republican platform next Thursday he will feel ashamed of himself for having said of the Payne-Aldrich system that it was the "best tariff bill ever enacted." The President will feel that he was altogether too half-hearted.

Senator Lodge's tariff plank will be drafted by friends of the tariff. Some of them are men that the tariff has been good to. In other cases they are men who have friends who are friends of the tariff.

The chairman of the committee on resolutions will be Congressman Charles G. Washburn of Worcester. The other members at large will be President Allen T. Treadway of the State Senate, Speaker Joseph Walker of the House, Former Senator Eben S. S. Keith of Bourne and Former State President William D. Chappel of Salem.

Then there are fourteen members chosen from the fourteen congressional districts. It was in these selections that the standpatters got everything their hearts desired. This is the list:

Here Is The List.

WILLIAM B. PLUNKETT, manager of the Greylock Cotton Mills at North Adams. Delegate to the Republican National conventions of 1892 and 1900.

TIMOTHY G. SPALDING, attorney and financier, Northampton.

CHARLES F. MARBLE, manufacturer of textile machinery; cashier and director of the Curtis & Marble Machine Company, Worcester.

HERBERT PARKER, who has been going to the State House regularly for several years to fight the Hilgen bill, aimed at the Standard Oil monopoly. Mr. Parker is an attorney of great ability. He was Attorney-General from 1901 to 1905. He says he makes the Standard Oil fight for some coffee merchant. Nobody appears openly for Standard Oil against the anti-discrimination bill.

WILLIAM WOOD, President of the American Woolen Company at Lawrence; director of the American Woolen Company of New York. Member of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers. Prominent in the Home Market Club. Will defend Schedule "K" with his life.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND, President of the League of Republican Clubs, most eminent consulting engineer in the world; has traveled extensively for the Guggenheim Exploration Company of New York and is close to the Guggenheims, who are supposed to be friendly to Richard Achilles Ballinger. Gloucester.

Innis Also on the Job.

EVERETT C. BENTON of Belmont, insurance, member of the house of John C. Paige & Co.

ROGER WOLCOTT of Milton, son of the late former Governor and rising young attorney and legislator, formerly in the law department of the Boston Elevated Railway, now chairman of the House Committee on Street Railways, and said to be "in line for" the Speakership.

CHARLES H. INNIS, Republican boss of Ward 10, Boston; first-rate lawyer, who frequently goes to the State House for the "interests" but up to date hasn't often been called "lobbyist."

ALBION F. BEMIS, treasurer and manager of the Hills Company, manufacturers of straw goods. Took charge for Senator Lodge of the Massachusetts Investigation of the High Cost of Living and proved that it aint so.

WILLIAM S. GREENE, Congressman from the 13th District, always with the Stand Patter, in Congress 12 years, satisfactory to the Big Boss, formerly Mayor and Postmaster of Fall River, goes to Republican National Conventions as a habit.

FRANK G. WHEATLEY, of Abington, fine family doctor of the old school; beloved throughout the immediate district but unable to carry the 14th last Spring against Judge Harris and Editor Buchanan, regular, safe, sane and conservative, but not noisy. Guaranteed not to make a fuss.

May Set It to Music.

One Republican who looked the list over last night expressed a fear that the committee may go too far. "I shouldn't be surprised," he said, "if Wood and Plunkett and Greene and Hammond get them to recommend setting the blame Payne-Aldrich bill to music and introducing it into the curriculum of the public schools."

At midnight Chairman Hatfield of the State Committee and Mr. Innes of Ward 10 were on their way from New York with President Taft and Mr. Hammond urging the President to promise them one or more speeches for Senator Lodge and the ticket.

URGE O'BRIEN TO RUN.

Friends Say Ward 16 Man Wasn't Treated Right.

Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16 will be an independent candidate for the Senate in the Seventh District, which includes Wards 13, 14, 15 and 16, if James Vahey is turned down in the State Democratic convention as its nominee for Governor.

"I am not satisfied with the unfair manner in which the senatorial nomination was won by my opponent," said O'Brien. "My record will be my platform. My candidacy, however, will depend in a large measure on the outcome of the Democratic State convention next Thursday. If James H. Vahey is turned down I will formally announce my candidacy."

The friends of Mr. O'Brien are urging him to be an independent candidate regardless of the result of the convention. They charge that unfair and untrue statements were made against Mr. O'Brien just before the primary election, and too late for him to make a reply to them.

One of the reports circulated against Mr. O'Brien was that he was unfriendly to labor.

HUDSON ASKS RECOUNT.

Former Chelsea Police Chief Claims Board Nomination.

David M. Hudson, former chief of police of Chelsea, is not satisfied that he was defeated by Commissioner Alton E. Briggs in the contest for the Republican nomination to the Board of Control. He has petitioned for a recount. The recount has been set for to-morrow night in the Chelsea Court House. The count given out after the primary gave the nomination to Briggs by 193 votes. Hudson contends that the men who counted the votes threw out a large number of ballots voted for him, on the claim that his name had not been legally written into the ballot.

G. O. P. Chairman Quits.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 1.—At a meeting of the Republican City Committee here to-night Harry W. Spaulding tendered his resignation as president. Spaulding retired because he is the nominee for solicitor of Hillsboro County. G. Irving Haselton was elected to succeed him as president.

KELIHER MAKES HOT REPLY TO MAYOR FITZGERALD

Declares He Never Sought Fitzgerald's Aid in Congressional Contest.

Congressman John A. Keliher, who was defeated for renomination at the primaries last Tuesday, in reply to a report that Mayor Fitzgerald would have allowed him to return to Congress if Keliher supported the Mayor for Governor, issued a statement yesterday in which he said that he would not "disgrace" his party and "insult" the State by favoring the Mayor for Governor.

This is Congressman Keliher's statement, which was prefaced by the line, "Relative to a Statement Printed in the Republic:"

"I was told today by a city employe that Mayor Fitzgerald in his paper, the Republic, stated that I had asked ex-Wire Commissioner Patrick J. Kennedy, to intercede with him, Mayor Fitzgerald to allow me to go back to Congress, in return for which I would support him for Governor.

"Didn't Ask Support."

"I would never have learned of this extraordinary statement of the Editor Mayor, had I not met this city employe, for nobody that I can learn of except city employes and sandbagged advertisers reads the Republic, the former to strengthen their hold on their jobs and the latter to see if what they are held up for is really printed.

"I did not ask P. J. Kennedy to ask Mayor Fitzgerald to support me and leave it to that gentleman, whose honor I respect, to prove that no such request was made to me. I saw Mr. Kennedy but did not even ask him for his support.

"What I did ask was that he (Mr. Kennedy) remain neutral in the contest. This he promised to do, and so far as I can learn, did so. I could have been returned to Congress practically unopposed had I stultified myself and supported Mr. Fitzgerald for Mayor. I did not do so and surely I would not be a party to the infliction of such a disgrace upon my party as to aid in nominating a man of his type for Governor, not to speak of aiding in such an insult to Massachusetts as advocating Mr. Fitzgerald for her Governor.

Scores the Mayor.

"Mr. Fitzgerald's attitude so far as the politics of Boston and Massachusetts are concerned is tersely summed up by him. I am informed by his editorial declaration that I asked Mr. Kennedy to ask Mayor Fitzgerald to permit my return to Congress. If the time has come, as Mayor Fitzgerald seems to think, that I must have his permission to return to Congress, then it's about time that I retire.

"This idea that no man can be nominated for Governor, for Congress or for any office by the Democratic voters unless he receives the permission of Mayor Fitzgerald seems to have taken possession of our non-partisan Mayor. Are the people in accord with it?"

CAMPAIGN SNAPSHOTS AT STATESMEN AND PLAIN POLITICIANS

BY A. POLITICAL SHARPE

ARE you looking for a dear old lady? Well, if you find her, and if you have any respect for her feminine sensibilities, don't take her to Faneuil Hall next Thursday. Faneuil next Thursday will be no place for dear old ladies or ministers' daughters or for anyone else who shuns a racket.

For the Cradle of Liberty will be the stamping ground next Thursday for three, and maybe four, factions of Democracy, each louder of voice than the others, and each convinced that "our candidate" is the only one who can lead the Democratic party to victory this year. And, of course, each one of these factions is the one that has the right dope on the situation. Most certainly.

The Foss adherents know—at least, they say they know—that the Democrat who is to win this year must be a Democrat who will get the support of disgruntled Republicans, and that Foss is the only "that kind of a Democrat."

The Hamlin people say that it would be suicide for the Democratic party to nominate a man who won't get every vote in the ranks of organized labor; that Foss will drive labor votes away from the Democrats, and that Hamlin is a man who can hold them together as well as attract the G. O. P. disgruntled ones.

And then there's Vahey, whose friends know just as surely as they know their own names that their Jim is a second Billy Russell, and that he is destined to do as Russell did—meet defeat twice and win the third time.

As for the delegates. Well, pity 'tis that we haven't got direct nominations for all offices in Massachusetts. The Foss folks would have you believe that the biggest part of the delegates have been in Mr. Foss's pockets for many months. Beginning to look now though as if Mr. Foss neglected to pin the flap down over the pocket after he had the delegates within.

Just Remember This.

WHEN the chosen delegates of the peepul are gathered together in Faneuil Hall next Thursday, it will be well for them to bear in mind one thing—that a few blocks away, in Tremont Temple, the Republicans are nominating a square jawed, two-fisted gentleman who isn't afraid of a fight and who has been doing his best to consolidate his party, while some of those who want to be the Democratic candidates have been splitting their party into fractions.

The gathering in Tremont Temple next Thursday will be a good deal like the gathering in Faneuil Hall—not. Both of them will be conventions. The similarity will end right there, however. The latter will be a gathering of gentlemen who don't know where they're going, but are on their way. The former will be an assembly of gentlemen who know where they're going and will go there jolly well, because Papa Lodge will spank 'em and put 'em to bed without any supper if they don't.

If you find that dear old lady, you might bring her down to the Tremont Temple convention. 'Twill be a good place to sleep. She may be waked up once or twice by squeaky planks in the Walker platform, but on the whole, it will be a pianissimo affair.

The "L" Got a Few Slams. Likewise the New Haven:

They certainly did. And several Mr. Fixits on corporation pay-rolls are chasing around trying to tell successful anti-corporation candidates how glad "our people" are that they were nominated. Of course, it wouldn't be charitable to say that any corporations hereabouts really gave financial help to any candidates in the primary contests. Certainly not. Doesn't the law forbid such doings?

True, some candidates did spend more money than they could earn in a couple of years. True, also, those candidates were in constant communication with the gentlemen who loaf around the State House lobby, while the Legislature is in session. But to return to our story.

The political dope-sheet handed to the corporations this year was a bit off on who were due to win, and in many instances the candidates for whom the corporations were paying went down in defeat. Worse than that—in one district, a man who was expected to be defeated for a Senatorial nomination because of his labor record in the House, but who did win, has it in his crop that somebody promised him $900 to help out his campaign.

The 900 did not mature beyond the promise stage. Rumor now has it that the somebody who is said to have made the promise blames somebody higher up for the breaking of the promise. Mr. Somebody is so worked up over the thing that it is said he intends to resign from his corporation job.

Jim Cavanagh Wins. No Thanks to Evans.

WHETHER you live in Truro on the Cape or Stockbridge in the Berkshires you will be pleased to learn that Representative James F. Cavanagh of Everett has been renominated. Cavanagh is the man who pushed the Southbridge Bank investigation. He was the father of a law which safeguards the interests of the depositors and curbs the men behind the bank rail from manipulating funds too easily.

Perhaps Mr. Cavanagh doesn't know it but that cute little Senator, Wilmot R. Evans, Jr., whose father is a bank man, did a whole lot to prevent Cavanagh from being renominated. Evans is now telling Cavanagh what a fine chap he is, how much he thinks of him, and so on and so forth. Pretty cute, Wilmot is.

The People Want to Be Shown.

THE near-candidacy of Police Commissioner O'Meara in the Eleventh Congressional district served at least one good purpose. It taught Mr. O'Meara and other men who think they're a little better than the plain people that the job is always bigger than the man, no matter how big the man is or how big he may think he is.

Mr. O'Meara was patted on the back and coddled and told that he was the one man who could beat Fitzgerald in the Mayoralty campaign of 1907. Lodge tried hard to get O'Meara to run. But Stephen wouldn't. Last Winter it was the other way around. Mr. O'Meara tried to get a nomination for Mayor without appearing to seek it. His lightning rod was up for several days before he realized that he didn't have a look-in.

Then came the Congressional ambition. A little bird brought the news to this office almost as soon as the Commissioner began the thinking end of his campaign. The day has gone, however, when men may set themselves up for an office and win it without doing any work or without telling the voters where they stand on public questions. There is enough danger to the public in men who make promises and break them. There is far greater danger, and the people know it, in men of the "I'm-all-right-the-people-know-I'm-honest" type.

Hatchets are Whirring.

HAVE a care when you're walking through School street during the next few weeks. One of those hatchets aimed at City Hall is apt to fall short and do you damage. If you want to get a line on the number of hatchets that are being ground for use on a chap who flew eight minutes with Grahame-White, just travel around town and listen to the talk on the street corners.

Many of the candidates who blame Mayor Fitzgerald for their defeats last [illegible] who were not entitled support from anybody [illegible] stances the defeats have saved the good name of the district.

But keep your eye on a man named Joseph F. O'Connell, and on another man named David B. Shaw, and on another man named Thomas J. Giblin. And while you're about it, just keep your eye also on Mr. James H. Vahey. His use for a hatchet on the chief tenant of City Hall dates farther back. But James has a good memory.

As for John A. Keliher—well, two years ago Fitz tried to put the hooks into Keliher and failed. Last Winter, Keliher tried to do the same thing to Fitz and failed. This year you all know what [illegible] And next year? Well, who knows?

Red Light on the Track for Barnes of Weymouth.

IT will be well for former Representative George Barnes of Weymouth to keep his eye on certain folks in Quincy. Barnes has won the Republican nomination for Senator in the First Norfolk District by all the rules of politics. Friends of Senator Hultman are trying to induce Former Mayor Charles H. Bryant of Quincy to run against Barnes in the convention.

ALL FOR HAMLIN.

Mayor Ashley Says New Bedford Delegation Is Solid.

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 1.—Mayor Charles S. Ashley, thirteen times Mayor of New Bedford, set at rest last night all rumors to the effect that there was a division among the eighteen delegates from this city regarding their choice for Governor at the Democratic convention Thursday. The Mayor got busy on the telephone as soon as he heard a story that the ranks of the delegates were broken and in the course of a couple of hours announced that the eighteen were solid for Charles S. Hamlin.

It also became known that Mr. Ashley did not allow his friendship for Mayor Fitzgerald to interfere with his activities in Mr. Hamlin's behalf. Two or three days ago Mayor Fitzgerald sent an agent to New Bedford to enlist the Mayor on Foss's side.

MIDDLESEX CONVENTION.

Republicans Name Candidates on Wednesday.

The Middlesex County Republican convention will be held Wednesday in Lincoln Hall, Lowell. Arthur M. Pollard of Lowell, chairman of the Middlesex County Republican Committee, will preside. Sheriff John R. Fairbairn of East Cambridge and County Commissioners Chester B. Williams of Wayland and Charles H. Richardson of Lowell will come up for renomination and will have no opposition. After the county convention will come the District Attorney convention. District Attorney John J. Higgins of Somerville is seeking a second term. His only opponent will be Max Waldo Cohen of Cambridge, formerly of Chelsea.

On the Democratic side of the fence, James J. Irwin of Everett will probably oppose Higgins. Attorney Frank McDermott of North Cambridge was a candidate, but withdrew. Attorney John J. Scott of Cambridge has also been mentioned as a possible candidate.

ONLY ONE CHANGE IN REPUBLICAN TICKET

James M. Swift to Run in Place of Dana Malone for Attorney-General

[illegible] Republican State Convention in Tremont Temple next Thursday [illegible] twenty [illegible] into battle next [illegible] ticket as last year's save for the [illegible] tion of James Marcus Swift of Fall River to be Attorney General.

Mr. Swift will be thirty-seven years old just before election day. He was graduated from the Harvard Law School just before the Spanish War broke out and he has three times been elected District Attorney for the Southern District. Mr. Swift takes Dana Malone's place on the ticket.

Draper for Governor, Frothingham for second place, Olin for Secretary of the Commonwealth, Stevens for treasurer and Farr for auditor—James M. Swift's will be the one new face.

Congressman Washburn will preside. General Guild will make the Draper speech and Robert M. Washburn will present the name of Frothingham.

One question will penetrate this Republican convention: [illegible]

INSURGENTS VICTORIOUS

Sixth Plymouth District Likely to Name Anti-Lodge Man.

WAREHAM, Oct. 1.—There is a peculiar situation in the Republican politics in the Sixth Plymouth Representative District, which includes Mattapoisett, Marion, Rochester, Lakeville, Wareham and Carver. According to the custom this year Mattapoisett has her turn and the Republicans of that town are booming Horace Field, a member of the Selectment. Mr. Field is a Lodge supporter and for that reason many of the local Republicans opposed him in the caucus. A surprise came at the last moment when delegates pledged to J. [illegible] Kiernan, a young lawyer opposed to Senator Lodge, were elected. The Kiernan forces had captured the Rochester delegate. This gives Kiernan five out of twelve votes in the convention and many of the small towns of the district have unpledged delegates. This makes a good fighting chance for Kiernan to get the Republican nomination from the Insurgents.

If so there will be no operation.

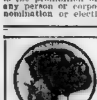
Little Home Helps On How to Be Beautiful



By MADAME MAREE

SYMMETRY OF FORM.

Symmetrical lines and beauty of form are woman's by Divine right, and while Nature has been lax in many instances, it lies within the power of every woman to have a plump and beautiful figure and banish forever those ugly, scrawny lines so jarring to the eye. Massaging is primitive and only local in effect, and the woman who would have a plump figure must follow the example of la dame Parisian—use the Vancaire treatment and build up from the inside. To prepare this treatment, make a simple syrup with a cup and a half of granulated sugar and enough water to make a pint. To this add one ounce of true galol (be careful not to get the synthetic). Shake well, and then take two tablespoonfuls two or three times each day and soon you will have a well rounded and attractive form.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Della K.: Clogging of your skin's pores may be due to excessive use of powder, which is apt to cause blackheads and pimply eruptions and coarsen the skin. If you will use the following as a massage, it will clean and clear the skin and give it that pink, satiny glow of youth: Bring a pint of water to the boiling point, then pour into a pint jar and add three ounces of cerol crystals, stirring constantly until thoroughly dissolved and a thick, greaseless cream is formed. Use this freely, massaging into face, neck and arms until it disappears, it will not grow hair, and you will never have to use powder or rouge.

D. N.: Your falling hair is due to an excess of dandruff, and the best shampoo I can recommend is eggol, which removes dandruff and acts as a scalp food. Use this eggol shampoo every two weeks at the start, followed with a tonic made by adding one-half pint of pure water to the same amount of grain alcohol; let stand for five minutes, then put in one ounce of beta-canthol. Use the tonic daily for a month, then twice a week after that. This treatment will stop the hair from falling out and make it grow in thick and glossy.

Ruth S.: Don't be discouraged. The hairs on your chin are easily removed by using a paste of powdered delol and warm water. Take a little delol and add just enough water to form a soft paste; cover the hairy spot thickly with this and let it remain for two or three minutes, then scrape off and you will find the hairs have disappeared. You can get delol from your druggist, in ounce bottles, and while it is slightly expensive, it is worth several times its cost, as it is unfailing.

Dorothy M.: For that roughness and "lobster hue" to the skin of which you write, I would suggest using the amarol preparation, which is made by dissolving, thoroughly, two ounces of amarol in one pint of hot water. Shake this well and let stand over night, then apply as you would any complexion lotion and your skin will soon become smooth and clear and resume its natural flesh tint.

Live Rubber Soles and Heels

Are Invisible, Safe, Light, Durable and Effectively Protect You Against Climatic Changes.

You can dismiss the rubber overshoe question absolutely.

Why, people who wear them couldn't be induced to go without—they're such comfort—always your silent partner. With them, cold, damp, slippery spots have no terrors for you.

You know Rubbers and Overshoes wear out quickly at the heels—then are useless; they sweat the feet, rot the leather and add to the weight you've got to lift at each step.

Live Rubber Soles and Heels will do all that you expect of Rubbers or Overshoes—inexpensively—they are the demand of reason and they fill the requirement.

Made for Men's and Women's Shoes, light or heavy. First-class shoe dealers will supply you. $1.50 for the soles, 50c for the heels; combination $1.75. If your dealer can't supply you, send his name to the makers.

MILLIONS TO BE EXPENDED BY STATE ON HARBOR

Gov. Draper Declares That With Vast Sum Available No Steamship Company Need Look Elsewhere for Terminal Facilities.

Massachusetts to Erect as Many Piers as Are Needed and Will Meet All the Requirements of the Companies Needing Docks.

"MASSACHUSETTS believes in the maritime future of Boston and has demonstrated its desire to assist in developing the port. The Commonwealth stands ready to spend $3,000,000 to increase the terminal facilities of the port in whatever way the funds are needed."

Governor Eben S. Draper has the greatest belief in the port of Boston, says the State stands ready to give decisive aid in the work of development and, in an interview given exclusively to the Sunday American, states his views and gives his opinions on the harbor question. Continuing, Governor Draper said:

"The Legislature has voted this sum, which is at the disposal of the Harbor and Land Commission. No steamship company which seeks to locate here need turn away because it cannot find docks.

"The State will erect on Bird Island Flats as many piers as are needed, and will build them to suit prospective tenants. Surely that is as much as anyone could expect from the Commonwealth in the way of attracting business."

"Is it possible for the State to go after business?"

State Could Do More.

"Yes, to a certain extent. I think there is no reason why the Commonwealth, through the Harbor and Land Commission, could not call the attention of a business concern seeking a location to what it has to offer. I do not understand that advertising its advantages or canvassing actively for business is part of the duties of a State to its people, but if the Legislature appropriated money for that purpose I suppose it could do so done.

"I do not agree with those who think that Massachusetts is standing still. The latest census reports show that the increase in population of Boston and other Massachusetts cities keeps pace with the rest of the country, save in a few places where phenomenal growth is reported. Our industries are certainly increasing in a healthy manner.

"The commerce of the port of Boston must increase with the development of the great country north of us. The Canadian ports will always be closed by ice half the year and Boston will profit by Canada's growth. There is a limit to the capacity of the port of New York and when that limit is reached trade is sure to flow in this direction.

Signs Are Encouraging.

"The signs point to an immediate improvement in port conditions. During the past year I have leased two great waterfront properties, which for many years have been idle, and the State will receive a rental from them of $120,000 a year. The magnitude of the business to be transacted upon these piers is shown by the ability to pay such a rent. I refer to the Commonwealth Pier at South Boston, and the adjoining property where a new pier will be erected for the Boston Fish Market.

"So great is the confidence of the lessees of these properties in the future of Boston that they wanted to buy the piers outright, but we refused to sell.

"As soon as the harbor line is approved by the National Government, the Harbor and Land Commission will be ready to receive applications for dock space on Bird Island Flats, and the commission is prepared to go right ahead and build according to specifications.

"The State has done all in its power to improve the facilities of the port and business will no longer be handicapped by inadequate wharfage. It is now up to our business men."

"Do you think that a State guarantee of additional business to steamship companies in return for bigger and better ships is practical?"

"That is a matter for the Legislature to answer. It would require the expenditure of large sums of public money and it

Julia Ward Howe Gets Third College Degree Wednesday

Smith Institution to Confer Doctorate on Venerable Writer and Leader.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is to receive her third doctor's next Wednesday.

Forty years ago she was awarded the degree Doctor of Laws by Tufts College. In the year 1900 she was awarded the degree of Doctor of Literature by Brown University.

Next Wednesday she will receive a degree by Smith College at Northampton, on the occasion of the inauguration of the Reverend Marian L. Burton, D. D., as the new president of Smith.

Mrs. Howe, who has been spending the season at her Newport Summer home, will go to Northampton for the inaugural and for the reception of her latest degree. There is much interest as to what this degree from Smith College is to be. It was reported from Northampton last night that the college authorities had not fully decided upon that point yet.

The venerable leader of woman suffrage was ninety-one years old on May 27, last. Her age and her prominent position in the social and educational life of the country make her coming to Smith College one of the features of the inauguration.

MRS. REID BEVERLY GUEST.

Ambassador's Wife Visits Mrs. Taft Today.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, wife of the American Ambassador to Great Britain, is today the guest of Mrs. William H. Taft at the Summer White House in Beverly. Mrs. Reid left Cambridge to-day and made the trip to Beverly by auto. For the past week Mrs. Reid has been the guest of Professor Max Kellner, D. D., of the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, and Mrs. Kellner, at their home in Berkeley street, Cambridge. The two women have been friends since their school days. Professor and Mrs. Kellner have twice been the guests of Ambassador and Mrs. Reid at Dorchester House, London, and at their country place, West Park.

CRASH IN THE AIR.

Aeroplanes Collide for the First Time, One Man Dying.

MILAN, Oct. 1.—A collision in mid-air between two aeroplanes, the first in the history of aviation, startled the big crowd at the local aviation meet to-day and resulted in the serious injury of the two pilots, Captain Dickson, an English army aviator and a Frenchman named Thomas. Dickson is believed to be fatally injured. Thomas' injuries were of the head and legs.

The collision resulted from the loss of control of his machine by Thomas, owing to the breaking of his rudder wires. The planes crashed at a height of 150 feet, and tumbled headlong to the ground.

HEAR WHITE EXCEPTIONS.

Case of Sentenced Mayor Before Judge Schofield.

Judge Schofield of the Superior Court gave a private hearing yesterday in the lobby of the court house on the question putting into shape the bill of exceptions in the case of former Mayor William White of Lawrence for the purpose of argument before the full bench of the Supreme Court at Salem early in November. District Attorney Peters appeared for the government and former Attorney General Herbert Parker for the defendant. White was sentenced to three years in the House of Correction for bribery in connection with the appointment of the chief engineer of the fire department.

TO BURY MRS. CRIPPEN.

Certificate Issued in Case of the Woman Slain in London.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The remains of Belle Elmore Crippen, which were discovered in the cellar of Dr. H. H. Crippen's home in Hilldrop Crescent, and for whose murder Crippen will be tried this month, will be given Christian burial in a few days. A coroner's certificate was issued to-day. Friends of Mrs. Crippen will inter the remains in Highgate Cemetery.

SPAIN FEARS CLASH.

Authorities Alarmed Over Demonstrations to Be Held Today.

MADRID, Oct. 1.—Government officials and military authorities are plainly alarmed to-day lest to-morrow's clerical and anti-clerical demonstrations, planned for the purpose of over awing members of the Cortes on the eve of its assembling, will result in serious clashes. Formidable military preparations have been made all over Spain to deal with the threatened crisis. Despite the fact that the clericals have promised that they will assemble unarmed there is grave fear that under the stress of counter demonstrations, the passions engendered by the church controversy will sweep the assemblages into hostile outbreaks.

RADCLIFFE GIRLS TO PLAY BASEBALL THIS YEAR

National Game Is Made a Part of the College Curriculum.

UNIFORMS ARE SELECTED

Several Teams Are to Be Formed; Course of Formation; Site of Diamond Decided Upon.

Next spring no Radcliffe co-ed whose physique she is not up to the mark in brilliancy will be debarred in baseball teams that are in process of formation at Radcliffe College. It was announced yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Wright, who is in charge of the physical instruction at the college.

An effort in this sport will be made the first time form a conspicuous part of the Radcliffe athletic training this year. It will be made to subserve the individuality and teach the players the value of unity in action or team play.

The girl who fails to look out a ball or muffs a fly with the sun in her eyes may be gently chided, but she will not be put out of the game. In fact, it is that sort of girl, or more particularly the less athletic girl, who will be cheered to better endeavors.

Nine's Uniforms.

The girls are to wear skirts at least five inches from the ground, white jumper blouses and rubber soled shoes. The games will take place in the rear of the residence houses on Shepard street, Cambridge.

"We have come to believe that out-door sports, when possible, are better for the girls than the gymnasium work," said Miss Wright to the Boston Sunday American. "Our aim is not at all to make baseball players out of the girls, but to have the assurance that they get at least two hours each week of healthful outdoor recreation. To be sure we shall try for skill at the game, because anything worth doing at all is worth doing well.

"I feel that physical training is of great educational value. Aside from the wonders it works in a girl's health, it also is an adjunction in itself. Through co-operative work and team work such as baseball, tennis, field hockey and track athletics, I am sure the girls will acquire a fine sense of values, will learn to submerge the individual personality and appreciate the value of unity and co-operation.

"Quite a number of girls have already registered for the baseball work. No girl at this college is required to take any work of this sort, but if she elects it and registers for it, she is required to keep up to the standard if she doesn't she is requested to drop it. The girls will also learn to be good losers and good winners.

Ranked for Work.

"The competitive side of the work will not be emphasized and the girls will be ranked for honest effort rather than results achieved. The limitations not upon action will be taken into consideration and the unusual girls enjoyed by others will be guided and conserved. When the competitive side of any sport, including baseball, is emphasized the result is that a selected few do all the play and are inclined to over-exercise while the weaker girls only get a chance to act as spectators and cheer the players. I would that sort of thing. I want the girls to be so busy playing that they don't have any chance to sit down and encourage the more clever girls. It is just those weaker girls who need the exercise. They are the ones we especially want to help.

"The girls are allowed to choose which sport she will take up, but, of course, we consider that sport too strenuous for her constitution, we will suggest that she take one that will not tax her strength quite as much.

"There may be some girls for whom all the four sports—baseball, tennis, field hockey and track athletics may be too much. I may have to organize croquet clubs or walking squads for those with some organic trouble.

Real League Ball.

"The baseball games will take place in the rear of the residence houses on Shepard street. We have not been out on the field yet, and have not selected the teams. It will take a few days of practice to sort out the teams, assign the players to their places and rank the team according to their experience and ability in playing.

"The girls will be required to attend these sports just as if they were gymnasium periods.

"The game will be played just as the men play it, although for the freshmen we shall have to use a somewhat softer ball."

WOMEN TO BE ASKED TO TESTIFY IN SCHEFTELS RAID CASES

To Be Asked to Tell What They Know of Money Taken From Customers.

EMPLOYES LEFT UNPAID

MANY women, some of whom have figured prominently in Boston society, will be called as witness at the trials of the prisoners taken in the country-wide raid on the brokerage firm of Scheftels & Co., who had offices in Boston, many other American cities and in Paris.

The main office of the alluring stock concern was in New York, where George Graham Rice was arrested as the man behind the game and was released in $15,000 bail. The women who may be called upon to testify, besides many who are invested in the widely advertised stocks are:

Miss Esther Quinn of Cambridge, caused a sensation when she sued Professor Harry Thurston Peck of Columbia for alleged breach of promise of marriage. Miss Quinn was connected with the Boston office of the concern as a stenographer and bookkeeper.

Mrs. George M. Holbrooke, wife of the manager of the Boston office. Holbrooke is now locked up in the Charles Street Jail.

Edna Goodrich, who, when she was on the stage, was well known in Boston. She married Nat C. Goodwin, the comedian, who helped to boom the mining stocks in this country and in Paris, but he got out of the scheme some time ago.

Miss Bessie Lafell, herself once an actress and now the strong defender of George Graham Rice, in New York. Rice is said to have loaded her with diamonds and money.

Holbrookes Are Friendless.

Mrs. Holbrooke was granted a pass to the jail from United States Marshal Guy Murchie yesterday. This was her second pass to the jail to see her husband. Mrs. Holbrooke had been trying hard to raise $5,000 bail money for her husband. She felt that the associates of her husband in New York might have come to his aid.

The Holbrookes have few friends in Boston to whom they can turn in such a serious emergency as this. They came over here from New York only last January, when the Boston firm of the Scheftels concern was opened at No. 62 Devonshire street. Holbrooke didn't want to come here at that time for he has cared for the Boston situation since.

Several of the minor employes in the Boston office tried in vain yesterday to get the balance of pay coming to them. They went to the Devonshire street office and were greeted by closed doors. Then they sought United States District Attorney French and asked for jail passes.

"If we can see Holbrooke," they said, "he may pay us all."

But Mr. French was obliged to refuse, as the pass privilege is limited to immediate relatives and counsel of prisoners.

Frederick P. Schmid, special agent for the Department of Justice, who directed the Boston raid last Thursday, returned yesterday from New York. He went over there Thursday night, taking over subpoenaed witnesses and the books and papers seized in the Boston office. The documents made thirty big bundles.

Who Is the Manager?

Among the witnesses who were summoned to New York are R. W. Gnekow, said to be the son of Mrs. George Graham Rice by a former husband. Gnekow was attached to the Boston office. While he was thought to be an employe there, he is now reported to have been the real manager, while Holbrooke posed as a member of the firm. Holbrooke told Commissioner Hayes, however, that he is only an employe.

Miss Bessie Lafell, who has been mentioned as the "silent partner" of Rice, cleared away much of the mystery shrouding her individuality by a second statement to Boston Sunday American reporters in New York.

"I shall stick to Mr. Rice through thick and through thin," she said. "I will pawn my jewels, if necessary. Yes, he gave me some very costly diamonds, but of his own prompting. He is the best-hearted fellow I ever met in my life."

"Didn't I tell you that Mr. Rice would surrender himself? There's none of the welcher in him. They tell me I am to be a witness for the Government. Well, I will tell all I know. I was born on the other side of the Atlantic. When I came to America I made my home in Kentucky. Ever since I was fifteen I have struggled alone in this world. I am only twenty-one, and if I look older, it is because of what I have been through.

"At one time I was on the stage. I was in the 'Yankee Doodle' and 'Miss Innocence.' But I never cared for the life of a showgirl. It is a hard life. The stage makes women old before their time."

TWO OF THE WOMEN WHO ARE MENTIONED IN SCHEFTELS CASE.

Massachusetts Shows Missouri Who's Sixth Now

Population Figures Show Bay State Has Displaced Her Former Rival.

Massachusetts is the sixth State in the Union in population, according to the indications of the census so far disclosed, thus taking the place that has been held by Missouri.

"Show me," has been the demand of Missouri for years.

"Well, do it," remarked Massachusetts, quietly.

The population of Missouri has been announced as 3,293,335, an increase of 186,670, or about 6 per cent. The indications now are that the total population of the Bay State will reach 3,441,197. If this proves to be true Massachusetts will be in the lead of Missouri by over 148,000.

Ten years ago the population of Missouri was 2,191,995, while that of Massachusetts was 2,805,346. That gave the Western State a lead over this State of more than 300,000.

The returns so far from this State show a gain in population during the past ten years of 234 per cent., and if this gain is maintained that will certainly place Massachusetts in the sixth place. As a matter of fact it will only require a gain of less than 6 per cent. in the rest of the Massachusetts territory that is to be heard from to land this State ahead of Missouri.

PLANT SALE PUZZLE.

Speculation Over Future of Big Shoe Factory.

The recent taking over by the United Shoe Machinery Company of the shoe manufacturing and shoe machinery making business of Thomas G. Plant arises questions of what the United Company will do with Mr. Plant's big shoe factory in Jamaica Plain. Mr. Plant was making $500,000 a year out of his shoe business. According to accepted report he received guaranteed stock in the United Company, to the extent of $5,000,000 for his entire holdings, shoe factory, Wonder Worker shoe machine patents, machine shops and all. It was not supposed at first that the shoe factory was turned over with the Wonder Worker patents and the machine shops. But the Boston News Bureau said yesterday that Mr. Plant's factory and organization were so interwoven with the patent situation that the factory and shoe business went in the sale also. The United Company is making shoe machinery, not shoes. There is no provision in its organization for maintaining a shoe factory.

WOMAN ATTACKS JUDGE.

Knocks Butcher Knife From Her Hand in Street.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Judge Frank Baker, of the branch appellate court, narrowly escaped death to-day when he was attacked with a butcher knife in front of his home by a woman giving the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Burke. Mrs. Burke has been shadowing his home for the past two weeks, Judge Baker said, and when he came from his house to-day she demanded that he give her $100, at the same time drawing the knife. Sidney knocked the weapon from Mrs. Burke's hand. The woman is believed to be insane.

BUFFALO CONVENTION DEALS MIGHTY BLOW FOR IRISH FREEDOM

Most Remarkable Gathering of Erin's Sons Ever Held on American Soil a Succession of Pictures Full of Stirring Incidents and Dramatic Display of Loyalty to the Cause and Patriotism for Land of Nativity.

Representative Men of the Race from All Sections of the United States Give Proof of Their Devotion in the Generous Response to Appeals for Funds with Which to Carry on the National Fight for Home Rule.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Full enthusiasm, real heart whole Celtic enthusiasm; for dramatic incident which stirred the soul and heart; for scenes of the highest standard, for scenes of pathos which made tears flow freely from the eyes of old and young alike and made them unashamed for minutes at a time for practically to quit in a generous stream of financial help for Ireland and here close the convention just held in Buffalo by the United Irish League of America is unexcelled by all who shared in its proceedings as the most remarkable gathering of the Irish race ever held on American soil.

There was no working up of enthusiasm through the arts of music or flowery rhetoric. There was no need of such aids to foment popular enthusiasm. Suppressed feeling there was the ocean, was in the breasts of the delegates, as they took their seats. A fine, impressive, intellectual, noble character, lot of people they were, both men and women, who had traveled across the City of the Lakes from all sections of the country at their own expense for the single sacred object of aiding the cradle land of their race in the final stages of her long fought struggle for national freedom.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF IRISH RACE THERE.

The depth of feeling which animated the delegates made itself manifest from the very opening of the great session on Tuesday morning. It continued to rise, like a mighty tide surging in from the ocean, as the proceedings of the convention progressed.

As I entered the hall early on Tuesday morning it took but a glance to show the representative character of the assembly. The leading men of the Irish race on this continent were standing in groups, here and there, eagerly discussing the different phases of the mighty constitutional conflict in whose success they were so vitally interested.

A momentary survey of the hall made one's eye light upon such distinguished men of the Celtic element in America as Ryan and McCaffrey of Philadelphia, Patrick Egan of New York, former Minister to Chili, first treasurer of the Land League and intimate friend of Parnell; Edward O'Meagher Condon, who first uttered the patass "God save Ireland" from the dock when he was sentenced to death in King land; T. B. Fitzpatrick of Boston, the respected national treasurer of the movement, whom John Redmond declared more than once during the convention is a veritable tower of strength to the Irish cause and scores of others, priests and laymen, who are leaders in their respective halls cities throughout this continent.

Ryan with Historic Gavel.

Then came Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, the nation's president, young, alert and quick moving with the eye of an eagle and a voice of clarion tone when he gives it play. With business written large upon his countenance, Ryan takes his place at the chairman's desk. He is handed a historic gavel by T. V. Powderly, Scranton, Mayor of Scranton, and at one time, chief of the Knights of Labor, the most powerful labor leader in the world.

"That gavel has made history, Mr. Redmond," said Delegate Powderly. "It is the identical gavel that was used at the first convention of the Land League held here in Buffalo thirty years ago, when Parnell was here as envoy from Ireland."

On either side of President Ryan sat Treasurer Fitzpatrick and Secretary O'Callaghan. In the front row behind them was the tall and familiar figure of T. P. O'Connor, M. P., a journalist of fame on two hemispheres; Joseph Devlin, M. P., the silver tongued young orator from Belfast, and Daniel Boyle, M. P., a man of handsome physique and presence, a merchant of Manchester, England, where he is one of the leaders of the United Irish League and member of Parliament for North Mayo. Mr. Boyle is making his first visit to the United States.

The convention was held in Convention Hall on Elmwood avenue, an enormous structure, which at first glance looked rather barn-like for a gathering of 900 people. Those who thought so, however, changed their minds before 6 o'clock that evening when every seat in the vast auditorium was occupied and hundreds were standing in the aisles.

The great interior was mantled with American and Irish flags, which covered the girders and concealed the bareness of the walls. Suspended on the walls also were a number of banners, upon each of which was printed in large lettering memorable sentences from speeches of Parnell, Dillon, Davitt and Boyle O'Reilly. Behind the stage was an immense portrait of Redmond, which was set off by a row of incandescent lights. Beside it was another bearing a message of Bishop Hoban to the Irish people of Buffalo during the proceedings of the convention proper ceased.

The buzz of conversation and interchange of greetings between the delegates suddenly ceased as an impressive little procession was seen advancing up the main aisle. But the hush was only for a moment.

A second later a musical roll of drums announced by a corps of buglers and by the Buffalo executive committee of the Parnell branch of the league, the Bishop of Buffalo, the Most Rev. D. J. Cotton, wearing his episcopal robes of black and crimson, his pectoral cross and his purple biretta, was seen walking as a friend and arm with Mr. Redmond. The venerable prelate and the Irish leader, grasping fully smiled their thanks in response to the rousing greeting of the delegates. Following them came scores of prominent clergymen and men of all walks of life, who are leaders in business and the professions from Maine to California.

Monsignor O'Callaghan Missing.

On all sides were heard inquiries for Monsignor O'Callaghan of South Boston, always a familiar figure at national gatherings of the league, and deep disappointment was expressed when his friend Father Timmins explained that health reasons alone prevented the monsignor from making the journey to Buffalo.

The opening prayer of the convention was offered by Bishop Colton, filled all who heard it with a profound reverence, not only for the great prelate, but for the manner of the prayer and of gratitude to him for the patriotic words he used in his words of the "Holy Father."

The prayer over, President Ryan got down to business like a first-class, cool, cooling like the opening guns of a great battle, was the reading of letters, cables and telegrams after telegrams from the Governors of many States and from mayors of the principal cities in the union, all wishing God-speed to the work of the convention and expressing the deepest sympathy with the object for which it was being held.

Then came the official story of the last two years since the national convention was held in Faneuil Hall. It was a wonderful story of still more wonderful accomplishment by the champions of Ireland in the English Parliament. The laborers' cottages act; the gigantic transfer of the land, now half way accomplished, the new national university, national in its every feature and unrestrained by the slightest interference from outside authority, "Ireland's first real installment of Home Rule," as Redmond called it; the town tenants act, the old age pension's act and other minor measures of reform, all of which have restored to depopulated and impoverished Ireland twenty dollars worth of benefit for every dime expended in the agitation by which they won a place on the statute book.

"But all these are nothing," exclaimed Redmond in his address, "when compared with the work we have yet to do. Home

IRISH LEADERS AT BUFFALO MAKE STRIKE FOR LIBERTY

NATIONHOOD COMES FIRST, SAYS JOHN E. REDMOND

Home rule is not yet won. I believe in my soul that we can win it in the very near future if we have the support, the continued and loyal support, of our people at home and abroad. Nothing that we have gained can be put into the balance with Irish national self-government. Ireland would gladly go back to-morrow to the old days of landlordism and rage and famine sooner than give up her claim to nationhood.

Response to Appeal for Funds Shows Sentiment Among Sons of Erin.

Cheering it up and trampling it under foot as they spoke to-day.

"We cannot do it if we have not at our back the moral and financial assistance of our people in this country, and in Mr Ryan we have a guarantee that we will not only get the confidence and respect of the American citizens for our cause, but we will also get such material assistance as is necessary.

A Great Dramatic Scene.

"We are grateful to him for what he has done to day, because he has given to us at this critical moment, the most critical for Ireland that has arisen in our lifetime, the assurance that we need now not fear to appeal America, that we can look for wise counsel, for well considered and moderate action, and for all the support that is necessary to enable us to carry our cause to a triumph."

One more scene was only needed to make the convention a memorable one for all the future years to the Irish. Of those who attended in its closing hours, it was the speech, a delightful, touching, and eloquent address, all too short, made by Miss Martha Murray of Buffalo, who was at the head of the ladies' reception committee.

Miss Murray was about to leave the hall when President Ryan called her back and invited her to come to the platform.

The young lady's words were touching in the extreme.

MILK FUND GROWS.

12,250 Bottles Distributed in Boston Last Week.

The officers of the Milk and Baby Hygiene Association are gratified at the manner in which public spirited Boston citizens have responded to the appeal for funds with which to carry on the good work the association is doing.

It has been possible for the institution to meet its bills to date, but now a small amount on hand will suffice to make the work for the week complete. It is the earnest hope of the officers of the association that the generous response being made will bring "up to the line" the amount needed to make the work of the organization for the coming year. Over 800 babies in Boston are being cared for and last week 12,250 bottles of milk were distributed.

BISHOP LAWRENCE STARTS.

Goes to Cincinnati to Attend the Episcopal Convention.

Bishop Lawrence will leave to-morrow to attend the triennial general convention of the Episcopal church, which meets in Cincinnati. He will preside at the sessions of the House of Bishops.

Dr. Lawrence will be one of the guests Clubin Hotel to-night, by the Boston Clericus Club. Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody of Groton, and Rev. Henry S. Nash of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, will go from Massachusetts as clerical delegates to this convention.

The Bishop has issued his report for the year. It is this season in Westgate Hall and will be continued to-morrow. He will give an account of his experiences in Persia and Palestine.

Rev. S. McCauley will speak at Chapel Hall to-morrow before the Baptist ministers upon the Word in Boston in 1911.

PLAN BIG FAIR.

Lynn Society Has Committee to Make Arrangements.

Daniel Bowler, Edward Foley, James Cunningham, James Lennon, Michael Cronin, Daniel Alexander Meghen, Thomas Frazier and John Joyce. The committee on arrangements consists of Rev. Dr. Thomas J. Lawrence, Rev. Joseph A. Sullivan, Rev. Daniel J. Lyons, Rev. Michael J. Scully, Rev. Edward Murphy, Rev. John Boden and Rev. Thomas Parker. Daniel Bowler has been appointed floor counsel for the committee on arrangements, Thomas Frazier, Peter Cahill, Daniel Foley, William O'Connor and Martin Travers.

FAXON CLUB'S BALL.

Young Men of Roxbury Crossing Will Entertain November 7.

Monday evening, November 7, the annual ball of the Faxon Club of Roxbury will be held in Intercolonial Hall. A committee of the following young men of Roxbury Crossing and Mount Pleasant has been appointed to arrange for the event: Thomas Dunn, Thomas Dunn, Alexander Meghen, Thomas Frazier and John Joyce. The committee on arrangements consists of Rev. Dr. Thomas J. Lawrence, Rev. Joseph A. Sullivan, Rev. Daniel J. Lyons, Rev. Michael J. Scully, Rev. Edward Murphy, Rev. John Boden and Rev. Thomas Parker. Daniel Bowler has been appointed floor counsel for the committee on arrangements, Thomas Frazier, Peter Cahill, Daniel Foley, William O'Connor and Martin Travers.

HONOR COLUMBUS AS HERO, SAYS LEVERONI

"Columbus Day should be observed equally with the Fourth of July, Washington's or Lincoln's birthdays.

"The unveiling of the Columbus monument in Washington, July, 1911, will awaken America to the importance of what this discoverer stood for."

Thus says Judge Frank Leveroni, who represents the Italian consul, Gaitano Peccardi, in Boston.

In an interview given the Sunday American, Judge Frank Leveroni, who represents the Italian Consul, Gaitano Peccardi, in Boston, gave the following reasons why Columbus Day should be observed as a national holiday:

"It is the most natural thing to observe Columbus Day, especially when we are thinking of what concerns the welfare and progress of the nation. We are now commemorating many national events like the Fourth of July, Washington's Birthday and Lincoln's Birthday, the names are intimately linked with events in this country which cannot be forgotten.

"The discovery of this nation is as interesting as any of the events which bear upon the growth and development of the country. Columbus was an unique character. He was the product of his time. He was of a progressive nature and of a scientific turn of mind, and after his trip to Iceland he brought more than ever in touch with the spirit of discovery. He read the books of many of those days. The travels of Marco Polo were eagerly devoured by him, and he was thoroughly familiar with the descriptions of its wealth and resources.

"There was a commercial side to the discovery of America. I forget the exact figures, but it is enough to say that the profits could not separate this side from the idea of discovery. The two must be considered together. The world of the days of Columbus was somewhat under the Moslem power. Commercial routes must be found to show that the world outside did not lie in the east. There was a world beyond the seas. This was constantly talked about. It fired the spirit of Columbus. He met with many reverses and was not until he received the sympathy of Isabella of Spain did the hope of his dreams come to the seas become more than a dream.

"The discovery of Columbus, as a result, has made acquainted with all the surprises we have to-day. Columbus, in fact, discovered the Western continent. It remained for progress and enterprise to accomplish results at the expense of many lives.

"It is, in short, a homely custom to set apart a day when we can review and increase the interest in the life and doings of Columbus. The interest will reach its zenith when that monument to his memory is dedicated in October, 1911, in Washington. United States senators from Connecticut have enacted a law to observe Columbus Day. I understand that a bill in the Massachusetts legislature will be introduced in the January session to make the day a legal holiday.

"Columbus was a hero; his ingenuity, his skill, his endurance should be made an object lesson to the youth of America.

"Columbus turned commerce from the East to the West.

"Columbus was a hero; his ingenuity, his skill, his endurance should be made an object lesson to the youth of America.

HELEN TAFT IN CHARGE.

Temporary Mistress of Summer White House.

BEVERLY, Oct. 1.—Miss Helen Taft is the mistress of the Summer White House here during the absence of Mr. Taft, who left here early to day to join the President in New York. Mrs. John Hamilton Gray accompanied Mrs. Taft to New York where President Taft spoke to-night before the National Export Exposition. It is said the President had planned to meet Mr Taft and Mrs. Gray at the midnight train, but on account of a message he received from his brother, Charles P. Taft, saying he was ill, he will remain over to-morrow in New York and visit Mr. Taft's brother at his home on the Cedric from Europe. The doctor in charge of Mr. Taft's brother in New York, Mrs. Taft left at midnight in the President's special car for Beverly.

BROCKTON WOMAN IS 100.

Her Prayer for Son Long Missing Was Answered.

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Marie M. Turcotte, who for five years never rested a night without going on her knees and praying that one day her son, who had left home in a fit of anger, would return, is now 100 years old to-day. Her prayer was answered, but in a way she never expected. Her son, whose condition has puzzled a dozen physicians, returned home, but not in the manner expected by his mother. Over five years ago he was stricken with paralysis and became helpless. The mother called for Father Peter Turcotte, a priest of the parish, and he administered the last sacraments of the church. Over five years ago Father Turcotte died, but the mother still prayed for her son. Last August her son returned to his home and for the first time in over five years. Perplexed on one side her life was despoiled, but on the other side her prayer was answered. The brightened Faculty was born in Levallois-Perret, France, and is the daughter of Augustine Turcotte, No. 500 Main street.

ADAM'S APPLE BASIS OF AN INSANITY CURE

Removal of Nearly All of Thyroid Gland Advocated by Boston Specialist.

The removal of four-fifths of the thyroid gland, familiarly known as "the Adam's apple," with the knife, is one of the latest and most remarkable cures that has been discovered for certain forms of insanity, according to Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, the noted Boston nerve specialist.

A new serum has also been discovered which has been found wonderfully effective in the treatment of general paralysis, commonly known as paresis, and one of the most dreaded of mental maladies. Hope for those thus mentally afflicted, which it has hitherto been generally believed could not be given.

Dr. B. has pointed out that most of the asylums of the country are inadequately supported by the states, patients pouring and that many lives are thrown away because of this lack of equipment and lack of knowledge of those who are in charge of the insane.

Long Steps Toward a Cure.

But through the persistent study of the subject and experiments along all lines that promise success, Dr. Briggs declares that important steps in advancement have been made in the treatment and cure of this frightful malady.

Dementia paralytica, known as paresis, the most dreaded of all mental diseases, Dr. Briggs has an interview with a reporter of the Boston Sunday American, he explains, and the malady, long considered without a cure, has yielded to the specific influence of a serum made from the infants brought that have attacked with the disease.

"German physicians, Dr. Robertson of Glasgow, Dr. Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute in Washington, Dr. John O'Brien of the Massillon, Ohio, hospital, and a noted physician in Brighton, Eng., have made a serum which, in certain cases, has apparently actually helped patients suffering from the disease.

"It is but the custom of physicians to make feeble claim to the discovery of a specific or cure, after experimenting for a few months in one station, but after the research has been carried on for years as it has in the case of the serum which is now being used with success, the general paralysis and locomotor ataxia if acquired soon enough.

Thyroid Gland Blamed.

"Two other forms of mental disorder, known as dementia præcox and manic-depressive insanity, are now acknowledged by the best authorities to be forms of auto-intoxication, the poisoning of the thyroid gland is accepted by certain men as the cause of the former mental disease.

"It is said over and over by cases that have been operated upon under Dr Henry Plummer's direction have shown a most marked improvement and in some cases complete recovery by the removal of four-fifths of the thyroid gland. These instances go to show that mental disturbances are caused by physical diseases.

"Insanity may be the result of fever, and, in the onset of acute mania, several, and, in which symptoms and pulse vary ranging from 100 to 140. At this time, there is an increase in the number of white corpuscles of the blood, from three to twelve per cent of the body. This is nature's effort to overcome the poison which is the cause of delirium or mental confusion. Then comes the attack and examination of the poisonous germs among they these various poisons are found. Then there is hope. Two very presence of these implies that the organism is making a fight and may recover. Then the physician that the battle is over and that remains no further treatment, for the poisons have got the upper hand.

Bacilli's Deadly Work.

"Now, as to the progress of these germs in the nervous system from the viscera, they are carried to the blood by a vein which nourishes it. If, through some reason, the poisons have overworked the overworked outbreak or undermined the system, the disease will be the poisons. It is assumed now the poisonous bacilli enter the blood from the viscera, and, in varying from 100 to 140. Discuss Newspapers.

"The Moral Problem of the Newspaper" will be discussed by the Unitarian ministers of Cambridge to-morrow at 1 p. m. at the residence of Rev. George Ilsley Reed of No. 76 Common street, Belmont. All ministers are cordially invited.

YOU CAN INTEREST HIM

Any Man Over Fifty.

You can interest any man over fifty years of age in anything that will make him feel better, because while he may not as yet have any positive organic disease he no longer feels the buoyancy and vigor of twenty-five nor the freedom from aches and pains he enjoyed in earlier years, and he very naturally examines with interest any proposition looking to the improvement and preservation of his health.

He will notice among other things that the stomach of fifty is a very different one from the stomach he possessed at twenty-five. That greatest care must be ever cited as to what is eaten and how much of it, and even with the best of care there will be increasing digestive weakness with advancing years.

A proposition to perfect or improve the digestion and assimilation of food is one which interests not only every man of fifty years of age, but every man and child of any age, because the whole secret of good health, good blood, strong nerves, is to have a stomach which will promptly and thoroughly digest wholesome food, because blood, nerves, brain tissue and every other constituent of the body is entirely the product of digestion, and no medicine or "health" food can possibly create pure blood or restore shaky nerves when a weak stomach is replenishing the daily wear and tear of the body from a mass of undigested and decomposed food.

No, the stomach itself wants help, and in no roundabout way, either, it wants direct, unmistakable assistance, such as is given by one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

These tablets cure stomach trouble because their use gives the stomach a chance to rest and recuperate, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contains digestive elements sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, such as bread, meat, eggs, etc.

The plan of dieting is simply another name for starvation, and the use of prepared foods and nourishments, predigested foods simply make matters worse, as any dyspeptic who has tried them knows.

As Dr. Bennett says, the only reason I can imagine why Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not universally used by every dyspeptic who is troubled in any way with poor digestion is because many people were to think that because a medicine is advertised or sold over the counter, it is protected by it to be rank must be a humbug whereas as a matter of truth any druggist who is observant knows that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured more people of indigestion, heartburn, heart trouble, nervous prostration and run-down condition generally than all the quack nostrums and patent doctors' prescriptions for stomach trouble combined

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs—

TIZ Cured Her Quick

If you have sore, tired, tender, swollen, aching feet, or corns, bunions, callouses, chilblains or sweaty, smelly feet, Mrs. Lucy Beck, of Bellevue, Ky., says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs without pain for the first time. She has not been able to walk downstairs for over two years, except by stepping down on one side. Now she walks up and down stairs as well as ever. TIZ is simply wonderful for sore, tired, aching feet." Mrs. Beck knows what she says for she tried other remedies before using TIZ.

Don't suffer another day with your feet or with sore, burning, tired, aching feet. Get a 25c box of TIZ from any druggist or department store and use it. Then forget your feet have ever been sore, tired, aching or perspiring. TIZ draws them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. TIZ is the only remedy that ever helped me. There's none other like it. Sold by druggists, department stores or sent direct by Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago.

THE SHEPARD NORWELL COMPANY STORES Will celebrate tomorrow the forty-fifth anniversary of the founding of its commercial life by its president, Mr. John Shepard, Senior.

OUR WAY IS AN EVENT IN BOSTON BUSINESS LIFE

The business world moves rapidly. In forty-five years many changes have come to all of us. To The Shepard Norwell Company constant growth, adding store after store, and, during the past few months especially, important changes and alterations of great moment have become evident even to the casual observer.

WE START TOMORROW A NEW CAREER OF ENERGY AND PUBLIC IMPORTANCE

We know of no better way, on this anniversary, to express our gratitude and our natural pride in the result of our labors, than to make tomorrow an example of our overpowering energy and its agreeable surprises.

This celebration follows a well-defined line of action—extraordinary value-giving. There will be no blare of trumpets, no gaudy decorations—nothing but the truth as to each and every offering. Months have been spent by the representative heads of our various stores gathering merchandise for this event, and the world's best will be offered to our patrons at exceedingly low prices.

Remember, while you were enjoying the exhilarating ozone of the mountains and seashore during the past summer, we were laboring with importers and manufacturers, here and abroad; and it is with their aid and big concessions that we have prepared

THE GREATEST RETAILING EVENT IN THE HISTORY OF CONSERVATIVE BOSTON

This sale is intended as a "Business-Builder," not a profit-making nor a profit-sharing occasion. The one aim is to have each item so remarkable, so overpowering in its enormous value-giving, that it will reward the faithful and bring thousands of new customers. If we convince the skeptical (and we will), as well as those who know of the exactness of every statement in our advertisements, we will more than double any day's sales during the past forty-five years of our existence.

HAVE WE MADE YOU REALIZE WHAT THIS "ANNIVERSARY SALE" MEANS TO YOU?

It will test the store capacity in all directions to the utmost, and bring into prominence the many conveniences our new stores offer, adding to our regular clientage thousands of people not yet familiar with the new order of things.

Assuring you that the merchandise offered is in every case seasonable and new, thus differing from all other large sales, and with the belief that full advantage will be taken of this most wonderful celebration, we tender our appreciation of your steadily growing confidence.

EXPERTS TEACH BOYS TO SCOUT

INDIAN FIGHTER UNDER CUSTER IS TRAINING SCOUTS

Sergeant Major Edwin R. Short, like all [illegible], is reticent when questioned as to [illegible] years of service [illegible]

He served under General George A. Custer [illegible] day of the [illegible] part of his [illegible] Little Big Horn [illegible] and every one [illegible] was killed. Major Short [illegible] comrades by [illegible] regiment which was under Major [illegible] whose failure to [illegible] his men [illegible] is believed by [illegible] military [illegible] cost Custer and his gallant [illegible] lives.

Tells Thrilling Stories.

Major Short has very strong opinions himself on Reno's responsibility for the disaster to General Custer and his troops.

The Major is well known on the lecture platform and his stories of what he saw among the Indians of the Northwest are said to be as thrilling as any ever told in the centuries of strife between the victorious palefaces and the American [illegible].

The American Boy Scout has been singularly fortunate in securing the invaluable services of this battle-scarred veteran who, in his retirement, finds work in this great movement to mould boy character a labor of love. Major Short's long years of life in the open, where strenuous effort [illegible] survival possible, finds himself today with the strength and vigor of a man twenty years his junior.

All of this is the American Boy Scout's gain. [illegible] splendid physical training enables Major Short to spend many hours in active scout work.

He has three patrols of American Boy Scouts thoroughly organized in Somerville, [illegible] and a trail work in scouting games and practice are engaged in.

Knows Indian Tongue.

Major Short speaks the following Indian languages:

The Crow, Ogallalla Sioux, Assiniboine, Gros Ventre, Cheyenne, Flat Head, Nez Perces and Uncapapa Sioux.

Major Short entered the army as a [illegible] and is retired as a sergeant major.

This is the man [illegible] which he is giving the benefit of a life experience as a [illegible] scout to the boys of New England.

"I will gladly give my time to this movement without pay," he said. "I ask no favors in return. I know it is an excellent course of instruction for American boys. I have had some actual experience as a scout in Uncle Sam's service and I feel I can be of some use to the American Boy Scout and its class."

BOY SCOUTS' MASTER WON HERO MEDALS FIGHTING IN AFRICA

Lieutenant Charles H. Urling, whose [illegible] to Boy, has had a [illegible] military career though he is but [illegible] years old. He served three years and a half in South Africa, and fought through the Boer War. He was wounded in action [illegible] both legs. He wears the King's and Queen's medal for [illegible] and bravery under fire. [illegible] Urling is one of the most effective workers on behalf of the American Boy Scout.

COMMANDER GILMAN IS CONGRATULATED BY THE BOY SCOUT

The American Boy Scout has sent a letter to John E. Gilman, of Roxbury, who was recently elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, congratulating him upon his accession to that high office.

Commander Gilman is one of the 1,151 [illegible] of 1861 who [illegible] eighteen years [illegible] one [illegible] of [illegible] who enlisted at the age of sixteen years or under.

The [illegible] of the commander agree that he was between fifteen and sixteen years of age when he enlisted.

Every American boy and particularly every American Boy Scout must find a [illegible] and inspiration in this fact. It proves in [illegible] way that the Civil War was fought and the Union saved by boys.

As we see the white-haired veterans tottering through the streets on Memorial Day it is difficult for us to remember that when they swept in columns and victorious [illegible] over the fields of the Wilderness, Gettysburg, and a hundred [illegible] history they were only boys. It is such American lads we find now flocking into the American Boy Scout movement. They too are between the ages of ten and eighteen.

Colonel Edward Anderson, of Quincy, [illegible] veteran who is now some [illegible] years young, the commander of [illegible] of cavalry in the great war, recently called attention to statistics [illegible] compiled by the United States Government which prove that the Civil War was fought by boys twenty-one years of age and under.

Every American boy should commit these figures to his memory and whenever he sees a grizzled Army veteran let him salute. [illegible] such a boy in showing his respect for the old soldier must feel that he is honored in lifting his hat to one of these grand old warriors, and receiving an acknowledgment of his salutation.

The figures which show how the Union army was made up follow:

Twenty-one years old and under	2,159,798
Eighteen years old and under	1,151,438
Seventeen years old and under	844,891
Sixteen years old and under	321,051
Fifteen years old and under	104,987
Fourteen years old and under	1,524
Thirteen years old and under	300
Twelve years old and under	225

MAJ. WOOLLETT FOUGHT UNDER FOUNDER OF ENGLISH BOY SCOUTS

Major Walter Woollett of Beverly is a veteran of the British Army who has had a most stirring military career. He fought under Lord Kitchener [illegible] in the Soudan and may be said to have fought every inch of the way to Capetown, [illegible] with brilliant service in the Boer War.

Major Woollett was fire times wounded and some of his injuries would have caused the death of most men. He wears almost every British medal save the Victoria Cross. One of his decorations has several bars, signifying that he served under fire in twenty-three engagements.

Major Woollett has enlisted with the American Boy Scout and is giving invaluable service to the movement.

JAPAN MAY SEVER ALL TREATY BONDS WITH UNITED STATES

Immigration Problem Expected to Prove Most Serious Phase to Renewal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The new commercial treaties that Japan may conclude with various nations within the next year are to be taken up immediately, and their consideration has received more than ordinary attention and discussion by students of State affairs.

In some circles it had been hinted that Japan [illegible] not renew many of her treaties at all and most certainly she will not unless she receives what she considers fair remuneration for the advantages that she affords other countries. It is hinted that America and Japan may not be able to agree to terms.

Those who suggest that Japan may not conclude treaties with the countries with whom their present commercial relations are conducted according to written agreement, recall that the United States and Great Britain are doing business with a number of other countries without the use of treaties at all.

Doesn't Need Treaty.

Japan is young, [illegible] vigorous, ingenious. She is also [illegible] to a warlike degree and her friends say that even without a treaty with another country she could be relied upon to get all that is justly coming to her.

Probably the greatest trouble Japan will have will be with England. [illegible] at present. Englishmen declare that their country is not getting what is due them from the Japanese, but that the United States and France enjoy greater privileges.

The experts of Japan now have the minimum tariff in this country and France. In a readjustment of the commercial relations between Japan and other countries she must be careful that no country is afforded an advantage over the United States and France, otherwise a maximum tariff might be placed upon the exports of Japan which come into the United States and France.

The actual work of framing the treaty between the United States and Japan [illegible] not begun and it is expected [illegible] the last.

Immigration Problem.

The immigration problem it is expected will prove the most serious phase of the document [illegible] drawn by the Japanese and the Americans.

It is the consensus of opinion here that the Japanese will decline to agree to any immigration clause in the treaty, on the ground that such a treaty is not necessary.

A sort of [illegible] agreement [illegible] between [illegible] question [illegible] effect of [illegible] courage [illegible] and Japan [illegible] point out that she has done this so effectively [illegible] agreement [illegible] necessary.

Should the United States insist on this clause [illegible] great pressure [illegible] to bear from the [illegible] in favor of such a clause. Japan [illegible] to make any sort [illegible] it is desired [illegible] that she is able to take care of [illegible]

[illegible] interested in a study of Japan and [illegible] with the closest interest her first move in the negotiations of [illegible] with the other nations of the world. [illegible] by the manner of her representatives when they met the Russians at the Peace Conference at Portsmouth.

Defenceless Man Is Safe; Deadly Hatpin Now Wears a Muzzle

Heads of Bejeweled Bonnet-Anchors Also Contains Mirror and Powder-Puff for Miladi.

Hatpins large enough to hold girls powder puffs are the latest novelty to arrive from manufacturing jewelers in Maiden Lane. This is said to be the greatest hatpin season in the history of the trade, and the factories which make pins and guards are pushed to keep up with the demand for new styles.

So large are some of the new designs in these pins that the ornamental heads have hinged lids. When the lid is lifted the powder puff is disclosed. In addition, the inside surface of the lid is a tiny mirror.

The danger of the long hatpins when worn in crowded places, and the new ordinances regulating their length in some cities, has led to the invention of various safety appliances which the jewelers are now making. One of the inventions is a magnetic hatpin. The magnet is fastened inside the hat and firmly holds the pin without allowing the point to obtrude.

The chief demand is not, however, for the magnetic hatpin, but for the various kinds of guards which solve the problem, the jewelers say, so that pins may safely be worn of any desired length. The guards have slender tubes in which the [illegible] points of the pins.

RACE FOR PORT SAVES STEAMSHIP

City of Taunton Pumped Out at Bridgeport After She Sprung a Leak.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 1.—The big steamship City of Taunton, of the New England Navigation Company, [illegible] saved today by the quick wit of her captain, F. D. Whiting of Fall River, and Chief Mooney, of the local fire department. The Taunton left New York last night at 9:25 for Fall River and at 2:05 sprung a leak off Huntington [illegible]. An investigation proved that the six-inch fire pump suction pipe had broken in two places within the vessel.

The Captain headed for Bridgeport under full steam with all the pumps working. He made the dock of the New England Navigation Company in this city with the water over the fireroom floor and the work of unloading the vessel was started when the big bilge pump broke. The Captain sent for the fire department and Chief Mooney responded with a fire engine. It was found that there was no way to get the engine's suction pipes into the vessel's hold. The fire chief set to work with axes and cut a hole through the deck.

In a few minutes the fire engine was pumping out the water as fast as it ran in. The Maine was dispatched from New Haven and the cargo unloaded while the [illegible] was going on. Later a diver went down and stopped up the opening in the [illegible] pipe and the vessel was saved.

$45 BIPLANE HAT $45 WHO'LL WEAR IT TO BROCKTON FAIR?

Don't All Speak at Once, Ladies, or You'll All Be Grahame-White's Rivals.

BROCKTON, October 1.—Now that it is definitely settled that Claude Grahame White is to be the star transcendant of the thirty-seventh annual exhibition of the Brockton Agricultural Society, with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and his show horses in second place, half of Brockton is suffering from palpitation of the heart, wondering who's going to take home the Sharpe biplane.

The Sharpe biplane—they call it that because of its double brim—is a dream, a vision, a picture. At a late hour this evening it might still have been seen in the Sharpe window out in Main street just beyond the Riker-Jaynes shop and its wonderful display of the pictures of notables: (1) Grahame-White receiving President Taft, (2) Grahame-White being good to John F. Fitzgerald, (3) Grahame-White with friends, George von L. Meyer and the Baron Rosen.

It moving back to the window of Sharpe & Co., milliners—is a large affair in salmon and black and white, with yellow plumes. There hasn't been anything quite like it in these parts for years and years. It is fitted plain, so to speak, but is finished with cords of salmon satin. And all they were asking for it to-night was the insignificant, trifling, modest measly sum of $45. Only $45 for a double-brim—that is to say, biplane—picture hat in salmon and black and white satin! Can you beat it?

Four New England Governors.

The big fair opens Tuesday and runs through to Friday, which, with its exhibition of four New England Governors and three former Governors in one grandstand at one and the same time, will quite likely be the biggest day of all.

The record crowds on the big days of other years have sometimes reached as high as eighty thousand people, but with Claude Grahame-White going up every day—they say his figure is $45,000 for the four days—there is no telling how far above one hundred thousand the attendance figures may climb this week or how close they'll come to the second century mark. No telling!

And just suppose, between ourselves—everybody has written all the news that is about the Brockton Fair over and over again and everybody is going down this week, so what's the use? Suppose that just as Grahame-White is climbing [illegible] with Governor Draper and Governor Quinby of New Hampshire [illegible] and Senator [illegible] and former Governors William L. Douglas and John D. Long all looking on and supposing Grahame-White is crowding a little "side"—he's not at all proud, but supposing—suppose one of the Brockton [illegible] the grounds wearing the Sharpe [illegible] salmon and black and white [illegible]!

That's where Grahame-White goes off and the band [illegible].

It wasn't [illegible] early days when Brockton was North Bridgewater [illegible] had asked the Legislature to change the name of North Bridgewater to Standish and then voted in May of 1871 to reject the name [illegible] long before [illegible] the very early days of the early Brockton, the women of the [illegible] would have been [illegible] mere men, of $45 for one hat. Says the Historian Kingman:

"The ordinary outer dress of the women in Summer was tow and linen gowns, checked "tyers" or "aprons," and in Winter woolen gowns and aprons, thick woolen stockings and cowhide shoes. The clothing was all of their own manufacture, and every house might properly be called a 'home factory.' They not only spun their own flax and wool, but wove their cloth in a hand loom. They also made garments for fathers [illegible] and brothers with their own hands. They disdained no kind of domestic labor they needed no help.

They had no Brockton Fair in those days. There was no Grahame-White, no Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, no Governor Draper [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] hadn't come to [illegible] either the picture house or [illegible].

Balls, concerts and other [illegible] amusement [illegible] and the long list of modern devices for killing time was unknown.

Had Bees and Raisings.

Once in a while they had a "sing" or a "bee" or a "raising," a husking party, or a domestic circle, a sleigh ride in the Winter or a [illegible] in the Summer was sufficient for all the purposes of recreation and social intercourse."

But that wouldn't do for nowadays, and much as one may sigh for the Simple Life we also live in the day of Grahame-White and his Farman biplane, and right glad the most of us are for it. If anybody doubts it, let him hike out to the fair grounds on this Sabbath morning in October and see the thousands who have trooped out to enjoy the last free glimpse of the golugs on the "Sunday before."

See the troops of folks around the temporary dwelling houses of the blue-blooded show horses! Hear the knowing ones reel off the names of some of the fashionable owners, quite like animated Blue Books! "Here are Vanderbilt's horses! There are Paul Sorg's. He's the New York broker, you know. The others belong to Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, Mrs. Thomas G. Plant, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, the J. Sumner Drapers, Julian S. Morris of Keswick, Va., Frank Donovan of Boston, and Spencer L. Borden of Fall River."

Four-Horned Goats.

P'raps somebody'll point out the four-horned goats—think of it!—the four-horned goats and the Persian lambs of Robert Gould Shaw, 2nd., or the herd of Jerseys entered by Neighbor Thomas W. Lawson of Dreamwold, or there might be a fleeting glimpse of Chatty Direct, 2:10¼, owned by C. H. Tappan of Attleboro and credited with having finished second at Detroit not long ago in a heat clocked at 2:10¼.

There have been 531 entries in the horse show, which is eighty five above the figure for 1909. As for cattle—as for cattle, man—the entries number 332 and the stalls only 317!

The firemen's muster comes on Friday, the "Governor's Day." The play out will begin an hour before noon. They'll all be here, the Alabama Coons from Stoughton, the Red Jackets of Cambridge, the Hancocks of Brockton, the Star of Jamaica from Jamaica Plain, and the Gen. Butlers of Lowell with dozens more.

Tuesday, Children's Day; Wednesday and Thursday, "big" days, Friday, Governor's Day, every day, Grahame-White's day; every day, vaudeville day and cattle show day and horse show day and racing day.

Whiskey Barrel Burst; Not Boiler

CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 1.—A loud report in the western section of the city caused a number of people to think that a powder mill had blown up or that a boiler in one of the big industries had exploded. Investigation, however, showed that neither was the cause, the noise having been made by the explosion of a whisky barrel in a wholesale liquor store.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON TELLS YOUNG WRITERS HOW TO WIN SUCCESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, gives young fiction writers who would succeed the following advice:

"Work on a newspaper until all your crude notions of life and all your raw individualities have been blue-pencilled into limbo. Then retire into obscurity and write your fiction.

"Travel, if possible.

"Do not marry.

"Do not dissipate.

"Do not imitate Henry James.

"Never read reviews of your own work.

"Never say die."

> Travel if possible.
> Do not marry.
> Do not dissipate.
> Do not imitate Henry James.
> Never read reviews of your own work.
> Never say die.—Gertrude Atherton, the novelist.

Mrs. Atherton's suggestions, which are in the form of a letter published to-day.

Mrs. Atherton's Letter.

"Some time ago I received a circular, possibly a letter, from Mr. Upton Sinclair, asking me to endorse a plan for 'endowing young authors of talent; in other words, young, married, would-be and indigent aspirants for literary rewards. In the confusion of moving, these papers were lost, and I forgot them until they were recalled to my mind the other day by a magazine article on the subject; which also published the opinions, favorable and unfavorable, of several well known writers.

[illegible]

being some danger of its success, every writer of experience should express a decided opinion on the subject. Authors that have been publishing for a certain number of years—say ten or more—are the best judges of so many-sided a question, not the always possible millionaire desirous of [illegible]

[illegible] print and paper, being merely the usual enthusiastic product of raw talent, but at that time I thought it a great [illegible] publishers [illegible]

[illegible] have been much better employed during those four years if I rewrote the book every [illegible] reporting [illegible] other words seeing life [illegible].

Start as Reporter.

"And this is the advice I would give to a young man or woman desirous of literary fame and future success; get a position on a newspaper as a reporter and [illegible] for two years [illegible] every point [illegible] feel I know it [illegible] the greatest literary [illegible] that ever [illegible] would have been [illegible] experience, and how [illegible] Individuality is never lost.

"If during those years of journalism [illegible] half his [illegible] afford to spend [illegible] comfort [illegible] his dress into a far [illegible] with far less effort [illegible] the green room [illegible] will do. He may not be very comfortable or otherwise entertained during that year, but literature does not require any more self-denial in the beginning than any other [illegible] any profession, or picking one's way along the bristling road that leads to commerce or finance.

Room for Writers.

I do not believe that any potential author will starve for lack of opportunity, for I do not believe that the man with a clever pen lives who will fail to get on a newspaper if he tries. And if he does get on and fails to make good, then he is well out of the race, and can turn his attention to other methods of livelihood [illegible] young. There is no such [illegible] the [illegible] world for separating wheat from chaff as a high-class newspaper.

"I am of course writing of embryonic story-writers and novelists, not of poets. These often have strong waste tracts in their brains, are temperamental [illegible] and need careful [illegible] tion a number [illegible] are practical [illegible] history of literature [illegible] many poets have been [illegible].

"And this is the point: Mr. Sinclair's [illegible] authors are writers [illegible] rewards, which is [illegible] I feel [illegible] of being driven to the [illegible] I do not believe that in this country at least [illegible] work if he wants it, in [illegible] he is not lazy or weak [illegible] loaf and drink [illegible] newspaper office.

Life a Fight.

"Men [illegible] rising every day from the ranks [illegible] are being pushed closer [illegible] to the wall, then down into the [illegible] at the foot of it. And that is [illegible] death itself. Given [illegible] a hearty kick from the [illegible] philanthropists in front. Life [illegible] death is a fight and only [illegible] incompetent would have it [illegible]

[illegible] and editors are not philanthropists, at least not yet. They make [illegible] mortal, but as a rule they [illegible] public taste correctly, as well [illegible] worth of the applicant. Editors [illegible] stories to fill up their volumes [illegible] magazines, therefore it may safely be assumed that those rejected are [illegible] interesting, too long, or, in [illegible] unsuited to the public of that [illegible] magazine. Because the editor [illegible] the tenth magazine on [illegible] discovers a writer to whom [illegible] have been inhospitable, it [illegible] follow that he is wiser or more [illegible] than they.

"As for publishers, it costs a good deal [illegible], first and last, to bring a book out, and they are not inclined to launch the work of a new writer merely because it shows promise. It is for the writer to take the publisher a mature effort, not [illegible] half blind evidence of talent wholly innocent of the technique which would make it easy reading. If nothing [illegible] I was brought up on the unfortunate [illegible]

Intelligence Rather Low.

As to the general public, the American public, it may be that its average of intelligence is not very high; so, at least, we judge by the sort of novels that are 'best sellers' for eight to ten months of [illegible] there is not the public that [illegible] which through 115 editions [illegible] has [illegible] dyed in the wool American novels [illegible] flatter both its personal and [illegible] pride.

[illegible]

grow rich (for aside from its comparative smallness there are too many [illegible] in the country [illegible] out of the work itself [illegible] him for his identity to give take a rich man. And at least he can own an automobile!"

would be in fact a subsidy. It is something quite out of my province, and I cannot express an opinion upon it."

FAULTS OF BOSTON REPORTED BY SMITH. TELLS CITY'S NEEDS

"Many of Boston's wharves are antiquated.

"[illegible] water coordination is incom[illegible]

"[illegible] capable of much better [illegible]

"[illegible] little public control of the [illegible] front and terminals of Boston."

Herbert Knox Smith, Commissioner of Corporations for the United States, has just made a report on American harbors to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in which he makes the above pertinent comments upon the port of Boston.

Mr. Smith visited Boston and toured the waterfront. He viewed it with the impartial eye of the unprejudiced outsider. His knowledge of the science of terminals enabled him to discover in quick time what Boston had and what Boston lacked. His criticism, however, was of the Boston Harbor of a few months ago. The defects pointed out by him have already been discovered by the Boston Chamber of Commerce and by the Legislature, and it is expected that in another year or two they [illegible] longer exist.

[illegible] criticism that there is very little control of effective waterfront and [illegible] is soon to be proved untrue [illegible] [illegible] review with [illegible] [illegible] what has been done [illegible] done to put Boston into [illegible] seaports.

Other Ports Criticised.

[illegible] investigation of American ports by [illegible] was made to get a [illegible] of the facilities for [illegible] transportation of the United States [illegible] did not find Boston alone in its [illegible] [illegible] be made of Boston [illegible] ext[illegible] to[illegible] [illegible] even including New York [illegible] harbor organization would place [illegible] of the harbor [illegible] more free to [illegible] [illegible] stage. It is our theory [illegible] public highways, but [illegible] terminals [illegible] running up into the most highly developed portion of the district. The industrial and commercial functions are both important. A very large amount of through transatlantic and coastwise freight from and to the interior is trans-shipped here, while there are many industrial establishments on the waterfront and much local freight.

The harbor is yet imperfectly organized for these two functions. There has been, however, a tendency toward a desirable separation of the through railroad terminals from the more central industrial front.

The harbor is capable of much better organization. The outer harbor can readily be adapted for commercial use or through traffic. Certain State and municipal property in outlying tide flats and partially submerged lands is capable of terminal development at reasonable expenditure. The inner channels are especially fitted for the industrial function, but at present much of this frontage desirable for industrial use is taken up by through traffic, which could be served as well in less congested sections.

210 Available Wharves.

As a whole the supply of wharves is good, though many are antiquated. Within the city limit there are about 120 wharves and in the entire Metropolitan district there are about 210, with a wharf frontage of about 98,000 feet. There is a fair number of warehouses and sheds connected with the wharves and some grain and coal elevators. There is a small amount of other transshipping equipment.

While there is some rail and water coordination it is by no means complete. It merely connects the trunk rail lines with each other and with their water terminals, and serves very slightly the local [illegible] [illegible] Railroad [illegible] the N. Y. N. H. & H. railroad [illegible] [illegible] the other [illegible] running along only [illegible] the waterfront. It has only a mile two and a half miles of main track, though it is now [illegible] further [illegible] [illegible] several [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] road holding [illegible] portant wharf companies and much important [illegible] scattered and unimportant wharves, but much of its frontage is [illegible] for park, [illegible] and ferry purposes. The State [illegible] developed [illegible] Commonwealth Docks, with large possibilities for terminal use. Most of the transatlantic lines [illegible] road piers. Coastwise steamships usually lease their piers.

MOOSE STARVES TO DEATH.

Antlers Tangled in Branches; Refuses All Food.

MARS HILL, Oct. 1.—Made prisoner when his antlers caught in the branches of a small tree, a giant moose practically starved to death [illegible] he refused food brought him by the game warden, Sweet, who released him from his uncomfortable position. The animal finally grew so weak that he was killed to end his suffering. When discovered in the deep woods by Mr. [illegible] several days ago the moose was lying under a small tree, the top of which he had bent to his own level. His antlers were [illegible] locked in the branches. The warden [illegible] several miles to get a saw to cut away the branches. Sweet and the boy carried the most delectable browse known [illegible] moose epicures to the big fellow, but he refused to eat it. All other foods left beside him remained untouched. The moose would drink, however, and in three days he was unable to rise he drank nine pails of water.

TO IMPROVE ROAD.

Middleboro Officials Will Rebuild Road Damaged by Autos.

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 1.—There are to be many improvements about town this Fall in the way of highway construction and repairs and the burden of expense is to be borne by the Peirce trustees. A new horse street sweeper has been added to the street highway equipment which will be used [illegible] section [illegible] section [illegible] loosened the top layer [illegible] so that many [illegible] make the road dangerous in the night or after a rain. This part of the road, about [illegible] miles in length, will be rec[illegible] and [illegible]. If this experiment is successful the other roads in town will be treated with the same material. The Peirce trustees have also paid for a new steam roller which is being installed in the town roll[illegible].

HINGHAM IS "SHY" 94 PERSONS AND TOWN IS PERTURBED

HOWL FROM HINGHAM.

Now "H" is for Hingham and "H" is for Howl.
The former is raising the latter.
The census miscued in a manner most foul
And that's what's the scandalous matter.

The census returns say that Hingham is less,
Its people are moving or dying,
But Hinghamites say: "Well! Excuse us We guess
*"The figures are—well, simply**

"As Lincoln remarked, you can sometimes deceive
The people, but one cannot sling 'em
Forever, and so we refuse to believe
Your loony old census in Hingham.
—Hingham Happenings.

(Note—Rhymes like "sling 'em—Hingham" can be played once a census.)

HINGHAM is mad clear through over that part of the census returns which declares that the town has shrunk 94 in population from the census of 1900. Hinghamites say that there is a mistake somewhere. They figure that the enumerator failed to touch second base somewhere in his calculations.

Of course, it's rather hard to get around the actual returns. This is the way they read:

"Hingham, Mass. Population, 1910, 4,965; population, 1900, 5,059; decrease, 94."

Then horrid experts sat down and reckoned that this was a percentage decrease of 1.8 per cent.

The census slap comes all the harder because Hingham thought it was growing. Now to have Uncle Sam take the town out into the woodshed, so to speak, stand it up against the door frame and say, "Here you, you aren't so big as you were ten years ago. What's the matter with you? Have you stopped growin?" is pretty [illegible]

It's Got Everybody Figuring.

In "Bill" Hennessy's waiting room the crowd can't figure it out. The minute the bulletin came in from Washington every one got a pencil and paper and started in to add and subtract and to reckon out the alleged notice that "alleged") percentage of decrease.

"Lemme see," they said, "you take the difference and add two ciphers and divide it by the number from which the decrease is estimated, um—um, nine from naught is one and five from nine is four and um um put down one, then eight and six—well, that's it, decrease of one and eighty-six hundreds per cent. Gee, I don't believe it, anyhow."

There is the same argument going on when "The Senate" gathers in the office of the Cushing House. The gang at Kalbair's is all fussed up over the census figures, and the "highbrows" at the Wompatuck Club has quit politics temporarily to knock the Census Bureau at Washington.

[illegible] to take a [illegible] ex-Governor John D. Long, [illegible] [illegible] if there ever was one. There's [illegible] Curtiss of the Massachusetts [illegible] Service Commission to say nothing of "Charley" Groves, executive secretary of the Republican State [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] Hingham census returns [illegible] trying to figure out what the population returns will be in November.

Two Surprised Citizens.

He explains that [illegible] [illegible] who were [illegible] [illegible] present contractor who has [illegible] men in [illegible] the 1910 census was being taken. Miller is going to [illegible] into the matter and see what was going on in Hingham in 1900.

"Jim" Dower of the assistant assessors thinks there may be a mistake. One circumstance which makes the Hingham people disinclined to credit the returns [illegible] the fact that several houses have [illegible] [illegible] elders [illegible] [illegible] offset [illegible]

OTERO COUNTY, COLO., WINS THE HEARST TROPHY CUP

Made Best Showing of Any County in Irrigated Land Products at Exposition.

TELEGRAM SENT MR. HEARST BY WINNERS OF THE CUP

PUEBLO, Col., Sept. 30.

William R. Hearst,
New York American.

Otero county, Colorado, expresses thanks for the Hearst trophy for best county agricultural exhibit at the eighteenth National Irrigation Congress Exposition. A hearty welcome awaits the donor; would be glad to show him the section producing the exhibit fine enough to qualify.

OTERO COUNTY COMMERCIAL ASSOCIATION.

PUEBLO, Col., Oct. 1.—The W. R. Hearst silver cup trophy, offered by Mr. Hearst for the county that could make the best showing in the products raised during the year on irrigation land, was awarded to Otero County at the State fair here yesterday. Otero County won on the merits of variety and quality. In variety alone the exhibits made by this county were remarkable. What was presented on exhibit follows:

Two hundred and seven specimens of 1[illegible] varieties of cereals, grains and grasses; 101 specimens of seventeen varieties of threshed grains and seeds, 131 specimens of nine varieties of vegetables, 141 distinct varieties of apples, 220 distinct varieties of fruits, 442 specimens of honey in the comb, extracted honey, wax and bees in the hives; a total of 1,105 specimens and 506 varieties of exhibits.

This same exhibit, supplemented by fresh varieties of perishable stuff, took first prize for grains and grasses, corn and onions at the Arkansas Valley fair. It was a remarkable exhibit in many ways, with a record having also taken prizes at the county exhibit at the interstate fair at Denver, securing thirty-four first, twenty-three second and thirteen third prizes. An interesting fact about the Otero County exhibit was that from the very selection of the seeds up through the planting and cultivation the whole thing had been carried out [illegible] with a view to winning the Hearst trophy. The winning and presentation of the prize was the final triumph.

The presentation was made by President Fowler in the mineral palace and received by J. W. Edgar, chairman of the committee in charge of the exhibit. In his speech Mr. Fowler paid high tribute to the progressiveness and public-spiritedness of Mr. Hearst. After the presentation the committee took the cup from the hall to a waiting automobile, which had been [illegible] decorated with Otero County ban[illegible] [illegible] great [illegible] [illegible] the cup at the [illegible] [illegible] made its triumphal way at the head of a large procession of people and [illegible] bands.

The cup was taken to the agricultural booth of the Otero county display where it was placed on exhibition for the day.

F. M. Harsin, representing the County Commissioners of Otero County, which appropriated $4,000 for this exhibition, and W. H. Potter, the county sheriff, came up to receive the trophy from the hands of the committee. The commissioners will designate where the cup will be exhibited.

BIG BUSINESS MAN URGES NEAL CURE FOR DRINK HABIT

Thinks $1,000 Would Be a Reasonable Fee for Such Treatment.

Another Chapter in the Continuous Story of Happiness Regained at the Boston Neal Institute.

[illegible] tute is one of the [illegible] ons in New England [illegible] good to humanity. [illegible] business man of intelli[illegible] this, it was a sincere [illegible] of personal appreciation for [illegible] Neal Treatment, which ends all desire for liquor in three days.

There was no guesswork about it. He knew. This man of business, up to a month ago, was an excessive drinker, extremely nervous and craved liquor at all hours of [illegible] night. Couldn't get [illegible] him.

His nights were [illegible] spells of wakefulness [illegible] drink to make him [illegible]

He had heard of the marvelously helpful work that is accomplished at the Neal Institute, 301 Newbury street.

He was skeptical, but the desire to again become master of himself was so strong within him that he came to the institute resolved to "take the chance" offered for freedom in three days from craving for liquor.

His brother accompanied him. Both lacked faith. They simply couldn't believe it possible to get rid of the drink habit in three days, and they said so. Their doubts, however, were met with the tremendous fact that a bond and contract is given guaranteeing a refund of the money if the patient is not satisfied. This removed every element of chance, and the man of business became a guest of the Neal Institute.

To-day he is one of the happiest men in Boston. Although it is a rule of the Neal Institute that names of guests are never divulged and all communications are confidentially treated, this business man is himself unselfishly spreading the good news among his intimate friends that all desire for drink can be cured in three days.

"My home was all but broken up by drink," he said, "but now we are the happiest family in New England."

"Why, $1,000 would be a reasonable fee for such a treatment," is the way he drove home his argument with a friend whom he was urging to go to the Neal Institute. At this homelike place at 301 Newbury street all the privacy of home, hotel or club is provided at a cost very small compared to the value fixed by this Boston business man.

Each guest is at all times in the personal charge of a regular physician and nurses, for the Neal Treatment is conducted along purely ethical lines. The treatment and the methods of its administration are conceded by all who have investigated them to be not [illegible] professional, but en[illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the past ten years [illegible] bad cases of drink hab[illegible] wonderfully cured without [illegible] failure, and each one in just three days time.

The Neal Treatment consists of the administration of a perfectly harmless and pure vegetable medicine, taken internally only and without any hypodermic injections. After discovering and demonstrating that the drink habit, instead of being a disease or an inherited affliction, is due to the stored-up poison in the system, coming from the continued use of alcohol, Dr. Neal found the antidote. The poison thus antidoted and neutralized is eliminated from the system, and the desire, appetite and craving for drink is at once destroyed or lost.

The Neal Institute guarantees satisfaction or a refund of the money, and the management always says: "Satisfy us of your ability to pay, and then pay us when you and your friends are satisfied."

Write the Institute and they will give you unquestioned reference as to their ability to do as they promise and as to their responsibility.

If you have a friend who would like to rid himself of the drink habit, write or wire the Neal Institute, 301 Newbury street, Department A, for further particulars and booklet. Telephone 3970 Back Bay. The Neal Institute is open day and night.

The Boston Neal Institute can be reached by taking any Boylston street car to Hereford street, walk one block north to Newbury street, and five doors east to Institute.

PUTS AN END TO INDIGESTION AND A SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common every-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

FREE TO THE RUPTURED

A New Home Cure That Anyone Can Use Without Operation, Pain, Danger or Loss of Time.

I have a new Method that cures rupture and I want you to use it at my expense. I am not trying to sell you a Truss, but offer you a cure that stays cured and ends all truss-wearing and danger of strangulation forever.

No matter whether you have a single, double or navel rupture or one following an operation, my Method is an absolute cure. No matter what your age nor how hard your work, my Method will certainly cure you. I especially want to send it free to those apparently hopeless cases where all forms of trusses, treatments and operations have failed. I want to show everyone at my own expense, that my Method will end all rupture suffering and truss-wearing for all time. This means better health, increased physical ability and longer life. My free offer is too important to neglect a single day. Write now and begin your cure at once. Send no money. Simply mail coupon below. Do it to-day.

Roaches--Waterbugs--Typhoid

Few people are aware of the spread of disease by means of germs carried by different pests.

As a result of my own investigations, in seeking their hiding places, I have always found them in the foulest parts of dwellings, where germs are sure to thrive.

I have found food supplies tainted by them, partly by excrement, partly by a dark fluid exuded from their mouths or from the scent glands, which have an important bearing on the spread of that dread disease—Typhoid Fever.

Heads of families should see to it and get rid of this grave danger.

Martin's Pest Exterminators for Waterbugs, Roaches and Ants are non-poisonous, in powder form. Odorless, safe, sure, cleanly, 50c and $1, postage 3 and 10 cents extra. For powders, name pest.

MUTT and JEFF

BOOK of CARTOONS

By BUD FISHER.

Done Into 61 Soul-stirring Pages by a Boston Crew of Highbinders.

Little Old Bud Fisher who is serving a life sentence as a cartoonist, has put one across. Following the urgent appeal of one hundred and sixty million people who can't sleep nights, he has conspired with a Boston publishing house to corral your old pals, MUTT and JEFF, into a volume of adventures hitherto unknown to science. The following dedication will serve to explain in a very cloudy way the main purpose of the book.

DEDICATION

WHEN I was very young, there was a kid of my own age who was a bit more favored by nature in physical prowess than I was; in other words, he had my goat. Not only that, but he knew he had it, and he never allowed me to forget it either. By way of impressing the fact on my memory, he would take a long and carefully aimed swing at my nasal organ every time we met. Occasionally his judgment of direction would be a trifle off, and my eye would act as backstop for the punch. To give him justice, however, I must admit that he seldom missed. I usually got it just where I was supposed to get it—right on the beak. I couldn't get even with him then, but I swore a mighty oath that, should I ever become President or get on the police force, or in any other manner get him in my power, I would make it my one aim in life to get revenge. Therefore, I dedicate this book to him, Charlie Harvey.

Now that nobody knows anything about it, you can take it from MUTT himself that he never was in better form in his life than in the narrow confines of his little cell, politely styled a book by the publishers.

It contains 61 full page drawings—the choice of Bud Fisher, himself—the best that have appeared in the Boston American, including many of the "Abroad" series, the "Trip to "Reno" and many of the best "Race Track" pictures.

The book is 5½ inches deep, 15 inches long, bound in heavy brown boards, printed on the finest heavy glazed paper and will make your mother-in-law laugh till her jaws ache.

THE big Crimson eleven swamped the speedy Bowdoin team in the Stadium yesterday afternoon, in a contest in which twenty-nine players, comprising almost the entire Crimson squad were tried out. The final score stood, Harvard 32, Bowdoin 0.

While the game was a combination of the old and new style of play, neither team made much headway with the latter, and the great majority of Harvard's gains, many of which were spectacular long runs through broken fields by Graustein and Morrison, substitute backs, were the result of the skin tackle play, which has gained so much ground for Harvard during the past two years. This play is in itself a mingling of both the old and new game inasmuch as it is not strictly a line plunge nor an end run, but a combination of both.

The game yesterday showed a wonderful improvement in team play in the Harvard aggregation, the men working together in great shape, and giving the appearance of a well polished team.

Strengthened by McKay, the giant tackle, and Minot, the former all American back playing at tackle and guard respectively the Harvard line opened up huge holes in the lighter Bowdoin team, through which aided by the best specimens of interference that have been seen on Soldier's Field for many years, the Harvard backs galloped at their leisure for long and spectacular gains.

Harvard Gains at Will.

Also when playing on the defense, the Harvard linemen, Minot, McKay and Captain Withington in particular, broke through at will and were continually spoiling plays and blocking punts, several of which, when recovered, were directly responsible for touchdowns. The whole Harvard team were on their toes, and with one or two exceptions, which, however, did not prove harmful, took advantage of every opportunity offered in the way of fumbles, and with but one exception, Bowdoin did not gain a yard, running the ball back after punts.

While Harvard seemed able to gain at will through the line, her backs struck a snag when they tried to skirt the Bowdoin ends, for Hurley and E. Smith, who held down the end rush jobs on the Maine aggregation, knew the game thoroughly and in addition they were the speediest pair of ends, which Harvard will run up against for some time to come.

Harvard made two forward passes for gains, failing on three other tries, while the Bowdoin team successfully executed two and tripped up on four. One of their failures should have been successful, for Hastings caught the ball safely but fumbled it when tackled. As a whole, however, but little ground was gained on this play, the men being downed as soon as they received the ball which seldom traveled more than three or four yards beyond the line of [illegible] [illegible].

The [illegible] was marred by frequent penalties, Harvard suffering to the extent of 55 [illegible]

AMERICAN LEAGUE PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 1.—Charles alias "Lefty" Russell, Connie Mack's $12,000 purchase from Baltimore, broke into the major league at Shibe Park this afternoon by sensationally shutting out the Boston Red Sox by a score of 3 to 0.

In addition, the Southpaw had the honor of twirling the champions of 1910 to their one hundredth victory. Opposing him R. Collins pitched a good game, except for the first and third innings, when the Mackmen garnered all three of their runs by terrific slugging. Russell fanned five speed boys and issued but two passes. He was hit safely eight times, but when hits meant runs the portsider, backed by splendid fielding, closed up like a clam.

Three times the Red Sox got a man on third with but a single out, and three times Russell held the next batters hitless.

After the third inning R. Collins allowed but a single bingle, that being of the scratch variety, which the speedy Eddie Collins beat out.

The five hits in the first and third innings consisted of a single and a triple by McInnis, utility fielder, who covered third in Baker's place; a triple by Eddie Collins and doubles by Lord and Davis.

20,000 Attend Game.

Gardner, Hooper and Speaker, the three Boston sluggers, each fell a victim to Russell's curves.

The Athletics' three runs were earned ones, and the inside baseball and spectacular stops of both teams brought the 20,000 spectators to their feet on numerous occasions.

Engle and Speaker did sensational work for the Red Sox, while E. Collins, Russell, McInnis and Livingston brought rounds of applause with their work.

Carrigan and Bradley were caught cleverly in the seventh on the short throw play. Bradley was on third and Carrigan on first. Carrigan started for second, but when Eddie Collins cut into take Living-

McGraw and His Band Find Sweet Revenge In Defeat of Doves

By Sam Crane.

(The dean of American baseball writers.)

BY [illegible]tinuing their remarkable batting and run getting [illegible] of the week the New York Giants were again enabled to beat the Boston team by another big and lop-sided score yesterday. The figures at the wind-up were [illegible] to 4.

[illegible] Giants made fifty-seven runs last week and their batting averages have been swelled in proportion. Thirty-six safe hits were made in the two games here against the home team, nineteen on Friday and seventeen yesterday.

When it is taken into consideration, too, that eleven Giants were "passed" on Friday and five yesterday, and they stole thirteen or fourteen bases in the tw[illegible] [illegible]ames their avalanche of tallies can be easily accounted for.

[illegible] New Yorkers, as soon as they saw they had the Bostons on the [illegible] [illegible]se some "inside" base running stunts that were successful and [illegible]stood the home players on their heads. The Giants played a snappy, [illegible]gery, up-to-date game, as if they were practising for the anticipated post-season series between themselves and the Yankees.

Home Players Appeared Slow.

The home team played a fairly good [illegible]ling game considering the fusillade of [illegible]llops they were forced to face, but [illegible]ey were frequently lacking in the "good old pep" without which any bunch of players is made to look so slow and logy as to be unable to get out of their own way.

That was the way the Bostons looked at several stages of the afternoon's long drawn out proceedings and naturally the interest of the assembled populace fell off to nix-minus.

Nothing could better prove the value of control of the ball by the pitcher than yesterday's contest—beg pardon, procession. The game can hardly be dignified into calling it a contest.

There was one inning, No. 2, in which the Giants made three runs on one hit, Ferguson, who was pitching at that time, giving four bases on balls.

Drucke, of the Giants, was in the same boat several times, [illegible] fortunately and when he didn't [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Merkle [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] who cannot put a thing on the ball and yet are among our most effective and valuable boxmen simply because they can get the ball right in the groove.

That is [illegible] possibly, but it comes in her[illegible] argument in the face of [illegible] pitching as the home twirlers [illegible]ved yesterday and Friday.

It would [illegible] too, if some of these young pitchers who are so crazy wild would read up on ancient baseball history and see how valuable control is. By

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Harry Grant of Boston, who a year ago captured first honors in the Vanderbilt race with the Alco, made a performance more wonderful to-day when, with the same Alco, and accompanied by his old mechanician, Frank [illegible], he again won the historic cup from a field of thirty-two contestants averaging 65.1 miles an hour, the second best on record.

Some twenty-five seconds to his rear came Joe Dawson in the sturdy Marmon, the smallest cylinder displacement car in the run, while in third place, one minute later, came Jack Aitken, in his National.

Gelnow in the Fal car, Pierce in a Fal car, and Heineman in a Marmon finished the Wheatley in that order, while Bill Endicott in a Cole and Monty Roberts in an Abbott-Detroit captured the honors in the Massapequa sweepstakes.

That in short tells the result of the three contests. It tells not, however, of the great head work that was done by the men or the wonderful ability of the cars.

Nor does it tell the more to be regretted features of the contest. The courting of death; the sheer reckless abandon with which the men flirted and played with the grim and ever feared recorder. The race was really a wonderful, weird sight no matter from which standpoint. It was weird in its start, when with the first gray streak of dawn appearing over the horizon, the men and machines came out to do battle and as it proved to materially increase the mortality record of Greater New York for the day.

It was weird, ghastly and repugnant to the mind, cultured or uncultured, as almost with the first hour of the race when men were striving with might and main to hear the story of the sudden death of one of the drivers, Harold Stone, whose wife of two weeks was waiting in the grand stand to watch and cheer him on in his efforts. Stone was not dead, but he was terribly injured. It was weird and grewsome to hear of fatal accidents all through the race until four fatalities had been recorded and 27 persons known to be injured.

Yet with all, the thousands upon thousands cheered and cheered the daring, seemingly reckless men as they dashed around the course, unmindful, in fact ignorant, of the final fate of some of their fellows.

Grant's Work Is Unprecedented.

Their minds were upon the contest; every nerve and every endeavor was to make racing records, and they did. The work of Grant, in his Alco, was unprecedented in American annals. That the same man and the identical car should win the classic in two successive years was without precedent and proves that it was won by brains as well as steel.

Grant's drive for honors was really wonderful. He started in eighteenth position and on the first lap gained eleventh place. Gradually working upwards, half way through the contest he was about fifth.

Then commenced his steady climb until four laps from home he managed to get into first place, which was all but lost to him on his lap, when through

DORCHESTER HIGH DEFEATS MEDFORD

First Game for Both Schools; Medford Went to Pieces in Last Period.

MEDFORD, Oct. 1.—Dorchester High School defeated Medford High [illegible] the opening game of the season for both schools, by a score of 14 to 0. Although Dorchester had the heavier team Medford played the far better game for the first three periods, but went to pieces in the fourth. Dorchester scored two points in the second period on a safety caused by Lawless, the Medford quarterback, who went behind the goal line to make a forward pass to Faber, the [illegible] not receiving it, the ball fell on the ground.

Fraser scored the first touchdown in the fourth period after he had carried the ball alone on a series of runs for fifty yards. He then kicked the goal.

The second touchdown was scored by Raushal, who recovered the ball after Faber had fumbled on the kickoff and ran twenty-five yards for a touchdown.

The game was marked by much fumbling on both sides, and also for the penalties inflicted on both teams. The features of the game were the playing of Fraser and Raushal for the winners and of Lawless and Brawley for the losers.

Easy for Beverly High.

BEVERLY, Oct. 1.—Beverly High opened the season with a clean sweeping victory when they downed the Roxbury High eleven by 16 to 0 at Lovett's field this afternoon. The Beverly boys played a classy game and at no time during the contest was their goal in any danger. In open plays and in line plunges the Beverly team excelled and hit the visitors line for many scores of ground gains. Great interest centered about the game, representatives from all the schools in Essex county being present to size up the Beverly eleven which is presenting a great front this season under the coaching of W. B. Squires, the former Harvard half-back.

ENGLISH HOLDS OWN IN GROTON BATTLE

Speedy Boston Eleven Gives Crack Prep. School Team a Big Surprise.

GROTON, Oct. 1.—Boston English High School sprung one of the biggest surprises of the season here to-day when the gridiron warriors representing the light and the dark blue forced the strong Groton Prep School to play a 0-0 tie.

The game was one of the greatest exhibitions of football ever seen here, the Boston team showing that it is master of all the fine points in the new "bloodless football."

Try as they might the heavy Groton backfield was unable to penetrate the English High line, which held like the Rock of Gibraltar.

For the visitors Captain Janvrin and Murphy played a star game, while Frothingham, Murray and Wright excelled for Groton.

The result of the game came as a big surprise inasmuch as Groton had swamped Somerville last Wednesday by the overwhelming score of 22 to 0.

As a result of this fine showing by Groton the English High eleven was expected to fall an easy victim to the prowess of the Groton gladiators.

BOSTON COLLEGE LOSER.

New Hampshire Boys Victors In Close Contest 11 to 0.

DURHAM, N. H., Oct. 1.—New Hampshire defeated the Boston College eleven this afternoon by the score of 11 to 0. The Boston boys were outweighed from ten to twenty-five pounds to the man, yet held their own nobly. Frequent fumbling by the New Hampshire team lost numerous chances to score. Late in the second quarter a New Hampshire man fumbled the ball after he had crossed the goal line and a Boston College man recovered the ball, and what looked like a touchdown turned out to be the only safety.

The new style of football was much in evidence, New Hampshire executing several pretty forward passes for good gains. The old style of line plunging was not forgotten by the Granite State boys, who ripped large holes in the Boston line.

Springfield Training School Holds Amherst In Trilling Battle

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 1.—Amherst and Springfield Training School found worthy opponents in each other to-day on Pratt Field. Each side succeeded in getting dangerously close to the goals, but neither was able to cross the line.

Springfield kicked off to Fitts on the twenty-five-yard line from which it was run back to the thirty-five yard mark. Creede kicked the ball back to Springfield's fifteen-yard line, where Kelley took it. Horne next made two yards outside of right tackle, and Merner added another yard through left guard. Metzlar kicked to Abele on the thirty-five yard line and one yard was gained by Amherst.

Fitts carried the ball through right tackle for three more yards, but on the next play Roberts was thrown on the thirty-six yard line for a loss. He was again used for a forward pass, which was not successful. Merner advanced the ball to the fifty-five-yard line and Roberts downed Springfield for a loss on the forty-nine-yard line.

Springfield Player Hurt.

A kick found Abele on Amherst's 34-yard mark. He fumbled and Swenson recovered after which the ball was advanced to the 30 yard mark. In this play Abele was disabled and Hubbard took his place. A direct pass netted Springfield no gain. Metzlar tried a forward pass, but it was intercepted by Miles on the 17 yard line. In the next play Miles failed to make any gain.

Creede kicked to Kelley on Amherst's 50 yard line and he ran the width [illegible] back 10 yards. Metzlar hit the line for 2 yards gain. Horne reached the 17 yard line on a direct pass hit but the play was called back. The quarter ended with [illegible] in possession of Springfield.

In the second period Springfield kicked off to Miles on the 25 yard line. He made four yards around left end [illegible] to Metzlar, who carried [illegible] where it stayed during the [illegible] Merner took a direct pass for two yards to the 40-yard line. Metzlar kicked to Miles at the 15 yard line and he advanced it to 24 yards, where he ran out of bounds. Campbell made three yards through right guard. Fitts was thrown by Swensen on the [illegible] yard line for a loss.

Penalize Springfield.

Merner gets lost slightly and Springfield was penalized ten yards for holding. Corlew took Merner's place. In the next play Baumann dropped Corlew on Springfield's forty-yard line. A direct pass was [illegible] by Corlew, and although it was quickly recovered Springfield lost five yards. Miles received a kick and made [illegible] yard. Hubbard next had the ball, [illegible] gained nothing.

Creede kicked to Metzlar for a fair catch on Springfield's thirty-nine-yard line. Metzlar punted and the ball went out of bounds on Amherst's forty-one-yard line. Creede then kicked to Gregory on the [illegible] fifty-yard line. Guetter in the next play broke through and blocked Horne for loss of five yards.

The third period was started with Metzlar's kick off which went out of bounds on the 22 yard line. Creede kicked [illegible] who ran the ball back from the center of the field to 43 yard mark. The ball see-sawed in the center of the field during the remainder of the period.

Fitts opened the last quarter with a fake [illegible] on Springfield's 50 yards. Hubbard made three yards through right [illegible] in the next play. Swenson [illegible] Roberts for a loss of yards. Creede [illegible] to Corlew who fumbled, the ball was recovered by Bauman on 32 yards. Both elevens fought hard to land the ball behind the posts in this period but were unable to score. The game ended with the ball in Springfield's hands on the 55 yard line.

WALTHAM WINNER OVER REVERE 36-0

Strategy and the football brawn of a well-coached eleven just rounding into condition gave Waltham High a victory over Revere High on a dust-blown field at Waltham yesterday afternoon 36 to 0.

Waltham has acquired the art of forward passing to such a nicety that the play failed to work only once when she tried it. Every one of the six touchdowns which the Watch City eleven put over were made a possibility by passes which sent the ball up to a position from which it was easily carried over by the rushes of the fast backfield.

MILTON ACADEMY TOO FAST FOR LATIN

Milton Academy won its game against Roxbury Latin yesterday by 3 to 0 from Talbot kicking the goal.

Though the game was evenly played, Milton Academy showed slightly better form throughout. Milton gained more ground, while Jones' fine punting always kept his team out of danger. The lack of good material at quarterback probably prevented Roxbury Latin from playing a more aggressive game.

Not till the fourth period did it look as if either team would score. In this period Talbot punted to Roxbury's ten yard line [illegible] Woodell in catching it slipped and the ball rolled to within one foot of the goal line where he fell on it. Jones made a fine kick, saving his team from danger. After a few unsuccessful plunges, the ball was snapped to Talbot, who made a drop kick, at a distance of thirty-three yards. This was in the last three minutes of play. The lineup:

YALE BARELY NOSES OUT A VICTORY OVER SYRACUSE

New York State Boys Prove Hard Stumbling Block for the Eli Squad.

FINAL SCORE OF GAME 12-6

Waite Kicks Two Goals From Field and Just Misses Two More.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 1.—Only the greatest good fortune enabled Yale to defeat Syracuse at football to-day 12 to 6. The referee's whistle kept Syracuse from scoring a touchdown from Yale's four yard line in the second quarter.

On the kick-off Syracuse fumbled the ball, which the Blue recovered on the three yard line and pushed across the goal for a touchdown within forty-five seconds of the start of play. Yale's second score came on a forward pass, Daly to Reilly from forty-six-yard line. Daly kicked both goals.

Syracuse did not cross its opponent's goal line for a touchdown, its scoring being confined to left tackle Waite's two goals from field. He missed another try by a very narrow margin.

Much fumbling marred to-day's game and was attributed to early season form. Syracuse excelled in the kicking department, while Yale fared better with the forward pass.

The consensus of expert opinion after the contest was that "new" football was not so new as it first was expected to be. To the man in the stands the game appeared little different from last year's play. The forward pass and punting was somewhat more in evidence.

The only injury during this afternoon's struggle came when Fields sustained a badly wrenched knee which may require some weeks in mending.

Vermont Near Arrest for Attempting Rescue.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The game scheduled to take place here to-day between the Army and the University of Vermont was called off on account of the fact that there was no West Point eleven on hand to give battle, the future generals of Uncle Sam's army being confined to their rooms where they are under the strictest kind of a military guard.

The entire student body of the school up on the Hudson have been under arrest since the first of the week when they tried to "silence" their drill master, whom they believed was carrying his authority to far.

Harvard Crushes Light Bowdoin Eleven; Tumbles Frequent at Cambridge

yards mostly for holding, while Bowdoin was set back 40 yards, one penalty being inflicted for interference with Wigglesworth while catching a punt, putting the ball in Harvard's possession on the Bowdoin 1 yard line and resulting in a touchdown. The most striking part of this for Bowdoin lay in the fact that on several previous plays, aided by an offside penalty, she had repulsed the Harvard attack from her goal line.

Interference Proves Costly.

The new game is becoming popular apparently, for some 9,000 football souls gathered in the Stadium and patiently waited till after 4 o'clock for the game to start. The game was an hour late in starting, for a part of the Bowdoin team missed out on train connections and were late in arriving on the field.

Bowdoin received the first kick-off, and after ineffectual attempts to advance the ball punted and recovered the ball in midfield. Harvard got the ball on her own 25-yard line on a punt. After advancing the ball by line plunges and a neat quarterback plunge through left guard by Wigglesworth, Felton punted, and Captain Withington recovered the ball on Bowdoin's 27-yard line. Two line plunges brought the spheroid to the 20-yard line and a neatly delivered forward pass from Wigglesworth to Felton gained ten more yards.

Frothingham was caught crawling and the first penalty for such an offense was inflicted, and the same player dropped back to the 17 yard line and booted a pretty drop kick over the cross bars for the first score, after eleven minutes of play.

Long Run For Touchdown.

The next score came rather suddenly. Withington fumbled the ball on the kick-off and Bowdoin recovered it on Harvard's 25-yard to the discomfort of Harvard supporters. Bowdoin was forced to punt, the Crimson linemen breaking through the line, blocking the kick, the ball rebounded to Harvard's 44-yard line, where "Doc" Leslie tucked it away under his arm and beat out his pursuers for a score. Withington kicked the goal.

For the rest of the period the play was in Harvard territory, the Crimson being penalized to her 1-yard line, and after a 20-yard dash by Frothingham through the centre of the line, time was up, with the ball on the Harvard 23-yard line, where it was put in play in the second period.

When Bowdoin got the ball in midfield on a punt, she recovered a forward pass which almost went amiss, for a gain of eleven yards. The ball changed hands rapidly, and when Bowdoin fumbled Felton's punt, it was Harvard's ball on the former's 30-yard line. Seven rushes carried the ball to the 5-yard line, and then after Bowdoin recovered the ball and punted apparently out of safety from behind the goal posts, the sad penalty for interference came to Bowdoin as previously related, with a Harvard score.

During the rest of the period, the only thing of consequence was Garustein's spectacular 55-yard run through a broken field, but this play was not allowed, the Harvard lads being penalized for holding.

Graustein Star of Game.

In the third period Bowdoin was finally driven to her 17 yard line on a punt, and when her fullback tried to put out of danger, the Harvard line again broke through, blocking the ball, and after a grand scramble in which nothing could be distinguished except a melee of legs and arms and heads, some Harvard laddie back recovered the ball on the Bowdoin 8 yard line. In three plays all by his lonesome the doughty little Graustein took it over, and Captain Withington kicked the goal.

The kickoff going over the goal line, Harvard put the ball in play on her 20 yard line, and in two thrilling runs, in which he skillfully eluded all would be Bowdoin tacklers, and aided by some classy interference, Morrison advanced the ball 55 yards to Bowdoin's 30 yard line, Tryon then making ten yards. A penalty for holding, however, put Harvard out of the running and until the end of the period the ball see-sawed up and down the field.

Harvard opened the fourth period with a rush, putting the ball in play on her own 58 yard line. Graustein was intrusted with the carrying of the pigskin and it seemed to be a wise choice, for he dashed down the field, in one of the prettiest exhibitions of dodging and snaking out tacklers, to say nothing of the interference offered by his team mates, for another touchdown. Minot kicked the goal.

Finally Harvard received the ball on a punt in the middle of the field, and an onside kick by Harvard, recovered by, put the Crimson within striking distance of the Bowdoin goal, on the twenty yard line. A forward pass from Potter to Lingard at end, gained three yards, and in three rushes, concluding with Morrison carrying the ball, another score was added to the already long list. T. H. Frothingham kicked the goal. Two plays more and the game was over.

Several Bowdoin men were slightly injured during the game, but the Harvard men came through without a scratch. The many substitutions yesterday, were as confusing if not more so than in the game with Bates on Wednesday, but it may be that such management is beneficial to the players, even if it does provide ample occasion for bringing into the game the strategic ability of coaches.

MIDDIES SHOW UP STRONG.

Navy Academy Eleven Downs St. Johns by 16 to 0 Score.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 1.—Individual running and forward passes were much in evidence in to-day's game in which the Midshipmen defeated St. John's 16 to 0, and which opened the local season. On all plays of this kind, fostered by the new rules, extreme heat made snappy work difficult.

Carey, who played about half of the game, used his sprinting and dodging powers to advantage and was easily the star ground gainer of the day. The Collegians played a purely defensive game, but a plucky one, and their friends were well satisfied with the result.

WILLIAMS FINDS UNION MEN EASY

29 to 0 Victory Marks Real Opening of Football Season.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Oct. 1.—Williams left little doubt of her football ability in to-day's game with Union, scoring 29 to 0 victory with little difficulty.

Most of the time Coach Newton used two full teams and in the last period sent in some additional substitutes.

The first period opened with Williams punting back Union's kickoff. Union tried to gain by line plunges and tried a forward pass. After two telling passes by Williams and an exchange of punts Peterson went around right end for 15 yards to the Union 30 yard line. Here a place kick by Whiter struck the cross bar and fell back into the field.

The period ended with Union putting the ball into play on the 25 yard line, and Williams penalized for offside.

In the second quarter Williams began a series of line plays, and forward passes which carried the ball to the 30 yard line, Peterson broke away to the 10 yard line, and two forward passes, Peterson to Winter, gave Williams her first touchdown. The kick failed.

After two plays from the Union kick off, Stevens, the Williams track man, broke away through Union's right end for a 75 yard run to touchdown, Peterson kicking the goal.

Score, 11 to 0.

In the third period Williams began plunging toward [illegible] goal, [illegible] on the nine yard [illegible] Union's punt was run down and a forward pass and Peterson's dash made another touchdown. Goal was kicked.

Score 17 to 0.

Williams ran back the kickoff to Union's fifty-three yard line. The ball did not leave Williams's possession, but was advanced by passes and line plays. Peterson broke through left tackle for the touchdown and kicked the goal.

Score 23 to 0.

Linder received the kickoff and after a punt Union tried a pass on a fake kick formation. Peterson intercepted it on the Williams forty-eight yard line and ran sixty-two yards with good interference for a score. Peterson kicked the goal.

Score 29 to 0.

No score was made in the fourth period.

TIGERS LAND ON TOP.

Hot Weather Bothers Stevens and Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 1.—Princeton defeated Stevens Institute here to-day 18 to 0. The hot weather required many substitutions, and little spectacular work was done.

Neither team succeeded in working the forward pass or on-side kick for good gains, Princeton relying on old fashioned football.

Hart played a good game on both offence and defence, and was responsible for the second touchdown. McCormick's tackling was very encouraging, his style being much better than last year. Bard's running back punts were the features of the second half, although he failed to score.

TUFTS LOSES ITS FIRST GAME, 5 TO 0

Rhode Island State Secures a Touchdown by Dall That Wins the Game.

Tufts College was defeated this afternoon by Rhode Island State in her first game of the season. Tufts from the first was continually gaining ground on their opponents and was two times within the [illegible] yard line of Rhode Island's goal. The ball was punted four times by Sullivan to the centre of the field.

The first time the [illegible] fumble and the second on downs. Rhode Island received downs only once, choosing rather to punt and get the ball out of their territory.

In only one case did Tufts punt, as Strong worked the forward pass for three ten yard gains in the third and fourth period.

Only once was Rhode Island within the fifteen yard line of Tufts, and that was in the third period, when Dall made an end run of fifteen yards, scoring the only touchdown.

Sullivan of Rhode Island State made some good quarterback punts and runs, while Dall was the most consistent ground gainer.

Bohlin for Tufts played his same old game and made several long runs, and the line bucking of Webber is worthy of note.

Tufts lost the ball five times on fumbles and twice did Captain Ireland recover fumbled balls.

In the first period Rhode Island was penalized fifteen yards for [illegible] holding. In the second period Rhode Island was penalized to within two yards of its goal by offside play, but punted the ball to the middle of the field. In the third period Rhode Island was penalized [illegible] yards for interference with forward pass. In the fourth period Rhode Island was penalized ten yards for interference in forward pass and Tufts was penalized [illegible] yards in offside play.

EASY WIN FOR PENNEY.

Gettysburg Badly Beaten in One-Sided Contest, 29 to 0.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Playing unexpectedly good football, the University of Pennsylvania overwhelmed Gettysburg here this afternoon by the score of 29 to 0. The Quakers' great score was due in a large measure to the magnificent running of Mercer, who took Ramsdell's place in the backfield. This ex-freshman star scored two of the touchdowns and made a third possible by a beautiful thirty yard run to Gettysburg's one yard line.

Hough, who replaced Leough later in the day, played splendidly and not only scored a touchdown by his fine running, but he operated the forward pass well and returned punts for big gains. The absence of the Quaker regulars was not noticeable.

The other two touchdowns were scored by Sommer, who went across in a line plunge and by Clark who scooped up one of Thayer's on-side kicks.

MRS. HAMMOND STAR TENNIS PLAYER AT LONGWOOD

Winner of All Matches Decided With the Exception of the Mixed Doubles.

T[illegible] went to the courts of the Longwood Cricket [illegible] yesterday to witness the challenge round in the women's scratch singles and the finals in both the women's and the mixed doubles events were rewarded with some play of the highest caliber. Those who went in the forenoon saw the brilliant Metropolitan, Philadelphia, and Eastern States champion, Miss Louise Hammond of New York, win in the first named two events and establish a record of tennis achievements which has seldom been equalled in this section of the country. Those who went in the afternoon saw Miss Marion Fenno and Nat W. Niles, the former Eastern doubles champion, defeated Miss Hammond and C. Seaver in a two set match, 7-5, 6-4.

In the challenge round of the scratch singles, Miss Hammond defeated Mrs. Barger-Wallach of New York in a three set match that was replete with tennis of a championship nature. Though Mrs. Wallach won the first set she was hopelessly outclassed in the remaining two sets of the match.

Immediately after winning the singles event Miss Hammond paired with Miss Elsie Little also of New York defeated Miss Evelyn Sears and Miss Margaret Curtis in straight heats.

Miss Hammond a Wonder.

Through both of these events the little New York player demonstrated her all round superiority and next to Miss May Sutton, she is without doubt the greatest woman tennis player who has yet appeared [illegible] courts.

Considering [illegible] and M. Seaver ha[illegible] in the early part of t[illegible] looked very much as though [illegible] to leave Longwood with a [illegible] record. It remained for Miss Fenno and Niles to check her conquering rush and keep at least one of the cups here in Boston.

The first set of the mixed doubles match was close and interesting. Miss Hammond and Seaver forcing it to deuce before the Boston team scored the win. Niles smashed down the court in a manner that early indicated his prowess in that department of the game, and, ably assisted by Miss Fenno in the back courts and at the net, furnished an exceedingly interesting set.

In the second set the play of Miss Fenno and Niles abounded with brilliant shots. It was a love set and throughout it Miss Hammond and Seaver were unable to fathom the service of their opponents. Miss Hammond appeared a trifle overworked and it was evident that her hard matches of the earlier part of the week and the forenoon were telling on her. It was a set played accurately and brilliantly by Miss Fenno and Niles and it was indeed a popular victory.

Mrs. Barger-Wallach won the first set of the scratch singles six games to four. Miss Hammond opened it by winning the first two games on well balanced smashes and drives down the centre of the court and along the sidelines. Mrs. Wallach won the next four games in succession and by winning the seventh and eighth Miss Hammond made it a deuce set. On her service Mrs. Wallach won the next game and succeeded in breaking through Miss Hammond's service for the win of the deciding set game in the set.

Miss Wallach Wins First.

The succeeding sets saw Miss Hammond perfectly at ease and playing at the top of her game. Her back and shots and net work was too much for the defender and Miss Hammond won the sets match and possession of the new cup.

Mrs. Wallach	1 4 1 2 2 4 8 5—22—2

Miss Hammond continued her aggressive playing in the women's doubles where she was paired with Miss Elsie Little. Her play was far superior to that of any of the others in the match. Miss Little, however, was but little behind in ability and skill and at the outset it could easily be seen that the Boston girls were no match for the clever New Yorkers.

Miss Evelyn Sears, the former national champion, who was paired with Miss Margaret Curtis worked under a disadvantage, inasmuch as an injury to her hand made it impossible for her to bring into play her back-hand shots, which in matches heretofore has been one of her mainstays.

MOORE AND MORAN AGAIN.

Pal Moore and Owen Moran will meet again at the Armory Club next Tuesday. The ability of both lads, the fact that they are to box twelve rounds to a decision and that Charley White is to referee, makes the affair an unusual attraction. Since Moran got the decision over Moore Wednesday night, they are eager for another meeting in the arena. The preliminary bouts look lively.

Bay State Golfers Capture Lesley Cup In Interstate Play

MIDST the ripping of thunder and the flashes of lightning, the Massachusetts Golf team were escorted to the veranda of the Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, Mass., victors, for the first time in the Lesley Cup matches; that important fixture which brings the ten best players of Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts together, annually.

Pennsylvania was the first to fall before the Bay State's attack, on Friday losing 8 of the 10 single matches, and four of the five foursomes. Yesterday the sturdy team of this State defeated New York by the same score as against Pennsylvania, winning 8 out of 10 points, in singles, and two of five foursomes.

It was a particularly pleasing performance in that New York has heretofore always won the cup, and for the Massachusetts team, a comparative bunch of youngsters, to rob the veterans of what they had counted on as another sure victory was a fine accomplishment.

Early Victory in Singles.

The singles of yesterday morning decided the match, for out of ten matches the Bay State won 8 so that New York could not possibly win if they won all the foursomes.

The Wilder-Travis match attracted the gallery of the morning and the veteran New Yorker won. Travis topped his drive on the first hole, while Wilder drove a splendid ball holing a 3 and winning the hole 3 to 4.

Wilder got into trouble twice on the second hole, while Travis put his second shot into a drop. Travis won the hole in a 5 to a 6 squaring the match.

Both Make Easy Misses.

Travis's drive to the 3d was in the rough, and Wilder followed suit. Both approaches were short. Travis missed a short put for a 4 and lost the hole. Wilder playing 4 to his 5. Two approaches just over the green and two putts halved the 14th hole in 4s.

Both players reached the 5th green in 4 shots. Travis was dead and took a 5, winning the hole and squaring the match for the second time. Two shots and both were on the 6th green for a halved hole in 4s.

The seventh, too, was halved in fours, both Travis and Wilder just missing 3s for the putts for threes. Wilder became 1 down at the eighth, when he missed a 4 foot putt for a 5.

Wilder made a beautiful second shot out of a trap on the ninth and holed a 3. Travis overran his approach from over the green and took a 4.

Here the match was squared and the pair started for home. Wilder's drive found a trap and after putting his second out of bounds reached the green in 5. Travis was down in 5, winning the hole. Travis 1 up.

Wilder Outdrives Travis.

The eleventh hole was halved in 4s, both reaching the green in two shots, Wilder outdriving the "Old Man," as he had been doing on nearly every hole. Wilder's drive reached the road on the twelfth and both were at the edge of the green in two. Travis missed a three-foot put for a 4 and Wilder squared the match, winning the hole in a 4 to a 5. The thirteenth hole was halved in 5s, Travis laying Wilder a stymie.

Wilder lost the fourteenth hole by putting his third shot poorly, while Travis hit the cup on his third and had an easy 4 to Wilder's 5.

The fifteenth began with two low drives both scored badly. Travis was in a trap and Wilder was in the rough. They both reached the green in 4 and took two putts, halving the hole in 6s. Travis was now 1 up with 3 to play.

Travis became dormie 2 at the sixteenth, which he won in a 3 to a 4. On the seventeenth both Travis reached the green in 2 and was down in 4. Wilder holed a long putt for a 3 but was beaten 2 up and 1 to play. Their cards:

Perhaps the best recovery of the day was made by Heinie Schmidt, the young Worcester golfer, who played and defeated Archie Reid of St. Andrews, N. Y., 2 up.

Schmidt was 2 down with but four holes to go. He won all four holes in fine figures, and the match 2 up.

Their cards:

Parker W. Whittemore of Boston administered a beating to Fred Herreschoff of New York by 8 up and 2 to play. Whittemore went out in the low figures of 37. W. R. Tuckerman defeated Oswald Kirkby of New York by 5 and 8. Tuckerman was out in 39 and played fast golf, considering the prevailing conditions.

P. G. Stevenson, who has never lost a match in a Lesley cup competition won a 19 hole match from Max Behr of New York after being 3 down at the turn. Stevenson was equal to the best golf and made the seventh point for Massachusetts. He won the extra hole in a 4 to a 5 for Behr.

Percival Gilbert won the last and decisive match of the day from J. W. Ward of New York by 1 up at the twenty hole. Gilbert thus scored the eighth for Massachusetts and won.

The foursomes which were played in the afternoon were not productive of the golf that the earlier matches had brought out, principally because the players knew that the match was over and that it was only a matter of how big Massachusetts could make the lead. The Bay State was satisfied to win two matches out of the five, Anderson and Tuckerman defeating Travis and Tiffany, and Wilder and Whittemore defeating Herreshoff and Knapp.

Their cards:

Anderson and Tuckerman, Out	4 4 4 4 6 4 5 6 4—41

Miss Faxon Wins Tennis.

BROCKTON, Oct. 1.—At the Thorney Lea Golf Club this afternoon, Everett L. Crosby and Edgar H. Thompson defeated Dr. Ernest Dwyer and Rev. Edgar B. French in the Scotch foursomes.

In the tennis tournament Miss Mary Green won over Mrs. Herbert C. Low by default. Miss Eula Faxon, scratch, won from Miss Bertha Snow, handicap, 13, 16-4 and 6-3. Next week the finals for the cup will be played.

AMATEUR GOLFERS IN TWO FALL TOURNEYS THIS WEEK

Boston Players Enter the Game at the Wollaston and Chestnut Hill Links.

WITH the national amateur championship, Lesley cup contests, State championships and intercollegiate tournaments now over, the big events of the golfing season for 1910 are past. There are, however, numerous club events and open tournaments for the amateurs of this State until Thanksgiving Day drops an official lid upon the game, which is not lifted until Spring.

This week will find a large number of Boston players at Wollaston and at Chestnut Hill. The Wollaston events will take up two days, Wednesday, October 5, an open tournament is scheduled, handicap medal play ruling the day, with appropriate prizes for the low gross and two low net scores. The play will be as usual, eighteen holes medal play. The open tournament will continue Thursday with a totally different competition ruling, namely a Handicap vs Bogey meeting.

Wollaston Course Popular.

None of the open tourneys that have been held in and about Boston throughout the Summer have been accorded the popularity that the Wollaston Golf Club has among the amateurs. The course is always in perfect trim and is noted for its fine greens. The fields are always over the 100 mark.

Closely following the Wollaston two days' meeting comes the annual two days Fall open tournament of the Chestnut Hill Golf Club. This meeting will be held Friday and Saturday, the same play, medal handicap, ruling.

Chestnut Hill has a fine little nine-hole course and, moreover, has made great improvements this year. Many of the tees have been set back, thus adding length to the course, and the turf is in excellent shape.

Prizes are offered here for the low gross score for the two days and for the two prevailing low net scores. Rain cost the Spring tournament many entries, but all golfers are anxious to get in all of the game that they can before the season ends and will enter at Chestnut Hill in large numbers.

A foursome has been arranged between four of the leading professionals of this district—T. L. McNamara and Willie MacGuire vs Alex and Donald Ross.

It will be remembered that the Ross brothers played in such a foursome last year at Brae Burn against Tom McNamara and Mike Brady, winning by a large margin. The contest as planned this year, however, will be played at the Wollaston Golf Club for a purse of $150 between October 7 and 20.

Great Interest in Professional Golf.

It is assured that the match is coming off, but a suitable date has not yet been fixed. A gallery of more than 500 followed the contest at Brae Burn last year, and interest in a professional match where the best golf of the State can be seen is always at a high pitch.

Donald Ross is just back from the land where golf was born and has played an excellent game on the other side. His brother, Alex, is the Massachusetts open champion and a fine golfer. Tom McNamara is one of the best known pros in Boston, while Willie McGuire has played some fine golf at Wollaston, where he is the professional and proving a most able player. A few days ago they were both over the links in 71's and had a best ball of 62.

The last big event of the year here in Massachusetts is the Fall meeting of three days at the Country Club, Clyde Park, Mass. This meeting is historical.

Myopia Hunt Club.

BEVERLY, Oct. 1.—North Shore enthusiasts for pony polo gathered by the hundreds here to-day to take in the final races of the Myopia Hunt Club. The races were all keenly contested, the thrilling finishes keeping the large gallery in a state of excitement throughout the afternoon. The winners were warded the Blake caps. Summary:

Blues—L. Dresel, 0; 2, N. Prince, 3; 3, J. A. L. Blake, 2, Back, F. B. Fay 2. Total handicap 6.

Red—F. Rogers, 3; 2, J. H. Proctor, 2; H. P. McKean, Jr., 1; Baron Von Hostman, 1. Total handicap 8.

Score—Red 8½, Blues 4½. Scorer—Dr. Southwick.

Canoe Races Off.

A heavy wind and very rough weather necessitated the postponement of the individual canoe races which were to be held yesterday in the Charles River Basin under the auspices of the Union Boat Club for a cup offered by the Eastern Division of the American Canoe Clubs Association. Canoeists from Rochester, N. Y., Winchester, Mass., and New York city were to compete in the races with members of the Union Boat Club. The race was to be five times around the triangular course for a total of seven and one-half miles. It has not yet been decided when the race will be held.

By Dick Carpenter.

HUNTERS piling into the Maine woods on every train for the deer season, the game bird men oiling up their old pump Winchesters and patching the leaks in their rubber boots, shore bird sportsmen coming back with stories of success and the sudden awakening of the gunners of this State to the fact that the rejuvenated Gunners' Association is going to be one of the biggest factors in better legislation that the State has ever known—all this gives us enough to talk about for a month.

Of course there are some few scores of the good fellows who want to talk nothing but big game and the Maine woods. Not that I blame them, but the shore shooting this week is bringing back the old desire for an afternoon on the water and its just as well to run over the situation in the field first.

"SNAP" YOUR GAME AND WIN A PRIZE

THE Boston Sunday American will give a high-grade Winchester rifle or shotgun of the latest model, manufactured by the Winchester Arms Company, for the best photograph of live game birds or big game taken before December 15 next.

For the second best picture received a camera will be awarded.

The clearness of the picture and the "action" shown will figure largely in making the awards. The names of the judges who will decide the winners will be printed within a short time.

Gamey Organization of Hunters.

As is the case with the opening of every season there has been a lot of talk about the law this year. And Massachusetts law have come in for a fair share of the conversations. Which brings us quite naturally to what appears to be about the liveliest and most gamey organization of gunners which the Commonwealth has known since the time Bill Peary was old enough to raise a shotgun.

Already the Massachusetts Gunners' Association has 300 members and the applications for membership are coming in every day to Treasurer Nathan F. Ives at No. 176 Milk street and to Secretary William C. Adams in the Old South Building.

The association stands for the preservation of recreative shooting. Further than that, the association officers do not care to go in outlining the program. But it's a sure thing that every member is going to have his say on the questions which the association will take up and push.

William C. Adams, secretary of the organization, has an excellent knowledge of shooting conditions throughout the State. He has some private opinions on what ought to be done and he has worked out a system which promises to work wonders.

Talking about the new movement, he said to me:

"The association is State-wide in its organization. The executive committee has five members. They are in a measure a ways and means committee. Working with them are the so called Eastern and Western committees. These two committees, last named, are composed of three members from each of the Eastern and Western counties of the State. They have representatives in every town.

"In the Fall they will present to the executive committee [illegible] findings on game and shooting conditions in all parts of the State. All the suggestions will be shifted down and the executive committee can gain the consensus of opinion and act before the Fish and Game Commission accordingly.

"We will co-operate as far as possible with this commission, but you may be sure that the organization has plenty of backbone in the movement as well. The hunters now pay a license of $1 each. We think that a hunter joining the association at the annual cost of $1 will get four times the sport from his favorite pastime than would be true under the old conditions."

Every man I have seen this week had only praise for the association. There are some who want to know right off the reel whether it is going to fight for Spring shooting, how it stands on the Game and Fish Commission's attitude and a hundred and one other things. From what I can see the association is going to right some existing wrongs and prevent others from being imposed on in a sport which has met many setbacks in the past.

Where the Birds Can Be Found.

What a whole lot of week-end shooters want to know right now is "Where are the birds this year?" Well, I've heard all kinds of stories and I'll tell you those that sounded the best.

Edward Read, who [illegible] down on the Cape every week for [illegible] shore bird shooting, says he found as many birds as he did when a boy at Nantasket.

"As far as I can see," he said, "this talk about extinction of birds is slightly exaggerated, to say the least. There are as many birds as there ever were. The trouble is that the shore is built up in the places where they used to be found. We don't get them now unless a storm drives them in.

"But down on the Cape you'll find all the shore birds you want and the ducks, I understand, are coming through in good shape."

At Cleveland's Pond in Abington they tell me they've bagged eighty-five ducks. The birds are flying a little earlier this Fall, if anything.

At West Abington a similar cheerful story was heard.

Object to Benson's Pond Lake.

The Harbor and Land Commission went from Boston to Middleboro the other day to hold a hearing on the proposal to secure special legislation to allow the State to dispose of Benson's Pond, which comes in the "great pond" class.

You better believe there were some good ones at the hearing, too. A few of the townsfolk say that if the State gives the pond to private parties for cran[illegible] use, the town will then begin to draw taxes for the property.

But the objectors to the plan far out weighed those in favor. James J. Rvdan of the Carver Commercial Club told of the value of the pond as a natural game sanctuary and covert. Disapproval of the plan was also shown by John A. Lowell, representing the Audubon Society.

Why the Ducks Disappeared.

A prominent Boston man who had just returned from New Bedford told me a funny story last night. Captain Proctor of the steamer Lexington and Thomas A. Dexter petitioned the State Board of Harbor and Land Commissioners last year to construct a jetty into Edzartown pond into the centre of the duck feeding grounds.

According to the Boston sportsman the Lexington appeared off the Horseneck Beach the other day, and at the same time the ducks began to disappear. The Lexington is cruising about those waters to enforce the short lobster and other laws. But she signalled her approach to the beach with a salute of firearms, it is said. And the ducks weren't seen again. The Boston man wouldn't call any bad names, but he dropped a few remarks about his ability with a rifle.

Partridge Numerous in Maine.

And this brings us to Maine and the gossip of the sportsmen up there. Partridge are more numerous than in former years. F. M. Crehore, John Wright, Paul Renwick and A. S. Woodsworth of Boston proper all got good bags near Rangeley.

Among some of the other fortunate partridge shooters were W. P. Fowler of Marblehead, William B. Blake of Dorchester, John Ellis of Torresdale, N. J., Hamilton Perkins of Worcester, W. R. Fordham and C. A. Fordham of Lowell and F. M. Foster and C. K. Weatherbee of Lawrence. The waterfowl have begun to be seen in some places about Rangeley, but few of them have been brought down.

THE QUERY COLUMN.

R. W. J., Wollaston—You ask me which I consider the best "all-around" rifle, the .38-55 or the .25-35 Remington auto-loader. Well, that expression "all around" is rather a baffling one, but I'll try to "get around" it. If you are going after a great variety of game and want to reload the shells with various loads suitable to different varieties of game, I would suggest the .38-55. But if you have in mind a rifle in which you are going to use high-power ammunition exclusively I'd choose the .25-35. Thanks for the appreciation.

N. E. COLLIE CLUB.

Show of Dogs at Meeting to Be Held October 10.

At the next monthly meeting held October 10, at the club room, No. 60 North Market street, the entertainment committee have arranged for a club show of collies, classes to be puppy, novice, and limit, divided up into sex. A small charge will be made for entry fees, which will be expended on suitable ribbons. Light refreshments will be served, such as ice-cream and cake and coffee, cake being provided by the lady members.

The following members of the club have kindly offered specials: J. Grierson offers a trophy for best in show, either sex; Mr. Bartels offers a trophy for best dog (male) in puppy class. Mr. Bartels offers a trophy for best bitch in puppy class. A. M. Grierson offers specials for dog or bitch with best head and ears. Mrs. A. M. Grierson offers a trophy for best in limit class. Other specials are promised and will be announced.

James Grierson, the treasurer of the club, was selected as judge for that evening. The show is open to non-members as well as members of the club. Everybody is invited, and a pleasant evening is assured.

Entries can be made with the clerk of the club any time prior to the show.

NOYES PLAYS GOLF IN CHAMPION FORM

Turns Brae-Burn for Low Gross Score of 75 in the Tournament.

C. W. Noyes, Jr., of Brae-Burn, was the low gross player in the open tournament at the Albermarle Golf Club yesterday, and played an exceptional round of seventy-five against the high wind that was blowing across the course. There were sixty-three entries for the tournament.

Grant Drake of the Hatherly Golf Club won the first net prize with a score of 87-20-67, while the second prize for the net score went to G. S. Sprague of Brae-Burn, who had a score of 88-18-70. C. W. Noyes's card was:

GIANTS-YANKS TO PLAY.

Post Series Arranged After Long Argument.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—President John T. Brush, of the Giants, to-day for the first time cast aside his puzzling reserve and announced that his team was ready to meet the Yankees in a post season series for the championship of New York city.

Through Harry Stevens, Mr. Brush sent this most welcome word to Frank Farrell, owner of the Highlanders. At the National commission meeting in Cincinnati, Monday, all details for the great local attraction will be worked out, a playing schedule adopted, umpires assigned, and special financial representatives of the commission appointed.

For some weeks it has been believed in sporting circles that the rival major league clubs of Manhattan would finally settle the question of supremacy this Fall. More than a month ago Mr. Brush gave Farrell his word that he would permit his club to meet their rivals if the players, press, and public desired the attraction. There was no doubt about players or press when Brush returned from Chicago, Friday did not take the owner of the Giants very many minutes to learn how New York stood on the question.

GUESS WORLD SERIES AND WIN $150 IN PRIZES

Hundreds Out for Awards to Ball Fans Offered by the American.

ALL you base ball fans get busy right away and see how close you can come to the actual scores of the coming world's baseball series. It is an East against the West this year with the Athletics and the Chicago Cubs fighting it out for the honor of being baseball champions of the world for 1910.

Already the Boston fans have shown by the hundreds that they are rooting all good and hard for a share of the $150 offered by the Boston American for the nearest estimate of the true scores of the games, and every mail brings still more letters to the contest editor.

The men who know all about the game and it is fun everybody who likes baseball the two games this year don't have to tell, nevertheless, one way or another about the result of the series. It is freely predicted that the city of Chicago will go on wild when the two teams come together about October 15.

This is something in which everybody has an even chance. All that can be said is to play your hunch on the games and see where you land.

There are 4 four prizes attached to the offer. The first will guesses nearest to the correct figures and the number of games played gets $50. The first winning four games decides the championship, so you've got to guess how many games will be played. The second prize is $25, the third $15, the fourth $10 and the other fifty prizes are $1 each.

Send your letters to the World's Series Editor, Boston American, P. O. Box No 259, Boston.

Mack Says World Series Will Be a Battle Royal

By Connie Mack,

Manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American League, and Cubs recalls for the world's champion

MY plans for the coming world's championship with the National League winner have not been laid out as yet. It is entirely too far away for me to think about, and as the time was near for the first battle then I will know what I am going to do.

The winner will have clear title as the best team in the world, and if my boys are beaten I will not make a complaint.

ATHLETICS WILL HAVE NO EASY JOB, SAYS MACK.

I am not going to make any rash predictions that the Athletics will win easily. We won't. If we win we will know that we have engaged in one of the tightest and toughest series in the history of the game.

With it all, however, the boys are going to make the Cubs display all their baseball knowledge.

I have not seen the Cubs play a single game this year, and, of course, do not know their style of play. We won first pennant by a wide margin, and as the Cubs are going to do the same in their league [illegible] Has Praise For Every Man on Team.

[illegible] won the flag by strong [illegible] What a great team [illegible] first game was [illegible] my star on the [illegible] efforts, and I think that [illegible] all stars in the credit of going [illegible] Bond pennant to the [illegible] league.

Those Golf Balls Don't Tickle a Bit; Do They?—By Tad

HAL CHASE (THE STAR FIRST BASEMAN AND NEW MANAGER OF THE "YANKEES") TELLS THESE STORIES

THERE have been some rare finds on baseball diamonds made when the ball got stuck on the pitcher's shifting rod and in many other freak ways, but Malachi Kittredge, the old baseball-type, told me of the funniest one I ever heard of the other day—a home run that was made in a game.

There was a political outing at College Point, Long Island, and in the ball game Kittredge appeared as a "ringer" on one of the teams. It was a close game from start to finish, and the score stood 2 to 2 in the last half of the ninth inning with two men out.

Judge "Paddy" Divver, who was then the Tammany leader on the East Side, New York, was at the bat. Paddy was a mighty big fellow. He had come to the outing in a cab, the one that he had ridden in from the time he first broke into politics. Even at the height of his career, Paddy never forsook his old cabman.

Well, after two strikes had been called on the judge Kittredge signaled his pitcher to put one right over the plate. Kit made a mistake, he should have called for one inside. Paddy took an awful swing and met the ball right on the nose, or where a baseball's nose should be, and it sailed way out to the beach a quarter of a mile away. The centerfielder chased after it as Paddy, with his 250 pounds started to tear around the bases.

He went down to first with the speed of a ten-second man, slowed up a bit going to second, and was toppling on his way to third. When he reached this base he collapsed and fell to the ground.

His trusty cabman, who had been watching the game from the top of his cab, was Paddy fan. In a second he whipped up his horse and drove furiously for third base. As soon as he got there he jumped down, packed Paddy into the cab, slammed the door, jumped back to his seat, whipped up the old gray nag and drove Paddy across the plate.

Paddy's opponents claimed that the run didn't count, but Garry Herrmann, then chairman of the National Commission, said that it did, so Paddy's team won.

* * * * *

CAREERS of players in the big leagues have lasted from one week to twenty years, but I know of a young man who

A youngster from some backlot league had been clamoring for a tryout with the giants for many days. Finally he was given a chance one afternoon, just before the game started. Jack Sharrott, the old time pitcher, who won a pennant for New York, was batting during the practice and called for the youngster—Sid Jones was his name—to pitch a few over the plate.

Jones wound up like a big leaguer and really shaped up great. The first and only ball he turned loose struck Sharrott on the right elbow, breaking it in two places. He had laid up the team's star pitcher and was banned on the spot. That was the shortest career of any man in the big leagues.

* * * * *

I REMEMBER when "Germany" Schmidt, one of the cleverest of the old-time twirlers, was a great man to collect bats. Pete Browning of the old Louisville, was a crank on wagon tongues, and was always willing to part with his coin for a new one. He liked long, heavy ones.

Well, one day when Schmidt was hard up, he spotted a bat in a sporting goods store. He paid about a dollar for it, and then took it out to a lot and scratched it up a bit. Then he wired Browning:

"Have a bat I know will suit you."

Browning wired back:

Send bat on. If good, will send check."

Schmidt answered:

Send check. If good, will send bat."

RUBE WADDELL went out to Oshkosh to pitch against the home team in a big game a few years ago, under the assumed name of Mike O'Toria. The local umpire had the reputation of favoring the home team. As he stood at the plate, before the game started, he announced the batteries O'Toria and Sweeper for Five Corners, Davidson and Smith for Oshkosh. Rube, who had been standing near him, removed his hat and made the following announcement:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the umpire today is Mr. Crane, of Oshkosh, who, as usual, will slightly favor the home club."

And this story must be true, for Rube told it to me himself.

* * * * *

THERE'S another funny one on "Germany" Schmidt, which Jimmy Callahan the outfielder, told me some time ago.

The Gunthers grounds in Chicago have a short right field fence. Schmidt was pitching for Callahan's team against Kilfallan of Detroit, and was having an unusually bad day. Four or five balls had been lifted over the short fence that would have been easy outs had it not been in the way. Finally Schmidt called to Callahan, who was playing centerfield, and said:

"You finish the game. I can do nothing."

"No, you have got to finish out your game," Callahan told "Germany." "They are too far ahead. What's the matter with you? Why don't you pitch inside to them so they can't hit at them and slam them over the fence?"

"Cal, I've tried to, but I think that they have that fence on rollers mit ropes attached to it, for when a ball on der ground is hit dat vay, I can see out goes the fence, and when a ball is hit in der air dat vay, vell in comes der fence."

CAP ANSON was in town the other day and one night after a game on the Hilltop, we got to talking about great backstops. Anse told me that in his opinion the quickest thinking man who ever wore the mask was Connie Mack, now manager of the Athletics.

When Mack was with Pittsburg, Gumbert was pitching in a game against Chicago. The latter team, with only one run needed to tie and two out, had the bases filled and Anson was up. The old man was the terror of all pitchers in that day, for he was a perfect judge of a ball and would never swing at a bad one. On this day Gumbert was a trifle wild, and the first two balls he pitched to Anson were wide. The next two cut the plate, but Anse let both pass, as it never worried him if he had two strikes on him.

It was a critical situation, for if Gumbert put the next ball over, it was a cinch that the old man would land on it hard, and perhaps break up the game. Mack thought it was up to him to do something, so he ran down to Gumbert, and whispered to him to pitch the next ball just a little wide of the plate, and then stay in position to pitch, waiting for a signal from him.

Gumbert curved one about a foot wide of the plate and Anson never moved to hit it. He felt confident that he would be given his base on balls, which would force in a run and win the game.

"Good strike, Ad!" yelled Mack, as he grabbed off his mask and started for the bench, as though the side was out and the game over.

"Strike?" shrieked Anson, wheeling around to the umpire to protest.

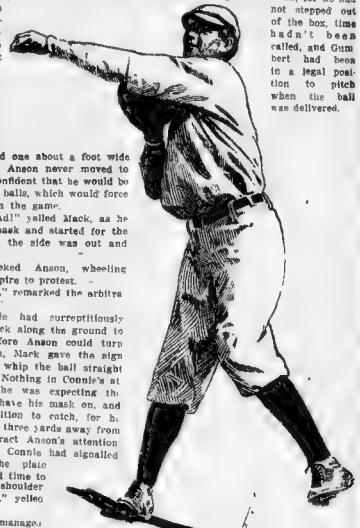
"I didn't say so," remarked the arbitrator. "Three balls."

Mack meanwhile had surreptitiously tossed the ball back along the ground to Gumbert, and before Anson could turn back into position, Mack gave the sign to his pitcher to whip the ball straight across the plate. Nothing in Connie's attitude told that he was expecting the pitch. He didn't have his mask on, and he wasn't in position to catch, for he had been standing three yards away from the plate to distract Anson's attention. The ball came as Connie had signalled right across the plate before Anson had time to get his bat off his shoulder.

"Three strikes," yelled the umpire.

Mack just managed to knock the ball down and touch the home plate, thus retiring the man who was on third.

Anse kicked and stormed, but there was no reversing the decision, for he had not stepped out of the box, time hadn't been called, and Gumbert had been in a legal position to pitch when the ball was delivered.



HAL CHASE IN ACTION.

Educational Notes

By Wex Jones

A [illegible] year there is usually a great [illegible] of interest in education, an interest temporarily dulled by the attractions of summer resorts where beaches and peaches combine to distract the young man's attention from the higher thought. And 1910 promises to present early indications, to be an unusual interest year in our academic struggles.

A truly gratifying news comes from Purdue University, where an extremely successful [illegible] has been held. In the struggle for knowledge some twenty students received serious bodily injuries. But what are bodily injuries if the intellect remains intact? Indeed, it might be asked of what account are bodily injuries if there is any intellect to remain intact?

West Point, where our future defenders learn more than the three R's, is also the scene of healthy academic activity. The entire corps of cadets has already missed a supper and a breakfast for the sake of indulging in uninterrupted meditation. This is far in advance of those young Scots who subsisted on literature and a little oatmeal—silence and no grub at all being a much more soul-inviting diet.

However, the disparities sneak for themselves:

Harvard—After two weeks of unceasing toil the faculty has finally decided upon a working interpretation of the new football rules. The leading experts in corporation and international law have been consulted, and, while there is wide divergence of opinion among the authorities, a majority report has been adopted. As for the executive end of it, old-time coaches point out that to tackle a man while you have one foot on the ground is little more than a conventional greeting, like shaking hands, instead of a preliminary to the ambulance.

Ursus—"It is the small colleges that makes men," declares the president of Ursus to-day. "If you don't believe it," he added, "look how we beat Pencilvania."

Jail—As an indication of the modern young man's devotion to study, it should be mentioned that fifteen jail men are now in hospital suffering from brain fever. It has been impossible for the college authorities to prevent certain earnest students from poring over the new football rules until their minds have given way under the strain. Which shows what young men will do nowadays for the sake of getting an education.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE RACES

By Doc Stanley

A VERY interesting character who followed the races over the Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia circuit for a number of years was Bill Wheeler, a former miner in the coal fields, who was as rough as a pine sapling. Bill was an all-round sportsman, gruff of manner, a man of tremendous strength and well liked by those who knew him best.

During the Baltimore races, some fifteen years ago, Bill suffered an attack of heart failure and was obliged to consult a physician. "You must take a rest, Mr. Wheeler, and try a sitting or form of living. Get up into the Pennsylvania mountain."

Bill was pretty well scared by his sickness, and he started for the mountains post haste.

He landed after a day's ride in a little village recommended by his doctor and proceeded to take the lay of the land. "Who is that little cuss who sits opposite me at the table?" roared Bill at the hotel clerk of the modest inn in the little mountain town.

He is a travelling evangelist," answered the clerk.

"Don't like his looks," said Bill. "He looks as if he would pull young corn. No psalm singers for mine, and you dump me hereafter at another table."

Two nights later Bill was awakened at 2 o'clock in the morning by the ringing of the village church bells. A large barn on the outskirts of the town was on fire, and the hand engine tub of the village went by the hotel with a rush. Bill, in a bathrobe and trousers, came downstairs to ascertain the cause of the commotion.

Now, to get to the scene of the fire was a distance of over two miles from the hotel, but by crossing the town lots the journey was cut in two. While Bill stood upon the piazza of the hotel the little dominie started out from the hotel across lots for the fire, and Bill started after him.

Well in the rear of the hotel ran a deep sewer trench, unknown to Wheeler. The evangelist, knowing the local geography, leaped it at a bound, but Bill went in head over heels.

Fifteen minutes later Bill landed in the hotel office.

"Why, Mr. Wheeler, where have you been?" said the astonished night clerk.

"For the first blankety, blank, blank time in my life I have been following evangelism, and you can see where it led me," roared Bill.

A SOUTHERNER greatly beloved by racing men and a splendid patron of the sport was the late James E. Pepper, the millionaire distiller of Louisville. Mr. Pepper had in his employ an old fellow who had fought in Stonewall Jackson's corps, and who had been a trusted workman for over forty years.

Some young fellows were planning a trip across the water, and they insisted the old Confederate soldier should go.

"Well," said Mr. Pepper to [illegible] man, "if you would like to go across the water I will pay your passage."

Ten days later the old Confederate soldier started with his youthful companions over the sea. The party were gone three months and had a royal time.

"Who was the politest man you met in Europe?" said an acquaintance, after the old soldier returned home.

Without stopping for a moment's reflection, the old fellow replied:

He was a gentleman I met at the Cecil, in London, and to whom I carried a letter of introduction from Mr. Pepper. The Englishman was quite deaf, but a grand fellow, and he invited us all to spend Sunday at his country seat upon the Thames, near Henley, and when he learned I came from Louisville, Ky., he passed me a large goblet, a quart flask of whiskey, and then crossed the library and looked out of the window.

"There, sah, there, sah, was the politest man in Europe!"

AFTER the recent Grand Circuit meeting at Readville a number of regulars dropped in at the Adams House. Sitting in the corridor was a young fellow, who persisted in butting into the company.

Finally one of the horsemen said, "Where do you live?"

"I live in Lee-ex-ing-ton-ton, Ky.," said the young man.

"You never saw the town in your life, and you get out of here pretty quick for your own good."

The pronunciation of the Blue Grass acropolis had succeeded in loosening the Kentuckian's bulldog from its leash.

SOME twenty-five years ago a party of well-known turf patrons were sitting in the Palace Hotel in San Francisco. In the party were "Uncle Bill" Sharon, "Lucky" Baldwin, Howell Osborne of New York, Charlie Fair (killed in France while driving his auto), Ned Ralston and a number of others.

"Let us go to the theatre. I have a box engaged at the Bush Street," finally said Osborne.

"Agreed," said the company. The play was a musical comedy, in which Miss Fay Templeton played the lead, and the comedian was—if my memory serves me right—Charles A. Bigelow.

Now, Howell Osborne was a great suitor of Miss Templeton, and another who sought her hand was the son of a Hawaiian sugar millionaire.

The curtain rose for the second act and Bigelow strolled up to Miss Templeton. Pointing to her magnificent diamonds, he said: "Are those salt?"

"No, those are sugar," replied Miss Templeton.

I thought the roof would come off the way the audience roared.

The young sugar millionaire took his cousin for a fair that night.

A Baseball Primer

By William F. Kirk

SEE the lady. Is she a beautiful lady? Yes, she is a very beautiful lady. Why is the beautiful lady going to see the Giants beating the Boston team? She is not going to see the Giants beating the Boston baseball team. She is going to see the Boston team beating the Giants. Oh, so she is.

* * * * *

WHAT is this? This is a pitcher. Is he a good pitcher? No, he is not a good pitcher. He is too light for the big leagues and too heavy for the minor leagues. What is he doing? He is having his picture taken, so the sporting editor can print it when the pitcher is released. How would you like to be pitchers, children, and be released?

* * * * *

OH, see the cute little girl. What is she doing? She is only a ground keeper's daughter. She is setting fire to the club house. Why is she setting fire to the club house? Because her father spanked her this morning just as the sun was rising in the East. Does the sun always rise in the East? Yes, children, so it does.

* * * * *

CHILDREN, see the funny looking man. Is he a poor man? No, he is not a poor man. He is a magnate. He is the owner of the baseball park where all you children went yesterday afternoon. Does the magnate care for the little children that go to see his team play baseball? No, the magnate does not care for the little children. The magnate cares for the fathers of the little children. Why does the magnate care for the fathers of the little children? Because the fathers of the little children are the men that pay the magnate all the money that he makes. Is he a nice magnate? Yes, he is a nice magnate. Will he give us a season pass? No children, he will not give you a season pass. He will refuse to give you a season pass. Oh, so he will.

* * * * *

SEE the man. Is he a thin man? No, he is not a thin man. He is a brewery man from New York. What is he doing here? He is here to see how many New York batters will be struck out. Is it not hard for a fat man to come all the way here from New York? Yes, children it is hard for a fat man from New York to go anywhere that he is not known. Oh, so it is.

* * * * *

SEE the second baseman. Is he a nice second baseman? No. Then why is he a second baseman? I do not know, children. Why is Sherman a Vice-President? Is the second baseman going to the club house? Yes, the second baseman is going to the club house. Why is the second baseman going to the club house? Because he wants his pay. Does the second baseman earn his pay? No, he does not earn his pay. Then why does the second baseman get his pay? Nobody knows, children.

CHAMPION BOWLERS IN BIG BOSTON CAMPAIGN

Fall Season on Alleys Opens With a Rush; Two Leagues Begin Play

Fred M. Williams is one of the best all-around bowlers in the country. W. H. Holmes was the 1909 star of the City League. Chester Carruth and Timothy J. Burns, Jr., are big league heads. H. G. Hintze is a single pin crack.

Boston League of 10-Pin Players Starts Schedule. Suburbanites Have Fast League.

By Ed Cogswell.

THESE days note the passing of the baseball fan and the arrival of the bowling bug, and, judging by the pronounced success of the opening matches in the Greater Boston League late in the week, the bowling bug is certain to enjoy the best season had in this section.

Thursday will see the Suburban League under way, the second in importance of all the leagues, rating next to the Greater Boston by a narrow margin. The Suburban will be in full swing for thirty-three weeks, distributing $293 in prizes.

Suburban League Sure of Lively Contest.

It is made up of two teams each from the Chelsea Square alleys, Everett Square Auditorium in Malden, Knight's alleys in Woburn, the Broadway alleys in Revere and the Boulevard alleys in Revere. The plan of having two teams from each of the alley insures matches each Thursday night over the home alleys.

One of the rules of this league is that none of the bowlers rolling in Greater Boston can take part except in the case of the owner or manager of the alley.

This means bringing into the limelight of bowldom a lot of new stars, the list of men taking part including such prominent ones as Allen, Hodge and Bean of Malden, Dunbar, Wallace and Carl Phoeler of Everett, Davis, McCarron and Looney of Woburn, Crutchfield, Stackhouse and Tuttle of the Broadway, Revere, Graves and White of the Chelsea Square and Murphy of the Boulevard alleys, in Revere.

Many Leagues in Boston.

From word received before the month is over the following leagues will have begun their schedules: Amateur Boston, Newton, Life Insurance, Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Odd Fellows, Pere Marquette, A. O. U. W., Knights of Columbus, Suburban Interclub, Allston Baraca, Custom House, Greater Boston Church, Wholesale Drug, Mercantile, West End Interclub, Wood, Hersey, Boston & Maine, Furniture, Wholesale Drug, Bankers and Brokers, Marketmen's, Chelsea Trade, New England, Electrical, Elks Interclub, Newspaper, Postoffice and many new leagues now in the way of formation.

Likely nobody has had any better experience in getting together strong teams than Timothy J. Burns, Jr., of Chelsea. In collecting five bowlers capable of making a strong showing in a league, wonderful judgment in the placing of the men on the team must be had to insure the best results. As he says:

"There seems to be an idea among some managers and captains to hold their best bowler for the anchor, or last, position on a team. This, I believe, is entirely wrong and must fail in bringing out the best results.

"The anchor man should be the best single pin gatherer, one almost certain to bag nine or ten pins in a box, and not what is called a spare spearer.

"It is up to the four men ahead of the anchor man to carry the game along up to the very finishing boxes, when it is possible only a pin or so separates the opposing teams. Now comes the value of the almost sure pin picker, as spares have a way of not coming when most needed.

"In most instances the brilliant strike or spare man who rolls up big scores now and then is utterly at sea when against a bad break, and when at anchor with a bad break before him will be nearly sure to fall down with a six or seven box, while the steady eye-on-one-pin man goes after a bad break so artistically that he will clean off a few of the scattered pins with each of his two last balls and keeps the game in hand.

Value of the Single Pin Picker.

"Many is the time that I have seen it come to the very last pin, one standing alone, to be got in order to tie the string or win by that single pin. It is right here, you can readily see, where the value of the single pin picker is illustrated.

"For the leader-off in a team should be a man that will start the score with a rush. Here is where a spare or one following right on another in the first two boxes fills the men following with confidence. There is nothing like getting away with a good start.

"It is frequent that when the first man falls down the others on the team will follow suit. Queer it has seemed but bad breaks and all kinds of what is called tough luck will come right along down the string. Let the first man up make good and it often appears like the pins were setting up in the alleys only waiting to be swept into the gutters, all kind of balls, good or otherwise, making great execution.

"While I'm talking I want to have a word about the alleys at Chelsea Square. There was a story about Boston last season that the alleys were not regulation, being the reason for the big scores. As you know, the regulation for setting the pins is 12 inches apart, and the report given out was that that were only 11¾ inches. [illegible] the alleys and I asked him to look them over. Of course, my object was in refuting the yarn of not being regulation alleys. When we got down to the pin spots I took out a foot rule and demonstrated right there the distance between each of the spots was he full twelve inches."

Whether there will be a revival of the match games between the bowling stars for liberal wagers, the same as last [illegible] soon [illegible] too early to [illegible]. The [illegible] have not yet [illegible] point where they feel like real champions but the arrival of cold weather is very probable to produce some of the interesting contests.

Conducted in a proper way and spirit these matches are a big benefit to the sport. All of the bowling bugs desire being on the spot to witness the experts rally off the spares and occasionally a spill. Room [illegible] Boston alley space was at a premium at the [illegible] decided there last season.

Another decided benefit to the sport is intercity matches. In Worcester, Springfield, North Adams, Portland, Lowell and other cities can found experts rating with the best: in fact, there is a general feeling in some of these cities that they have teams capable of giving the best to be picked in Greater Boston all they can handle [illegible] most [illegible].

It was a move [illegible] started last W[illegible] but in some way it fell through at the last minute, due, it was said, to jealousy on the part of some of the alley owners in these cities wanting to hog the whole proposition.

It was planned to have the teams in each city roll on a certain night each week and immediately after the game wire or telephone the scores a good deal [illegible] manner of intercollegiate [illegible].

It is a most excellent idea, having very little expense attached, and if brought to the front this season must excite wide interest. Alley owners, for the good of the sport, should drop all differences and unite in having a league of this description.

W. H. Kirk, who has for so long been identified with the Murray & Irwin's alleys, has made arrangements to take charge of the alleys that will open at No. 7 Elm street the 20th of this month.

BOWLING RETURNS IN THE AMERICAN

SECRETARIES of bowling leagues in Greater Boston are requested to send to the Boston American complete schedules of their matches as soon as arranged, and the official scorers are asked to [illegible] ing of the clubs early each week. Proprietors of bowling alleys are invited to forward a list of the leagues using their alleys. Bowling news of the teams or individuals participating in the sport is welcomed at all times and will be published.

LADY ISLE BEATEN BY W. A. IN FAST PACING RACE

"Long Shot" Cox Obliged to Take Second Money With the Boston Mare.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1.—Get-a-way day of the Grand Circuit meeting here saw many of the stables that have taken part in the two week's of sport shipping to Lexington, Ky., where the harness horses hold forth in the final big meet of the season that opens Monday.

[illegible] decided to-day. "Long Shot" Cox turned Lady Isle for the word and many of the speculators were of the opinion that he was out for one of his famous killings. However this may have been, when the result was counted, W. A. headed the summary, and the Boston man was second.

Peter Dorsey had about all he could handle in securing the 2.10 trot, five heats being necessary, Orleans grabbing off the first couple of heats. Grace G. took the 2:11 pace off the reel.

The Summary:

HAVE ADOPTED POLICY OF CONSERVATISM

Mitchell Co. Will Limit Its 1911 Product to Only 8,000 Cars.

Twelve million dollars' worth of automobiles will be the 1911 model output of the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company of Racine, Wis., factory arrangements having been completed for the building of 8,000 cars, every one of which will have been disposed of before it is ready for shipment from the Racine plant.

"This seemingly tremendous output," said Sales Manager James W. Gibson, "is thirty-five per cent less than the output that the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company would have to make were it to accede to the demands of the Mitchell agents and dealers all over the country and take into consideration foreign order contingency. Throughout the policy of conservatism the company has elected to be well within the maximum of demands of its agents, and will be content to attain the production limit of 8,000 automobiles without making extraordinary mechanical additions to the plant."

The 1911 line includes four models, the runabout, surrey type, five-passenger four-cylinder car and the six-cylinder seven-passenger machine. Liberal and standard equipment is provided with each model, the Model R, four-cylinder runabout, thirty horsepower, fully equipped, selling for $1,200, the surrey type for $1,250, the Model T, the four-cylinder, four passenger car, will sell for $1,600, fully equipped, while the six-cylinder car is listed at $2,250.

In the advance announcement sent out by the Mitchell-Lewis Company information is given that all the touring bodies will be fitted with four doors, the front door on the right hand side to be removable, but not longer than is placed between the change speed levers and the emergency brake.

At a Slight Expense.

Orin H. Clapham of Oakland, who purchased the first Flanders "20" of the Roadster type, has written the manufacturers, Brothers Company, that up to two years time has been driven his machine a total distance of twelve hundred miles at an expense of five cents.

2,500 Miles in an E-M-F.

H. L. Todd of the Argeo & London Parks National Bank, recently completed a twenty-five hundred mile tour with his E-M-F car, averaging eighteen and one-half miles to the gallon of gasoline and three hundred miles to one call of oil during the

BIG MEN AND CARS TO RACE AT ATLANTA

Thirty-Five of the Most Daring Operators Have Entered for the Southern Meet.

With thirty-five cars actually entered in 141 events thirty-six days before the Fall race meeting of the Atlanta Automobile Association it is virtually certain that the seventy-eight little short iron gamecocks in the infield of the Atlanta Speedway will be all too few to hold the marmites that will be sent to Atlanta for the local race.

More than half the Vanderbilt cup cars have been entered for Atlanta more than half the Wheeling Hills machines and all but one of the Massapequa snowshoes, to say nothing of unentered or promised. All but two or three of the Grand Prize cars are considered actual certainties. Several luxe racers have entered.

Atlanta's next pacemaker to be the fastest track race of the year will not be its second fixture. The best cars of the South have already been entered. Two speedsters that have been raced with grand success in the far West have been promised and efforts are being made to round up a couple of New Orleans cars, in order that the Crescent City may be among the sections represented. And of course in addition to the cars entered in the various sections of America there will be several cars owned in Europe among those which will be driven. Nearly all of the cars entered are of foreign make and three of the drivers named are foreign born, two of them being Englishmen.

Especial interest attaches to the entry of the two Denver Mercers. These cars took first and second honors on the Chicago speedway in a recent meet averaging 97.3 miles an hour for 500 miles. These cars are to open at the Denver races. Both are owned by W. J. Carter and will be entered by him.

Colonels Fish and Studebaker.

Colonel Prescott F. Fish and Colonel George M. Studebaker directors of the E-M-F Company, were interested spectators at the speedway meeting in Boston, Colonel Fish as an interested as one of the manufacturers.

THREE LIVES LOST IN VANDERBILT RACE

quick and clever manipulating he changed a tire in sohrt order and won with 52 seconds to spare.

And, speaking about tires, brings to mind the fact that of the six Vanderbilts which have been ridden, five were won on Michelin tires, and that every place winner today was equipped with this make of tire.

No less praiseworthy than the work of Grant was the performance of Joe Dawson in the little Marmon, who, after combatting the leadership of such men as Mulford, Chevrolet, Burman and Basle took the leadership in the eleventh lap and held it until he was forced to stop to repair a leak in his gasoline as the result of the shock caused by hitting a spectator on one of the turns. No one seems to know what injuries were inflicted on the bystanders.

John Aitken in the National drove a heady, plucky race and is entitled to considerable praise. There were many leaders in the big event, the interest of which was greatly reduced owing to the tardiness of time announcements.

The cars lined up alongside the several pits in front of the grandstand but as the darkness was being driven before the dawn. They presented a formidable appearance. Every one of the forty-odd cars looked spick and span and fit to fight for a King's ransom. For an hour prior to the start the cars were lined up, operators and mechanics putting the finishing touches to them and the gathering spectators looking them over with thorough care and circumspection, endeavoring to determine in their own minds just which had the best chance of victory.

Sent Away at Dawn

At 6 o'clock all the cars for the Vanderbilt were lined up in Indian file and at the word was sent away on their 278.08 miles of battle at fifteen second intervals in this order: National, Livingston, Lozier, Mulford; Marquette, Arthur Chevrolet; Mercedes, Wishart; Simplex, Beardsley; Benz, Hearne; Benz, Horn; Alpha, Jones; National, Aitken; Stearns, Mitchell; Columbia, Stone; Corbin, Matson; Stoddard Harding; Benz, Brow; Pope, [illegible]; Alco, Grant; Jackson, Schaeffer; Otis, Stillman; Marmon, Harroun; Pope, Dingley; Amercau, Wallace; Stoddard, Dayton; Marmon, Dawson; Hupp, Rockwell; [illegible]; Marquette, Louis Chevrolet; National, Disbrow and Knox, Belcher.

The only car to withdraw at the start was the Oldsmobile driven by Nelson, which experienced mechanical troubles.

The start was picturesque in the extreme. All cars but that driven by Louis Chevrolet got away in good order, he stalling his motor at the word. In less time than it takes to tell he was going with even before losing his position in the order.

There was a decided dose of cheering at the start, the only outburst like that which marked the opening of the contest. The exhaust from the motors was so great at the start that the cars were hardly distinguished and a rest before it cleared away. Mulford in the Lozier, Arthur Chevrolet in the Marquette and [illegible] in the National passed the grand stand in a flash, having a decided gain on the field.

Daring Driver Killed.

The going in this the first lap of the race was daring, spirited and speedy. It was this lap that Stone's car turned turtle at Hicksville, instantly killing him and injuring his mechanic.

On this lap the [illegible] broke a radius rod and stopped [illegible] the same with the Apperson and carburetor troubles. In this lap Louis Chevrolet covered the distance in 10 minutes, forty-six seconds and led the field. Fred Belcher with a Knox being in second position [illegible] robot was in third position [illegible] Burman for that honor. The others were Mulford, Wishart, Dingley, Wells, Brown, Aitken and Grant in that order.

The going was terrific in the next lap. Chevrolet held his position while Belcher was forced into third position. [illegible] was going into second and Dawson in the Marmon by clever driving getting into fourth position, Dingley going into sixth place, Fleming falling back [illegible] while Aitken and Grant went up.

The men retained the position until the fifth lap when Mulford by a splendid drive drove into fifth position. While on his fourth lap and [illegible] Belcher, in the Knox, broke a valve and was put out of the running.

Drive Like Friends.

At seventy-five miles Louis Chevrolet, in the Buick, was leading the field by one full minute, he, up to that time, having traveled at an average of 77½ miles an hour. Burman, his teammate, was pressing him hard for first place, while Dawson in the Marmon was next. The other leaders of the class were Mulford, Fleming, Grant, Mitchell, Hearne and Disbrow. These ten were away ahead of the field and driving like veritable friends.

At this time the Knox, Royal tourist and Columbia, had retired from the contest. There was frequent exhibitions of remarkable daring, phenomenal driving, and spectacular taking of turns on two wheels with entire disregard of the elements of danger. At 101 miles Chevrolet, the leader, stopped at his pit to take on an extra tire, and the same done by Fleming and mate of the Pope team. In some mysterious manner word got around to the men and they increased their speed in order to close up the distance. Every man had by this time gotten into his racing stride and some fine work was exhibited.

Harry Grant, in the Alco and Dawson in the Marmon had a fine race down the stretch. In the ninth lap there was a change of leadership. Chevrolet, two miles outside Hicksville, struck a touring car throwing the passengers out and killing Charles Miller his mechanic. Two of the occupants of the touring car were injured.

Burman took the lead while Dawson in the Marmon went into second and Grant in the Alco took third place, less than four minutes separating the three leaders and it was anyones race. Disbrow in the National had climbed into fifth place, Dingley into sixth and Burman into seventh, Mulford into eighth.

Race Proves To Fast.

At this time the leaders had averaged 73¾ miles an hour, entirely too fast to last and a pace which commenced to develop the weaknesses. The Marmon stopped for oil and changed two tires while the Lozier changed a valve in front of the press stand.

Then another great change, the men seesawing back and forth so that at 139.40 miles Dawson with the Marmon was driving in first position with Disbrow in the National second and Harry Grant the winner of a year ago in third position while Mulford in the Lozier was fourth. These three men were traveling like veritable fiends [illegible] holding their own with the rest. Joe Marmon was then almost five minutes ahead of the nearest competitor. The positions of the ten leading men were:

The first five cars were well [illegible] and some phenomenal driving was experienced.

Joe Dawson showed great headwork and ability keeping away from the field. Grant in the Alco fought hard all the way and gradually [illegible] forged through the field, taking all of the men and at 164 miles [illegible] managed to get into third position. The Lozier was having its share of tire troubles, making another change here.

Grant Overhauls Leader.

At 202 miles Dawson was [illegible] cutting the pace, while Grant, who had crawled up to second position, was chasing him like an avenging shadow. The pair were traveling just as fast as at any stage of the contest and looked as if they would continue forever. On the seventeenth lap Grant stopped for tires and fuel while Dawson just plugged and plugged right along. While on this lap the Stoddard was called from the track by Referee Vanderbilt on account of having a [illegible].

The Alco on the eighteenth lap went into the lead, this being the first time on record when a Vanderbilt winner of any one year even showed to the fore in the [illegible] race. Dawson and the Marmon were forced back through a slight leak in the gasoline line caused by a collision with a spectator. The National went into second position and Dawson managed to hold third with the Simplex fourth, and Pope-Hartford fifth.

[illegible] great [illegible] swathes in the time and Dawson was gaining steadily on him. At the opening of the final lap Grant came to the tape with a punctured front tire. With Dawson less than [illegible] behind Grant had to hustle. He did. In less time than it takes to tell he had a new tire and was off again. His driving was wonderful. He finished first in 4 [illegible] 58½ seconds.

Dawson put up as game an exhibition as one could desire and finished in 4 hours, 16 minutes, 24½ seconds, while Aitken, in the National, was third in 4 hours 17 minutes 29 3-5 seconds.

At this time more than three-quarters of the cars were on the track but the crowd forced its way on to the racing surface and the races were called.

In the Wheatley sweepstakes, in which the two Falcar finished first and second and the Marmon third, there was some pretty work indeed. The time of the winning car for the 189 1-2 miles was 3 hours 14 minutes 29 seconds. The light car class furnished real excitement. Bill Knipper in the Lancia took the lead at the very start and held it until the seventh lap when near Hickville he ran over the slue of a bridge, turning the car turtle and breaking his leg, his mechanic and all others being uninjured. In this same race the Abbott Detroit, driven by V. Padula with mechanic John Barber struck a telegraph pole at Westbury and both were seriously injured.

Edward Lynch, seventy years old, of Glen Cove, L. I., was knocked down and killed by an automobile party of unidentified persons returning from the race, making four killed.

MOTOR TRUCK TEST WILL HAVE IMPORTANT BEARING UPON TRADE

Manufacturers and Dealers Confident That Results of Boston American Test Will Be Satisfactory.

Although the date for the holding of the Commercial Motor Truck Run of the Boston American has not been reached, inquiries are beginning to come in from [illegible] a desire of applying motor vehicles to their own business.

There is no question in the minds of the manufacturers or their agents but what the coming run will have a most important bearing upon the future of the motor truck industry in this section of the country. They are all thoroughly confident that the results will prove, beyond the question of a doubt, the economy, efficiency and reliability of motor trucks when compared with the work of a horse drawn vehicle. They consider, as a whole, that the test, as mapped out, is one of the very best that could possibly have been adopted and will demonstrate the real ability, endurance and reliability of the trucks themselves. They are strong for a contest at such a distance and under such conditions, they contending that a motor [illegible] should be able to carry its load, [illegible] the various demands

GRAVES OF ALGONQUIN INDIAN CHIEFS FOUND

Motor Vehicles Now Race Over Former Resting Place of Aborigines.

The hill climb at Algonquin, Ill., given under the auspices of the Chicago Motor [illegible] proved [illegible] thorough demonstration of the efficiency of motor cars on grades ever given in this country. Algonquin is situated about fifty miles from Chicago, a small town in the valley of the Fox River. Last year the meeting hill, which was about 1,000 feet long, was in Dundee County and this year the Algonquinites constructed a hill 800 feet long with grades from 12 to 26 per cent. This hill will be used by the Chicago Motor Club during the coming years for the purpose of this annual hill climb and will undoubtedly be used by the different concerns in Chicago to demonstrate the ability of their cars climbing hills.

A very funny coincidence happened in the construction of the meeting hill by the Algonquin people. It was the custom of the Algonquin Indians to bury their chief at the highest point in the vicinity of which their tribe lived and at the time the town of this hill was being plowed to construct the road an Algonquin chief's grave was unearthed. The bones were carefully gathered and presented to the Chicago Motor Club and will be placed in their club room at the New Southern Hotel in this city.

The competition of the morning hill climb of 1910, with that of the new one just constructed in reference to time—last year the fastest car made the hill in eighteen seconds. This year the record was made by Eddy Hearne in a Buick in the time of 17 2-5 seconds. The average time of the cars to climb this hill was 24 1-5 seconds. The afternoon hill was made up of 43 seconds, with the average time of cars 40 1-4 seconds.

The division and classes under which this hill climb is run by the Motor Club is on the basis of piston displacements for the stock cars, with the exception of stock cars as well as for stripped cars.

The Velie Motor Vehicle Company, who is never given much attention to events of this kind as well as endurance runs, are certainly very proud of the showing they made at Algonquin. The Velie which won in this race last year, won again and in the stock car event Mr. Cooper drove the Velie Forty with motor 6x5½, inches, taking second place against many other higher priced cars. The Velie made the morning hill in 19 1-5 seconds, and the afternoon in 41 2-5 seconds. In the stripped stock chassis event the Velie took first, two second and two third, defeating cars with motors 4 1/2x4½, 5x5 1/2, 4 1/2x5½, bore and stroke.

Reo "Thirty"—Five-Passenger Touring Car, $1250
Top and Mezger Automatic Windshield Extra

The 1911 Reo is here—exactly the same kind of car as the Reo that made the phenomenal record trip from New York to San Francisco in 10 days, 15 hrs., 13 min.

Ever since the Reo made this marvelous record we have been besieged with inquiries, when will the 1911 Reo cars be in town?

You see, people realize what this record means. It proves that the Reo has the stuff in it—the stuff that gives steady service every day in the year and every minute of the day. For a car that can keep on going at that speed day and night for 10½ days, through the deep mud, through sandy trackless deserts full of washouts, and over rough mountain roads—a car that has done this, will do anything that you can.

This record proves that the Reo light-weight construction is several times stronger than it needs to be; for never before was a motor car at any price put to such a [illegible] federal test. The only argument advanced against light-weight construction is that it might not be strong enough. This argument can never again be used against the Reo, and its advantages of Reo light-weight construction stand out stronger than ever—unhampered by any possible notion of insufficient strength. This victory was not won by spurts and dashes, followed by repairs and rest, but by steady plugging—so many miles every day, according to a schedule laid out in advance—proving the infallible and consistent reliability of the Reo.

Come see this car. "Hand-some is as handsome does," but handsome looks are so much more to the good. The Reo is handsome—from every point of view. Agents in New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts get in touch with us [illegible] territory.

CITY INVESTMENT PARCELS SHOW UP WELL IN REALTY SALES

IMPROVEMENT IN MARKET

Difficulty in Securing Mortgage Money Is One Cause of Complaint Among Brokers.

By FRANK A. LAVELLE.

FOR the first time in several months sales of properties in the city proper made a good showing the past week, and included in the large batch of such transactions were many important investment properties. The changing hands of such parcels is a good sign of a better market, for apparently the number of investors looking for good parcels is increasing and trading will undoubtedly pick up considerably the next few weeks.

The suburbs still continue to report many sales and prospective purchasers of [illegible] seem to be very numerous. Buyers of house lots at the various suburban [illegible] about the city are reported [illegible] operators in this class of property are [illegible] an unusual business for this season of the year.

Among the sales reported yesterday was that by [illegible] J. Cronin of the Easton [illegible] who has sold for Philip [illegible], trustee, the estate at Nos. [illegible] Lancaster street, near Causeway street, to Nathaniel A. Francis et al., trustees of the Francis Trust. The property consists of a six-story brick building and about 1,975 square feet of land [illegible] $34,800. [illegible] of the Devonshire building represented the purchasers.

[illegible] has sold to Max Woron et al. the four-story brick house and 1,050 square feet of land at No. 77 Poplar street, between Brighton and Spring streets, West End, all taxed for $7,200, of which $[illegible] is on the land.

In the Back Bay a brick four-story house and 1,100 square feet of land [illegible] near Dalton street [illegible] assessed for $8,500, have been purchased by [illegible] from the Old C[illegible] and land is rated for $[illegible].

Sales by Henry W. Savage's Office.

During the past three days Henry W. Savage has passed papers transferring to new owners property in Brookline having an assessed value of over $[illegible], consisting of the following property: [illegible]

[illegible]

LYNN—Henry W. Savage reports that the property at No. 87 Lakeview avenue which he sold to Ada F. Jackson about three weeks ago [illegible]

ADVOCATES REALTY TITLE INSURANCE

Broker Recommends It as Means of Bettering Future Conditions and Lightening Labors.

A prominent broker, discussing the real estate situation recently, said: "Too little attention [illegible] brokers [illegible] from [illegible] title insurance [illegible] properties [illegible] is two [illegible] closed [illegible] Some brokers object to the thorough examination [illegible] companies before they will guarantee a title, yet it is an unfair to the purchaser not to see that he gets the best protection available, even if we are only interested in getting our broker's commission. As a matter of fact, I have frequently [illegible] broadened my own business by enlightening the one buyer on this subject. If a title is [illegible]

[illegible] subsequent examination may bring to light is an [illegible] and cleared away to save the buyer future trouble and expense when he disposes of the property.

"I find it a great source of satisfaction when making a sale to find a policy of title insurance among the title papers of the seller. Time is money even to us brokers, and a policy is always a guarantee of early settlement and the receipt of our hard earned commissions. I am not the only one who has been [illegible] in this respect, for I have often heard other real estate men express their satisfaction on similar occasions. Therefore I must acknowledge our inconsistency when we do not recommend title insurance generally, and express my disapproval of those of us who openly object to handling our deals through a title insurance company, especially as few will deny that it is only a matter of a few years until from the very nature of existing conditions [illegible] rely by the title companies [illegible]

[illegible] practically never ends except in cases of mortgage insurance, and that at any time they may be called upon to defend the title insured, or pay the holder the face value of his policy.

"If insurance was required in all cases our troubles of settlement would be over [illegible] few years. The companies [illegible] a day or two.

"I believe we are bettering future conditions and lightening future labors every [illegible] to take title [illegible] broadening the [illegible] its investments [illegible] deeds [illegible] finally handled. I know every broker feels surer of his commission if he knows the title has been previously insured; otherwise we are fearful our deal will fall by reason of [illegible] In the latter case we face the proposition of losing our commissions on [illegible] client, neither of which is to our taste. I repeat it is my firm conviction that real estate brokers should stand together in recommending title insurance for what it promises in the betterment of future conditions."

And Still We Doubt

By Herbert Kaufman

(Copyrighted, 1910, by Herbert Kaufman.)

Many a fool of today is a wise man of tomorrow. More than once we have been forced to take stock in those of whom we made laughing stocks. Only too often do we stone the man before we rear a stone to his memory.

We hold to old ways until we are compelled to give way. We usually beat back the thinkers who urge us to desert the beaten track. We habitually reprove the pioneers who wish to improve us. While in doubt, we deride until we decide. We jeer innovation and then cheer in ovation.

We have seen the wattle hut transmuted into an acre of concrete and steel—the squeaking ox cart metamorphose into the speeding motor car—the crude dug-out develop into the four-day turbine liner—the faint and flickering tallow dip brighten into the dazzling Tungsten.

We have watched Science emerge from its despised chrysalis of wizardry into full-winged glory—medicine grow from chicanery into precision—the surgeon's knife wrested from the fumbling fingers of the leech and placed in the sure hand of the trained adept.

We ask a question in Canton, Ohio, and receive an answer overnight from Canton, China.

The anxious "fan," a thousand miles from shore, knows before bedtime if his home team won the game.

We navigate our ships above and below and on the waves—and still we are eager to find things impossible—still anxious to decry what we cannot personally descry.

The benefactors of humanity have paid a heavy penalty to Ignorance for the privilege of helping the world along.

We have cluttered the avenues of progress with incredulity—we have heaped discouragement upon the head of every adventurer who went prospecting into the Hills of Chance.

Had advancement been regulated by the judgment of the majority, we would now be luxuriating in the comforts and conveniences of the pre-Arthurian period—the Twentieth Century would be a thousand years overdue—we would continue to celebrate new thought with human bonfires, and the prevailing religion would probably be the worship of the golden ass.

Men, not man, have given mankind its uplift. The epochal exploits have been the achievements of individuals—of giant natures—of irresistible wills—struggling successfully against the terrific odds offered by obstinate myopia.

Evolution is the imperceptible change of the mass—but revolution is inspired by the lone mind.

Greatness must primarily be fortified with forbearance and patience. No coward ever convinced society that he knew or did a better thing.

Brain is not sufficient to incubate the reality out of the vision.

Only the venerable Keeper of the Universal Record knows how many precious ideas have been wrecked upon the Reef of Ridicule and forever lost to civilization.

Any man who wins out against the handicaps with which we burden the dreamer, is entitled to everything that he gains.

Whatever benefit he derives from his doggedness and persistence, is merited. It is not in our nature to err on the side of generosity.

HISTORY PROVES THAT WHEN WE HAVE BESTOWED OUR UTMOST WE HAVE ONLY MADE A PARTIAL PAYMENT TO GENIUS.

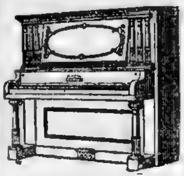
Parent, Are You Doing Your Full Duty Towards Your Child?



This Nice Piano $74

IF YOU DON'T OWN A PIANO IT IS YOUR OWN FAULT

Does your son or daughter ever remark to you how well your neighbor Smith's child plays the piano. Hasn't your wife often told you, could not understand how, with a salary double Smith's she cannot have a piano in her home, and you have always been at a loss to explain how Smith can accomplish so much? I am going to put you wise. Smith has taken advantage of my low prices and my ability to fight the big combination, the Piano Trust, to bring the cost of pianos within his reach. I want you, Dear Reader, to become economical like Smith. I ask you in all fairness to your family to come in this week and see with your own eyes to what levels I have dug piano prices. I have been fighting this big unfair Piano Trust singly for 7 years on an up-hill fight. I want your support to continue the fight. Come in this week. I'll give you the trade of your life. Your own terms.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK

I don't want your money now—just your order. During the past month the bankrupt stocks of several small dealers forced to the wall by the Piano Trust, have found their way to my store and will be sacrificed at your own price.

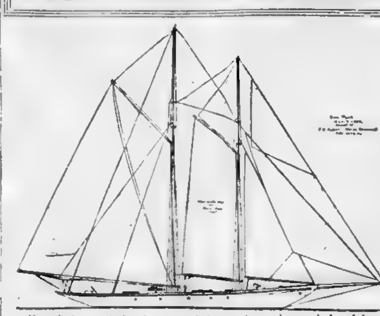
YACHTS AND POWER BOATS



New forty-nine-foot schooner, fisherman type, designed by John G. Alden for member of New York Yacht Club.

THE Quincy Yacht Club's celebration Thursday evening at their pretty new clubhouse at Houghs Neck was a fitting close to a most successful season. The Club took this means of honoring the cup winners of the season that are enrolled in the Quincy Club and judging from that table of silver trophies that was shown in the upper hall, the Quincy Club has quite a few good ones anchored in Quincy Bay.

The affair brought out a large number of visitors from clubs at South Boston, Dorchester, Savin Hill, Squantum, Wollaston and vicinity. The officers of the Interclub Association were present and it was a lively evening with plenty of entertainment and speeches. Among the cups shown were the President Taft and Quincy cups won by the Harpoon; the Day cup and several other trophies won by the Cape catboats Iris and Doly III that went down into Narragansett Bay cup hunting.

The South Boston Yacht Club will start this month on a season of bowling as well as a billiard and pool tournament and the clubhouse will be rendezvous for many of the club members during the cold Winter evenings where near the big fireplace they can talk over some of the summer races and cruises and entertain visitors. The Winthrop Yacht Club will also have a bowling team in the league with the South Boston Club.

The big twenty-five footer Flirt that has had a pretty successful racing season is still in commission ... who now take ... for a few ... before being hauled out.

Marblehead Harbor is getting to look rather lonesome, many of the steamers and power craft as well as sailing yachts having gone out of commission. The Corinthian Yacht clubhouse went out of commission for the season last Saturday evening, and it was a merry party that helped pull down the club ensign at sunset.

The club is now favored ... twenty-one footer Massachusetts, successful defender of the Sewanhaka cup, ... standing right here, and E. A. Boardman, who designed the boat and sailed it in the races with the St. Lawrence will design a ... for New Orleans yachtsmen. A good offer was made ... for the Massachusetts, but it was not accepted.

Commodore Robert E. Tod of the Atlantic Yacht Club of New York will next season walk the quarterdeck of the biggest schooner yacht afloat. Up to the present time the Visitor II, a Massachusetts boat is the largest.

Commodore Tod's new schooner will be named the Karina. She will be 198 feet 6¼ inches on deck, 150 feet on the load water line, 33 feet 8½ inches beam (extreme), 33 feet 7¼ inches beam (molded), 23 feet 9 inches depth of hold and 17 feet draught.

These dimensions when compared with other large schooners of the New York Yacht Club fleet show what the Karina will be. For instance, the auxiliary schooner yacht Atlantic is 184 feet over all, 139 feet on the water line and 29 feet beam; the auxiliary schooner Alcyone, 182 feet over all, 110 feet on the water line and 30 feet beam, and the auxiliary schooner Visitor II, 197 feet 6 inches over all, 150 feet on the water line and 33 feet 6 inches beam.

All the materials of construction of the Karina will be of the best and every precaution taken that the workmanship shall be of superior character throughout. There will be a half deck house, in which will be a companionway leading below, and where breakfasts and teas may be served if desired.

The yacht will have one hundred and fifty tons of lead ballast. Her lower masts will be of steel and the topmasts of wood. She will have a spoon bow and a stern of artistic and symmetrical design. There will be a small bridge around the foremast, which is something novel, but which is expected to prove of utility and be a pleasant lookout station, particularly in fine and moderate weather. The yacht's freeboard will be liberal.

The size of the yacht gives ample room for liberal accommodations. There will be two staterooms aft for the owner, with bath, and four staterooms, with two baths, for guests, further forward. The main saloon will be of the full width of the ship and of such length as to be made an interesting and most comfortable apartment ... room that may be, the ... officers' and crews' quarters ... thoroughly ventilated and ... Electricity will be used ... ship and ... many ... which it is ... seagoing yacht. All joiner work will be of the best, and the fittings and furnishings, while governed in the main by simplicity, will be tasteful.

The contract calls for the completion of the Karina by May 1 next. Commodore Tod expects to have the yacht in commission by Memorial Day and be ready for ... a time or a few days later.

Trade Notes.

John G. Alden, the Boston yacht designer, has just completed designs for a forty-nine-foot waterline schooner for a prominent member of the New York Yacht Club. The schooner is of the knockabout type, modeled after the latest Gloucester fishermen and will make one of the best offshore cruising boats. The keel of this boat will probably be laid in a Maine yard early in the year as the owner desires to make a cruise in the new schooner by June. The boat will have novel features in its cabin arrangements and is a roomy, comfortable boat, able to care for itself in any sort of weather.

The Hollis Burgess Yacht Agency has sold the sonder boat Corinthian to Thomas R. Mould of Kingston, Jamaica, a member of the Royal Jamaica Yacht Club. The Corinthian was owned by C. P. Curtis, who also owns the sonder Ellen. The sale of this sonder to a Jamaica yachtsman is believed to mean the beginning of sonder ... racing around the West Indies, the ... Jamaica Yacht Club fast getting interested in small boat racing.

C. B. Russell of New York has ordered a thirty-foot auxiliary sloop of the fisherman type from designs of John G. Alden. The boat will be thirty-eight feet on the water line, forty-nine feet overall, thirteen feet beam and seven feet draft. The boat will be built by a Maine company familiar with the building of Gloucester fishermen. The boat will have a twelve horsepower auxiliary.

F. M. Hoyt, owner of the fast sonder boat Sneezy, ... have a new boat next season from designs of E. A. Boardman, who designed the unbeaten sonder Harpoon and the Massachusetts.

Work on the big schooner of William F. Iselin of the New York Yacht Club is being rushed at Lawley's yard and the schooner will be used principally in cruising.

The steam yacht Indolent, 110 feet, has been sold, for the owner, John C. Rhodes, of New Bedford to Wallace Campbell of Boston; the sale being made through the agency of Swasey, Raymond and Page.

The sonder boat Jvette, recently purchased by John C. Edwards of this city will be sent around the Cape this week and will winter at Buzzards Bay where the boat will race next season.

R. W. Emmons, the Boston banker who owns the sonder Bibelot with Harry Payne Whitney, picked as one of the American team to race in Germany next June, has had a number of changes made in the rig of the boat and in a recent tryout the boat worked well. The Toboggan, also owned by Mr. Emmons and Mr. Whitney will be kept in trim as a substitute boat.

From present indications, more power craft of the cruising ... will be seen around these waters next season than for some years as several of the builders have plans and contracts under way.

HUNTING SEASON OPENS.

Granite State Gunners Are After Coons, Birds and Deer.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 1.—Five minutes after the town clocks of New Hampshire sounded the hour of 12 last night, the yelp of coon dogs could be heard in many a woodland and pasture. As usual, this has been the great day of the year, the opening day of the season, for the small game hunters. The open season on deer also began to-day in Coos County, the northern most county of the State, and will continue two months. In Grafton and Carroll counties the open season begins on November 1 and runs six weeks, while in the seven southern most counties of the State, deer killing is allowed during the first fifteen days of December only.

INVENTS TIDE MOTOR.

Dorchester Man Would Use 85 Per Cent. of Tide Power.

A machine which he claims will utilize 85 per cent. of the power latent in the ebb and flow of the tides is the invention of P. J. Griffin, of No. 74 Calender street, Dorchester. The machine consists of a specially constructed water wheel, which is wholly submerged, and is so constructed that it offers no resistance to the tide except for the blade, which is made to revolve by the current flowing past. The wheel may be used in a station or in a floating power house. The ... geared to a dynamo, producing ... power.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS EXCEL ENGLAND'S

President MacLaurin Says Average Harvard Man Beats Average Cambridge Graduate.

After an extended study of educational matters in England, Dr. Richard C. MacLaurin, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, says that the average Harvard graduate is better than the average of Cambridge (Eng.) University, but that the best Cambridge graduate is better than the best Harvard graduate.

Dr. MacLaurin also finds that there is no such general interest in education in England as there is in America; also that our public schools excel the British ones.

Returning on the Cymric for the Fall term at Tech, Dr. MacLaurin summed up his Summer observation thus:

"England is pushing us hard on technical education and there has been a great change in the last thirty years. There was a time when America was considerably ahead in this type of education, but in the Imperial Institute of London and in the newer universities at Manchester, Bristol, Leeds and Liverpool and at King's College, London, there is a marked increase in such studies and achievements in education as we are carrying on here in this School of Technology.

America in Lead.

"We are ahead of them in so-called technical education, but they are making satisfactory progress. The public knows what such an institution as the School of Technology means, and we have developed an influence, but in England they have not yet reached this stage.

"I think that the average Englishman does not esteem education as we do. He is very indifferent to it in comparison with the average American.

"The average Harvard graduate is better than the average Cambridge or Oxford graduate. But, on the other hand, the best Cambridge graduate is in advance of the best Harvard graduate. We treat education more generally than they do.

"The board schools in England compare with the public schools of America, but our public schools are far in advance of them. The public schools are sometimes confused with such schools as Eton, Harrow, Rugby, etc., but this is a mistake, and I think that when an English bishop lately criticised our public schools he was comparing them with these schools. When our public schools are compared with board schools, we will see at a glance the difference, which will be in our favor. Schools of the type of Eton can be compared with Groton school, St. Paul's school, Concord, etc.

Tech Has No Rival.

"We are making more out of education for the average person than they are in England. Nothing in England did I see that could rival our School of Technology.

"About vocational education in England they have this and have always had it when the young man left college either to enter the ministry or law or medicine, but the more practical side of this type of education has not yet gone as far with them as with us.

"The efforts towards practical education which John Hays Hammond has made in the city of Gloucester is worthy of notice and is a move in the right direction. To take these high school boys out from the senior class and teach them motoring two afternoons in the week is what could be repeated in other places with advantage to all concerned."

130,000 COTTON WORKERS SHUT OUT

MANCHESTER, Eng., Oct. 1.—The Federation of Master Cotton Spinners to-day declared a lockout of 130,000 operatives, and closed the doors of the 700 mills owned by its members. Two hundred thousand other workmen are likely to be affected very soon.

A man named George Howe, employed at the Fern Mill, a small establishment at Oldham, was ordered to do some work—to pick refuse—and refused to do it, asserting that it was "change of work." He was thereupon discharged. The other employes of the mill then went out on strike declaring that the owners of the mill, before discharging Howe, should have referred his conduct to investigation by a joint committee. After the employes had struck, the owners of the mill offered to arbitrate the dispute.

From this insignificant beginning a dispute which may, and probably will, result eventually in hundreds of thousands of persons being thrown out of work, and untold misery to other hundreds of thousands has developed. The employers decided that unless the strike at the Fern Mill was settled by arbitration they would close their mills to-day, as they have done.

VANNUTELLI COMNIG HERE.

Cathedral Guild Arrangin for Prelate's Reception.

Cardinal Vannutelli, who came from Rome to the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal as Papal Legate, has expressed his wish to visit Boston and it is expected that he will arrive here next Saturday. The Cathedral Guild has arranged a dinner and reception for Saturday evening at Hotel Somerset. The honor of receiving the cardinal has been given to the Cathedral Guild by Archbishop O'Connell. The arrangements are in the hands of Monsignor Splaine and a committee consisting of Henry V. Cunningham, chairman, John A. Bruen, secretary and D. L. Prendergast, treasurer.

HARVARD MAN WEDS.

MAGNOLIA, Oct. 1.—Miss Emma Bull McFadden, of Quincy, Ill., and Thomas Burnett Dorman, Harvard '06, of Upper Montclair, N. J., were married in the Congregational Church here at noon to-day. The Rev. F. H. Dana, of Exeter, N. H., officiated. Miss Dorothea Dutcher of Quincy, Ill., was the maid of honor, and Miss Mildred Foss of Boston, Miss Marguerite Lowe of St. Louis, Mrs. Helen Hopkins of West Newton, and Miss Mary Willis of Baltimore were the bridesmaids. The ushers were Orville Rogers, Edward Check, Edward Savage and Samuel Titcomb.

CHILD LABOR CRUSADE.

Heads of Two Lynn Firms Must Appear in Court.

LYNN, Oct. 1.—On charges of illegally employing children in their factories, Bolander & Beckman, and C. P. Stanbon & Co. will be arraigned in court here next week.

The charges are made by State Factory Inspector Angus H. McDonald, and are the latest step in the crusade against child labor here. Inspector McDonald declared yesterday that 75 per cent. of the Lynn firms illegally employ children. The law provides that no child under sixteen shall leave school to go to work without the written consent of the parents and of the school committee.

DOG AND POULTRY EVENTS AROUND HUB

Boston Terrier Show, Homing Pigeon Race and Other Items for the Fanciers.

The Boston Terrier Club will hold its specialty show at Horticultural Hall, November 17, 18, 19.

At Dreamwold Kennels, Egypt, is a French bulldog, a youngster of which much is expected. He is white with even dark brindle markings and is by Walter Burgess' Bouton.

Feed for Feathers.

Hens during the molting season should be fed liberally with wheat or wheat bran, with all the skim milk they will take. These feeds contain the elements for growing new feathers. A small proportion of linseed meal in mashes is good for molting hens. Sunflower seed is also good and green feed should be provided where the fowls are confined.

The Boston Terrier Club is fast becoming one of the leading organizations of its kind in the country, and is boosting the show game everywhere by the offering of good prizes for the terrier classes.

The production of Winter eggs depends upon the strain, breed and feed. Fowls must be properly bred to lay eggs in the Winter—not that if so bred they will require no attention, but they must be properly housed. But the essential thing in getting eggs in the Winter is that hens must be bred from those hens that have been great Winter layers.

Connecticut Field Trials.

The twelfth annual trials of the Connecticut Field Trial Club will be held on the club preserve at Hampton, Ct., commencing Tuesday morning, October 25. The annual meeting of the club will be held on Monday evening, October 24, at 8 o'clock at the Prospect House. The drawing for starting order will take place at that meeting.

The reports from the preserve are most encouraging and indicate that birds are much more plenty than for several seasons past. This condition, coupled with the interest and enthusiasm shown by all who attended the trials last year, augurs well for a most successful and satisfactory meet this year.

Last Fall the "Membership Cup" was won outright by Russell Perkins with Lemon's Rodfield. Mr. Perkins has now generously offered the club a new cup to be competed for annually under the same conditions as governed the running for the old "Membership Cup," and has provided an intrinsically valuable and historically interesting cup of genuine antique Sheffield ware. Competition for this beautiful trophy promises to be keen and the Membership Stake will be one of the features of the trials. S. C. Bradley has again consented to act as judge. His wide experience and unquestioned honesty inspire confidence which helps greatly towards the complete success of the trials.

During the meet a bench show will be held to which every competing dog will be eligible. D. A. Goodwin will judge the dogs, and as the very cream of setter and pointer breeding is represented in the entry lists this feature will be most interesting and instructive. The annual complimentary dinner to the landowners and leading citizens of Hampton will be given on Wednesday evening, October 26. This dinner is one of the enjoyable features of the trials and it is hoped that more members than heretofore will arrange to remain for it. Everything points to a big and "classy" entry list and a banner event this Fall. Year by year the trials have improved in quality until now they rank with the best in the country. A better crowd of congenial sportsmen cannot be found East or West, North or South, than those who gather once a year at old "Hampton" for an enjoyable time, which is to be missed is to be regretted.

Homing Pigeon Race.

A homing pigeon race between birds from Fall River, Wellesley, Newton, Needham, Lynn, West Lynn and Malden will take place at Brockton during the fair.

This race will be a distinct novelty around these parts and over 1,000 birds will participate. The birds will be liberated from the oval in front of the grandstand on Wednesday and Thursday, October 5 and 6, if the weather permits, and the winners in each division will be returned and placed in the pigeon exhibition halls. Time clocks and records of the flights will be shown and explained by experts.

When chickens and turkeys are very wet with a sudden shower they may be revived by placing them in a basket with dry warm cloths by the kitchen range or other place furnished with artificial heat. Under this treatment the youngsters will frequently revive and live when apparently almost dead.

Waldo Kennard and Frank P. Sibley, both of South Hingham, are showing benches of promising young Scotch collies.

HERE'S A MILK ROMANCE.

At Least, a Milk Order Revealed One Over in Belmont.

"Say, Ed, I want you to leave a quart of milk regularly for me at No. 17 Ash street, beginning Monday," remarked J. Francis Grant to Edward Quigley, the milkman of Belmont, yesterday.

"All right," replied the milkman, taking down the address thoughtlessly.

Then as he drove merrily away, the milkman began to wonder what Grant wanted milk delivered to him for. He made some inquiries and gradually Grant's friends got him cornered, and he confessed a pretty little romance.

The facts were that Grant and Miss Rhea Jenkins, a charming nurse at the Massachusetts School for the Feeble-minded at Waverly, slipped off to Portsmouth on June 25 and were married. They hadn't told anybody but Arthur Sheverig, and now he is regarded as a hero because he kept the secret.

The bride, who is just twenty-one, is a graduate of Yarmouth College, '06, of Yarmouth, N. S. After graduating she came to Belmont and took up nursing. She put in her last hours at the Waverly school last night. To-morrow morning she'll get the milk that Quigley leaves at No. 17 Ash street.

CHINESE AT FORE RIVER.

Vice-Admiral Ping and Party Leave for New York.

Vice Admiral Sah Chen Ping and four other Chinese notables, members of the commission, headed by Prince Tsai Hsun touring this country, yesterday visited the Fore River shipyards at Quincy. They made the trip from the Touraine in an automobile, accompanied by Admiral Bowles, head of the Fore River company. At a luncheon in the administration building, Admiral Ping paid a tribute to Boston as a beautiful city.

Last night the party left for New York where they will rejoin the other members of the commission. Prince Hsun, uncle of the present Emperor of China, was too tired after his sightseeing in New York to make the trip to Boston.

To-day the visitors are guests of Charles M. Schwab in New York. Later in the day they leave for San Francisco to sail for home.

BULL CLIQUE HOLDS PRICE OF COTTON UP

Curtailment by American Spinners May Be Less Drastic Than First Promised.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Speculation in cotton contracts was very active last week. Not only have the old bull clique been prominent in supporting the market, but a large contingent of local operators have followed the leadership of these interests through commission house channels. The South has been a liberal buyer of contracts, particularly from sections where the crop has been reported to be losing in condition. It does not appear that the advance has been opposed by the larger spot interests in New York, and it is quite possible that these interests are large holders of contracts for delivery in December and January. The local stock is believed to be still held by members of last year's bull clique, but the quantity is small and furnishes little protection for the short interest.

The principal incentive to support has been the growing belief that in the final outcome the crop would fall short of 12,000,000 bales. Early in the month, following the Government August condition report, many estimates exceeded 12,000,000 bales, but during September abnormally high temperatures ruled over nearly the entire cotton belt. Moisture was deficient, and these conditions were attended by shedding of half matured bolls and premature opening on a large scale. But weevil damage in Louisiana and Mississippi and boll worm depredations in Arkansas and Oklahoma were generally reported.

DISTINCTLY BETTER TONE TO MARKET

Strength of Amalgamated Has Imparted Firmer Tone to All the Local Coppers.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Oct. 1.—A distinctly better tone is noticeable in the stock market, which has extended even to copper shares. It is apparently a creeping market, and professional operators enter into the daily fluctuations more or less. That the public is interested is evinced by the fact that one sees faces in brokers' offices that have been strangers there for many months. The merchant and professional man has been giving the market a wide berth. His own affairs have needed close attention. Now that things have quieted down a bit in the business world and the vacation season is ended, he finds time to run in and look the quotation board over and get the latest price from the tape. The bond market has been showing the effects of returning confidence, the banks are inclined to be a little more lenient to the borrower, and this optimistic sentiment is being reflected in the share market little by little.

Politics has had full sway, but is less a factor now, and although the election is five weeks away, the stock market can be depended upon to discount coming events. Activity in the stock market is now on the up side, which clearly indicates that the big stock market interests are arrayed on that side. There is no aggressive buying, but these same interests are apparently in sympathy with present conditions. They will not allow any undue rise, should such likely happen, and would quickly step into the arena to avoid any serious danger. The copper market does not hold forth any great attraction, although it might be worse.

The metal has shown a decided hardening tendency in London during the week, but it is not reflected in the domestic market as yet. Consumers are bare of the metal and have the best of the situation. In bygone days the consumer carried the load. That is, his money was tied up with the copper he had on hand. Now he knows the conditions, thanks to the report issued by the Copper Producers' Association each month, and is certain that he will not have to pay much beyond the quoted market price. The smelter people have to furnish the money to carry the big surplus copper now on hand. Present indications, however, are that the surplus copper was reduced materially last month. In fact, copper stocks are discounting this fact.

The present strength of Amalgamated has tended to impart a firmer tone to all the coppers. The so-called Clark-Coolidge and the Dow stocks will likely be the leaders in the local market. No great or sustained movement can be looked for, but a healthy condition of affairs can be nursed along and everybody made happy. A strong and active market brings sunshine and smiles. The best that can be said of coppers is that there are few selling orders in the brokers' hands, while they are carrying on their books a great many buying orders at prices just under the market. The sharp advance in North Butte and Superior Copper late in the week clearly indicates what can be expected if any concerted buying should start in copper stocks.

Although of small volume, the market this forenoon closed up strong in which copper shares held their end. Strength in the latter was noticeable in the Lake issues, such as Superior, Isle Royale and Hancock. Amalgamated was buoyant, and advices from New York said that the buying was of the best.

Again the New York bank exhibit was poor, but an end to this ought to come soon, as the government pays out large sums of money this month and, again, currency is about due to come back to the centre after the crop moving period. The reserve was reduced $8,545,125, leaving but $10,279,400 to the credit of that item. In addition to an increase of $3,736,400 in loans, deposits fell off $7,419,900. There was also a net decrease of $10,400,100 in legals and specie.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND BEEN SUCCESSFUL AS MINING EXPERT

JOHN HAYES HAMMOND.

GOOD JUDGMENT AND FAR-SIGHTEDNESS

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND has [illegible] judgment and far-sightedness. Some [illegible] But as it may, he has been wonderfully successful in his chosen [illegible] mining expert.

Mr. Hammond [illegible] only [illegible] [illegible] to give him a job. Two years later he was appointed expert of the [illegible] [illegible] several years following [illegible] the Pacific [illegible] a painted [illegible] biggest men in the business. It was not there he met [illegible] Mills and [illegible] of Hammond [illegible] the famous Bunker Hill & Sullivan [illegible] which has already paid something like $11,000,000 in dividends, and probably will continue to pay, as an old mining man put it, until hell becomes a skating pond.

Then Barney Barnato wanted young Hammond. Barnato and Cecil Rhodes and the [illegible] of the famous American, and they needed him in their business. It was due to Hammond alone that Rhodes sold out his holdings in the Consolidated Gold Fields Company of South Africa and turned the proceeds into barren ground, which turned out to develop into the most famous gold mines of the world—Rhodesia. It was [illegible] there that Mr. Hammond got [illegible] Boer War [illegible] time [illegible]. However, he was a popular hero, and his name known the world over.

[illegible] that time so [illegible] success. His judgment was unquestioned, and money too, and began to operate on his own account. Then came his connection with the Guggenheims. That was in 1907. It began with a contract calling for a salary of $1,000,000 a year plus contingent interests of very great value. When he [illegible] Guggenheim Exploration Co. [illegible] to $2,000,000 [illegible] above $500 [illegible] holdings of [illegible] in Alaska, in Mexico, in Nevada, in Bingham, were acquired at Mr. Hammond's direction. No one knows exactly what he is worth, but he is generally credited with being well into the multi-millionaire class—something like $20,000,000, in fact. It is estimated that he spends about $1,000,000 a year, for he is a great entertainer. He has a Summer home at Lakewood and one near Gloucester on the North Shore.

MARKET DESERTED FOR THE AUTO RACES

Trading Light and Market Only Sustains Prices at the Levels of Friday's Trading.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Owing to the absence of leading operators from Wall street to-day on account of the automobile races, trading was light and the market did was to sustain itself at about the levels of the previous day. Some show of strength was made in the copper shares and the market for the metal was firmer. Reading and Steel were the leaders. Profit taking shaded the price of Western Union, which had advanced fourteen points in about [illegible].

The bank statement showed a loss of more than $8,000,000 in surplus reserves and of above $10,000,000 in cash, while loans increased but slightly. Slightly higher money is expected for this week, owing partly to the advance of the bank rate abroad and to the payment of October dividends.

Early in the week [illegible] directed to Reading, which had a sharp advance on a revival of rumors that the company was about to make a distribution of assets. The principals in the [illegible] even went so far as to fix a date for the meeting at which the directors were to cut the "melon," but after they had fleeced the public and unloaded some stock, the quotations rapidly receded. The recession was accelerated by an official announcement from Philadelphia that no such meeting would be held. This trick has been played so many times that the public is becoming tired of it. Bankers say it is unlikely that the Reading Company will distribute its assets until the United States Court decides whether it has a legal right to the properties it owns.

Actual increase of the Bank of England's discount rate [illegible] had no effect on the stock market because it had already been discounted. The advance is due to the discounting of [illegible] Paris, Berlin and Hamburg, amounting to [illegible] exchange experts estimate that the total will reach $[illegible] November 1.

The selection of Henry L. Stimson as the Republican nominee for Governor of New York caused Wall Street to yield somewhat in its [illegible] a Democratic victory, and many at the end of the week were not sure they wanted the Democrats to win.

About the only dissatisfying development of the week was the continuation of reports of bad earnings by the leading railroad [illegible] market received a slight setback on this account early in the week [illegible] Union Pacific and Southern Pacific statements for August were published. Union Pacific showed an increase in gross of more than $400,000 [illegible] into net loss of $428,058, while Southern Pacific's gain of $13,91[illegible] changed to a decrease in net of $168,[illegible] because of larger operating expenses and taxes. Rock Island was not an exception to the general rule, and its report for the same month showed a shrinkage in net of nearly $400,000. Atchison's net decreased $232,143.

In connection with this shrinkage, it should be noted that while it is partly due to the increase in wages, it is the result also of a new style of bookkeeping inaugurated by the large systems. Years ago the Hill roads adopted a plan of cutting [illegible] expenses [illegible] but making very [illegible] allowances for extraordinary improvements. In this way they kept the public dazzled with a large surplus, the companies pointed with pride to [illegible] low operating ratio, while at the same time the money went back into the property through the appropriations to extraordinary expenses. This also facilitated the sale of securities in the open market. The system has been abandoned, and now the large roads are allowing very little for extraordinary improvements, but charging them to operating expenses.

[illegible] were brought forward through the week and made to perform to the tune of all kinds of rumors. Prominent in this group was Western Union, which advanced sharply on aggressive buying said to be due to the wideawake management which has taken hold of the property and is increasing its revenues. Interborough-Metropolitan sold off on profit-taking, but later recovered. American Beet Sugar advanced on stories that a dividend would be declared in the not distant future, buyers of the stock failing to remember that the company has practically no working capital and is about $1,000,000 in debt. Late in the week Western Maryland had a good rise on good purchases, although officials of the company said there were no new developments that would account for the sudden strength of the issue.

SHOULD BOSTON CHARTER BE CHANGED? LEADERS EXPRESS THEIR OPINIONS

Members of Civil Service Board Sohuld Live in Boston, Says the Mayor.

[illegible] by four prominent [illegible] charter as it stands, [illegible] amending it, Mayor [illegible] Fitzgerald and Former Mayor Hart want the charter [illegible] Former Representative Robert [illegible] Bernard J. Rothwell, president Boston Chamber of Commerce [illegible] and he would not be compelled to submit to [illegible] who know little about local conditions [illegible] ballots to recall a Mayor. It is impossible [illegible] to get such a large per [illegible] to vote for recall unless a [illegible] hopelessly and notoriously [illegible] council is too small [illegible] larger number [illegible] to properly [illegible]

The Mayor of Boston should have [illegible] Boston's money [illegible] to say how its own money [illegible]

By THOMAS N. HART,
Former Mayor of Boston.

No self-respecting man can afford to-day to take the office of Mayor of the city of [illegible]

I do not wish to enter upon a discussion of the good points or the poor points in the charter of the city of [illegible]

[illegible] so let them fight it out among themselves [illegible] Republicans [illegible] on Boston [illegible] Mayor [illegible] the duties of his office under the present laws.

The Mayor should have men under him [illegible] Suppose you were to be appointed as head [illegible] you would [illegible] out [illegible]

But suppose, then, that some director [illegible] stepped in just when you were beginning to make [illegible]

"A Fine Mess" Declares ex-Mayor Hart; "Give It a Fair Trial," Urges Rothwell.

[illegible] as co-partners. They don't want him to appoint [illegible] do they?

Well, so much has been said about the charter that I feel it is almost useless to try and say anything new [illegible] say now, "Let them fight it out [illegible]"

By ROBERT LUCE,
Former Representative.

[illegible] server is its device for securing appointments to important office on the basis of fitness. Herein it appears to have achieved remarkable success. Any attempt to change it in this respect should be resisted to the utmost.

Whoever conceived the idea deserves the thanks of every lover of good government [illegible] well administered as those of Europe. Large numbers of our people have [illegible]

[illegible] first the chances for damage are strong. We see it in business corporations where relationship or friendship is allowed to determine the choice between applicants for work. Of course, the fact that an applicant is a relation or a friend should not of itself disqualify, but the prime requisite must be capacity, or else the business will suffer.

In the public service the fact that an applicant has taken an active interest in public affairs and will be in sympathy with his superiors is a qualification not to be ignored. On the contrary, it is to be given much weight, but it must not overcome the qualification of fitness, or the public [illegible] will likewise suffer.

[illegible] of the 22 new appointments [illegible]

[illegible] in the men who are to guard the property and the lives and who are to furnish the municipal necessities and comfort of all those who toil or trade [illegible] of the genuine Boston.

By BERNARD J. ROTHWELL,

Let us give the charter a fair trial. I do not consider it a sacred document like the Constitution of the United States, not to be revised or changed without the most elaborate ceremony, but I do think it would be very foolish to alter it before we have had a chance to see it in full operation.

As you know, a society has been formed to protect the charter from needless tinkering, and I am a member of this association. I do not think that revision should be considered at all at this time.

As far as I am able to discover the charter is working well. I do not think it is causing any suffering. The Civil Service Commission may have caused some individual disappointment, but the city has not suffered from its supervision of appointments.

The new charter has not yet been tried a full year. It was the best that could be devised at the time, and it cannot easily be improved. I do not claim it is perfect, or that time may not reveal defects that cannot be [illegible], but let us give it a fair [illegible]

GENERAL NEWS NOTES OF GREATER BOSTON TRADE UNIONS.

Employes of the City Likely to Be Called Out on a Strike.

STRIKE orders that will call out practically every union trade employed by the city of Boston, because of the alleged refusal of Mayor Fitzgerald and the heads of numerous municipal departments [illegible] wage [illegible] follows a recommendation from the Building Trades Department of the Boston Central Labor Union that a strike be declared against the municipality, unless union wages be paid its mechanic employes.

It is declared that, in some of the departments in question, the city pays from thirty cents to $1 a day less wages than do private employers of labor in other departments where contract work is done, [illegible] est highest wage on all municipal work." If the present union referendum carries, a number of local labor leaders fore[illegible] all union men [illegible] building tradesmen.

[illegible] business agent for Elevator [illegible] No. 103, is the new president of the board of governors of the Building Trades Department of the Central Labor [illegible] C. McDonald, business agent of Elevator Constructor's Union No. 4, as secretary of the Board.

Photo Engravers' Union No. 3 of this city, which has had a strike running in six commercial shops since July 25, is considering the advisability of holding a ball in the near future in aid of the strikers. The refusal of the Superior Court, last Tuesday, to issue the temporary injunction asked for by the employers, the men say, is considered a victory for the union.

James H. Sheehe of this city has been elected as an international organizer for the Plumber's Union by the delegates in attendance at the St. Paul convention of that organization. Boston was selected as the next place for the plumbers to hold their international convention in September, 1912.

Typographical Union No. [illegible] members [illegible] constitutional amendment to offer [illegible] requested to submit them [illegible] special meeting of the union's constitution [illegible] to be held at Room [illegible] building tomorrow night. [illegible] Daniels of Mansfield [illegible] treasurer of the Brotherhood of Railway Steamen of America [illegible] special notices warning [illegible] the country [illegible] the [illegible] has a strike on the New York Central Railroad for shorter [illegible] and recognition of the union. All [illegible] are [illegible] requested to keep [illegible] the [illegible] question until the [illegible] is settled.

Mrs. Elizabeth Glendower Evans, a wealthy Back Bay woman connected with the [illegible] Women's Trade Union League, has [illegible] in the [illegible] Middle West, where she delivered a number of lectures on the benefits of trade unionism for women wage workers. While in Madison, Wis., Mrs. Evans was the guest of United States Senator La Follette.

Painter's Union No. 11 of this city now allows $5 a week sick pay for ten weeks in any one year, as against the former five weeks period with a $5 a week benefit [illegible] for nine consecutive weeks. Under the new rule, any member [illegible] unable to work may declare on the sick list by notifying the secretary, instead of being compelled to wait until meeting night as was the case under the old method.

The National Federation of State, City and Town Employes' Union holds its annual convention at Worcester to-day, with a number of labor leaders from this city in attendance.

Old Colony Lodge, Railroad Clerks, No. 145, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., will hold its annual ball in Copley Hall, Huntington Avenue, Tuesday evening, October 11, and the advance sale of tickets is unusually large to date.

Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, business agent of the three local Textile Worker's unions, has been elected to represent all three locals at the United Textile Worker's of America convention, which opens in New York city Tuesday, October 18.

All preparations are made for the annual convention of the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor, which opens at Worcester one week from to-morrow, and which promises to be [illegible] interesting and largely attended [illegible]

Zip! Bang! Boom! Just Hear Cassidy Alarming Himself!

Manchester Deputy Chief of Police Nearly Blows Himself Up with His New Invention.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 1.—The residence of John F. Cassidy, deputy chief of police, is now [illegible] of and the deputy can prove [illegible]

Cassidy has been experimenting with [illegible] He struck [illegible] which explodes a blank cartridge when set for door or window. The deputy installed an alarm at every door and window.

[illegible] night he started out to work after burglar-proofing the house he said to Mrs. Cassidy:

"Now [illegible] when you go to bed set the burglar [illegible] at all doors and windows except the front door. When I return from duty I will set the front door alarm."

Mrs. Cassidy set the alarms. But she forgot about leaving the front door "unset." Result:

Cassidy came up the front steps at 2 a. m.

He unlocked the front door.

There was a blinding flash.

Also a deafening report.

Cassidy's fox hound flew at his master [illegible] in a corner of the piazza.

Mrs. Cassidy screamed from her chamber.

"It's me, John, your husband," howled Cassidy, "come down and tell the dog who I am."

Mrs. Cassidy came down, called off the dog [illegible] Cassidy went in. He set the front door [illegible] again and remarked [illegible] burglar [illegible] gets by that rigging is a bad one.

BOSTON MAN ELECTED.

Dr. Hubert Carlton, Secretary of St. Andrew's Brotherhood.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 1.—The final day of the business session of the twenty-fifth annual convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew in the United States was attended here to-day by a somewhat smaller number of delegates than the previous days. The National Council, the Advisory Board of the Brotherhood, re-elected Edward H. Bonsell of Philadelphia president and Dr. Hubert Carlton of Boston general secretary. All of the minor officers were re-elected.

GREAT RUSH TO USE NEW 'PHONE RATES

The rush to sign telephone contracts under the new rates is so great that the New England Telephone & Telephone Company has been forced to provide more accommodations for subscribers at the contracting office in Milk street. Two large rooms have been taken on the ground floor and they are thronged with patrons who want an improved service at a reduction in cost. Those who wish to change their contracts are using one of these rooms. New subscribers are occupying the other. At work in these rooms are a number of expert contract agents, and they are giving every assistance to those who seek information.

Persons who wish to be told more about telephone service, and to learn which one will better conform to his or her individual requirements, or to have the new rates explained in detail, can sit in these rooms and discuss the matter with a company representative. Subscribers who do not wish any explanation can sign contracts at the counter without delay.

A telephone order board has been installed in the Milk street office and there are twelve contract agents ready at any hour of the day to answer questions. [illegible] first new contract was taken over the telephone on September 19, and ever since these lines have been busy.

From all parts of the territory affected by the new schedule applications have been received by the hundred from subscribers who want the service under it as quickly as possible. Most of the new subscribers have studied the matter carefully and are convinced that the change will be of distinct benefit to them. The work of the contract agents is being supplemented by that of a number of young women who are engaged in keeping careful record of [illegible] in contracts.

A large cabinet contains approximately 100,000 cards giving the present equipment, kind of service now given and cost, of all subscribers in the Metropolitan and Suburban districts. These cards are filed in such a way as to be instantly available.

A special telephone line runs directly to the Tremont street office and contracts written there are immediately recorded in Milk street. It is said that nearly every application for a change in service has been voluntary on the part of subscribers and that there has practically been no solicitation.

The public is rapidly becoming familiar with the new rates, and compared with existing ones the changes in contracts represent a reduction in revenue to the company of more than 20 per cent.

IT'S EASY TO SEE YOUR OWN FAULTS IN ANOTHER

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

IN this world are some people whose business it is to find fault. It is not a pleasant task, but they must do it, and make the best of it.

The employer who has many men at work for him is required to have superintendents and foremen to see that the work is well done. If it isn't well done, it is their business to find fault—until it is well done.

Newspapers sometimes find it necessary to find fault with public servants, but only when the public servants are dishonest or wasteful or incompetent.

The men who really think, and who because they think become leaders, now and then find fault with those who do not think. It is needful that they should.

But the habitual faultfinder—the little narrow, nagging man or woman, who, utterly blind to his or her own faults, has a bright and watchful eye out for all faults in other people, is a nuisance to all the world.

The harm that is done by petty faultfinding is far greater than you might imagine. Many an enterprise which, left alone, would have prospered and proved of benefit to the world, has been abandoned because of petty faultfinding and persecution.

The habit of carping and criticising, tearing down with no effort to build up, is easily acquired and easily communicated.

A whole village will often catch it from one little faultfinder. Many families, beginning with one faultfinding member, will become imbued with his mean spirit, and the members will spend most of their days nagging and complaining and bickering—the quarrels in every case being over faults that they all share in common.

In a recently published account of Professor Samuel Langely, who made the first aeroplane which could really fly, and whose efforts were of vast assistance to aviation, it is related how the criticism and faultfinding directed at him by persons who could not understand what he was doing, proved a stumbling block in his path, and finally contributed to the state of despair which led to his death.

All inventors who have done really new things can tell a similar story.

Morse was ridiculed and criticised when he announced that he could hold instant communication with another man at a great distance. There were thousands of people to find fault with his plan, to poke fun at it—there were few to take an intelligent interest and really try to give him assistance.

Jeering crowds of faultfinders watched Fulton's steamboat make its first trip, and it was not until the vessel was plying on regular trips that the faultfinding was abandoned.

How the men who have made modern medicine a blessing to mankind have been hectored and annoyed by faultfinders is a matter of common knowledge. Because of their very great earnestness and faith in their work and of their marvellous devotion to it they have succeeded. But it has been done despite and not because of the attitude of the rest of the world.

Pride and folly and insincerity and dishonesty are easily discoverable in other people. It would take a pretty dull man not to find vanity in his wife. In fact, a woman's natural pride in her appearance, which she has inherited from Mother Eve, is often held up to ridicule as vanity and scorned and sneered at till she almost begins to believe that it is vanity.

But the gentleman who is so easily persuaded that his wife is vain and who is so ready to find fault with her on that account might be astonished to know that his fondness for military uniform or lodge regalia or pearl neckties or gray gaiters is exactly the same kind of vanity—all the more inexcusable in a man.

Where human beings are gathered together in numbers criticism forms an alarmingly large part of the general conversation.

"That fellow is always loafing," says the gentleman who sits back in his chair and puffs a cigarette. "He doesn't get any place because he is so lazy. He actually leaves his work unattended to so that he can smoke cigarettes."

"Look at the other chap there," says the desk mate with the elaborately brushed hair and the beautiful red necktie, "always thinking about his clothes. Never comes into the office without looking his hair and flicking the dust off his shoes. I think he'd begin to wake up after a while. Ever[illegible]

"Then there's [illegible] to the stenographer. He's [illegible] laugh, of [illegible]

"[illegible]ious chap," simpers a clerk [illegible] made love to every girl in the [illegible]ehead they all give him the [illegible]er seems to discover that he isn't a regular Beau Brummell." With which remark he preens his own feathers and looks soulfully into the eyes of the stenographer, blissfully ignorant of the fact that secretly she is laughing at him.

When we came into this world we brought with us many shortcomings and follies, inherited from a long line of ancestors.

It is not human to be perfect. Irritability, intolerance, conceit, foolishness, irresolution, love of pleasure—all are qualities shared in greater or less degree by most of the human family.

The industrious man, perhaps, has a right to be intolerant of the habitual idler, but no man is so industrious by nature that he cannot understand the idler's point of view.

The modest man may be irritated by the fop, but in the most modest man there is a little of the fop, enough to make him happier when he has on a bran new suit of clothes than when he is going about the streets in the threadbare garments that were saved over from last year.

The man who keeps his temper under control is inclined to criticise the violent tempered fellow who goes swearing and howling around at every little trouble; but in his heart he knows the temptation to let go of one's feelings; he understands that it takes hard, patient work to master a hot temper.

So there is room for charity and mutual understanding everywhere. Each man in his own person has most of the human foibles. Fortunate he is if his will has been strong enough to master them—if he has been able to get himself thoroughly in hand, keeping down his vanity, getting his temper where it can't get away from him, checking the natural human disposition toward laziness, taking his pleasures moderately and not allowing them to usurp too much of his time.

And because he has mastered himself is all the more reason for tolerance toward those unfortunates who have not.

It is so easy to find fault; it is so hard to praise.

But judicious praise is always helpful; it brings out the good in men often; it at least assures them that what they are trying to do is appreciated.

And general faultfinding never awakens any emotion but one of resentment—never is of the least benefit to the one toward whom it is directed.

It would be well if the faultfinder, before he were permitted to follow his destructive occupation, were to submit to an examination and receive a license for finding fault.

For example, let only the man who can prove his own thrift find fault with the man who spends more money than he ought. Let him who criticises another man's treatment of his children be required to show that his own children are brought up as they should be.

Let the man who complains that his wife is foolish be compelled to show that he has no foolish habits—that he does not smoke or drink or waste his time talking inanities to other men, that he never is jealous of other men in his own line of business, that he is always good-natured and even-tempered.

Let the man who is wholly unselfish, and he alone, complain of selfishness in other people. Let only the employer who is fair to his men complain that they are not fair to him when labor disputes arise.

Such requirements, which of course will never be exacted, would do much to lessen the evil of faultfinding and to make this world more habitable.

Wanting such an arrangement, we will do well to leave faultfinding to those whose business and duty it is.

In every factory there are men set to watch other men and to keep them at their best. In the world of politics there are plenty of men whose interests set them to keep the same kind of a watch on grafting officials. But real evils will never want real watchers. Self-protection makes it necessary that the thief and the murderer and the business pirate be watched and that their shortcomings be published when discovered.

But the little faults—the little conceits and vanities and foibles and peccadilloes—let them alone. Their possessors sooner or later must correct them or suffer the consequences. Until they do discover them why not be tolerant and busy ourselves correcting our own?

When you see a fault in another man, look at yourself and learn if you share it before you call his attention to it. In that way you will lessen your load of responsibility for your neighbor, and you may, on occasion, save yourself a great deal of needless embarrassment.

This Is an Editorial for the Faultfinder, the Nuisance Who Spends His Time Worrying Other People About Their Shortcomings, but Who Is Suddenly Stricken Blind When His Own Are Pointed Out to Him.

Just as Long as I Feel Like I Do

As sung in The One Act Musical Comedy
TIT FOR TAT

VIOLET M'MILLAN, SMALLEST WOMAN NOW ON THE STAGE

MISS VIOLET M'MILLAN

VIOLET M'MILLAN TINIEST SOUBRETTE

"Delightful to Be Small," She Says; "Everybody's So Awfully Good to Me."

WEARING a No. 12 B shoe and a ring that few other women could get over the first joints of their little fingers, Miss Violet McMillan, the "soubrette" of "Girlies" is generally conceded to be the tiniest normal woman on the stage. Except for the necessity of buying all of her footgear made to order Miss McMillan finds her lack of size a distinct advantage rather than a handicap. She has no desire to grow.

"Why it is delightful to be little" says Miss McMillan. "If it does have to exist I can conceive of no other petite personage to whom most other women are subjected.

"The times I have had to stand in crowded cars or even on the L can hardly remember now. No gentleman ever heartlessly to keep his seat while poor little I am trying to quiet a street car in six inches out of my reach. And when some portly person does not see me vainly looking surprised because I do not shout so I can look out of the window.

Chauffeurs Kind, Too.

"Even the chauffeurs and cabmen are especially nice to me. When I attempt to cross a street I don't have to worry, and I never wait for the traffic policeman to hold up his hand. Taxicabers could not be more kind to child. I am not big enough to look out for myself and so they look out for me. Even when I get into a crowd on the street I get in without much struggling. I want to say, now is not a drawback. Taller people always take the trouble to get out of my way. They are willing to be annoyed in order that I may get to see over their heads. So I am able to take advantage of the possibility I could frequently have had but for the fact that I am small. Tap me a fatherly boy in an omnibus or tap me on the head and tell me I don't know how did it, such a wee bit of a thing. Once I was a fellow passenger with a man who in talking to a friend made a remark to the effect that I had a terrible figure. I was after a fellow's own heart. I was not the age limit which would bar me from the stage.

Caught in Cable Slot.

There was one instance, however, when the child's size of Miss McMillan's foot got her into trouble. While crossing at the intersection of two streets in Chicago the traveling portion of one of her feet caught in a wide cable slot. As she refused to continue her ride in her stocking feet, fearing in that particular neighborhood she would be mobbed, her husband was led up until the shoe could be extricated in such a way as to not injure her foot. But as Miss McMillan was the possessor of only one shoe she spent the next day she decided not to sue the company.

Remember Snuffy? Well, he's back again, and he's funnier than ever. Just as funny as he was when he was the star of the show. Just as funny as he was when he was the star of the show. Just as funny as he was when he was the star of the show. Just as funny as he was when he was the star of the show.
DAVE MARION AND HIS
DREAMLAND BURLESQUERS
Without any doubt, "Dave" and his Dreamland Burlesquers are the greatest touring organization that ever played the Howard. And I've seen 'em all. Dave has surrounded himself with a new set of principals, a new chorus, a new scenic production, a new wardrobe, and a new spirit. Also a Big Beautiful Show that is Bright, Breezy and Clean. And something doing every minute. Just a bunch of good looking girls and good looking boys, singing, dancing and talking funny. Dave is the funniest comedian on the Howard stage, and he's surrounded by a company of comedians who are equally funny. Dave and his Dreamland Burlesquers are the best show we've had at the Howard in a long time. Don't miss it.

GENERAL SHERMAN'S GRANDCHILD WINS IN LOVE AS HE DID IN WAR

Miss Eleanor Thackara Routs the Opposition and Will Wed Fred Cauldwell.

HER FATHER'S VICE-CONSUL

Amazing Contract Between Late Albert Pulitzer and Nurse Revealed by Law Suit.

BY VANCE THOMPSON.

(Special Cable to Boston American)

PARIS, Oct 1.—Miss Eleanor Thackara is the youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs Alexander Montgomery Thackara of Berlin Mr. Thackara was promoted to the office of American Consul General to Berlin from the United States Consulate at Havre, when Consul General Frank H Mason was moved from the German capital to Paris. Mrs. Thackara is a daughter of the late General William Tecumseh Sherman and her daughter, Miss Eleanor, inherits a goodly share of her grandfather's spirit.

In the consulate office is a young New Yorker, Frederick Cauldwell, who holds the position of vice-consul There he and Miss Thackara met and it was a case of love at first sight. The Thackaras Mrs. Thackara is the leading spirit in the American colony of Berlin—have aspirations and when Cupid's arrows first began to fly, the parents sought to get their fascinating daughter out of the danger zone by sending her off on a visit to Ambassador Bryan and family at far off Tokio, Japan

Love Grows by Absence.

But absence only served to make the young hearts grow fonder and Miss Thackara more determined. Then came the cherry blossom season in Japan with all the love and sentimentality and the mail brought some proofs of the fair exile's irresistible yearning to return to Germany where her father and mother—and young Mr. Cauldwell—are, that the opposition was beaten down and General Sherman's granddaughter has made her triumphal march from Tokio to Berlin and the engagement is announced.

Moreover the wedding is to take place this month in the German capital, although it is the Rue de la Paix that is busy preparing an elaborate trousseau for the victorious young bride.

Among the bridal presents which will be sent from Paris, two deserve special mention—one is an automobile especially equipped for the honeymoon trip, this being the gift of the bride's brother, Alexander Thackara, Jr., who is in the automobile business here, the other is some precious souvenirs of the bride's illustrious grandfather, General Sherman, which are in the possession of his friend, Governor Sprague of Rhode Island

Miss Thackara is a clever linguist speaking German and French fluently She assists her mother in all social functions and also in her work as president of the American Women's Club of Berlin.

An amazing contract has just come to light and upon this contract depends the life annuity of a well known Viennese woman, and, indirectly, the validity of annuities from the New York Life and other insurance companies purchased by the late Albert Pulitzer.

Wonderful Contract Revealed.

The woman in question is Mme. Vera Scala, who has begun suit against the Pulitzer estate just when all the claims were believed to have been settled. She is attacking in the first instance the Ambulance Society of Vienna, to which Mr Pulitzer left a goodly slice of his estate It appears that Mme. Vera Scala had been receiving an annuity from Mr Pulitzer for many years and she shows a contract by virtue of which it should continue during her life.

Among many other accomplishments Mme. Vera Scala has the reputation of being the best nurse in Vienna. The contract bound her not to marry during the lifetime of the late Albert Pulitzer. It also bound her to hold herself at his beck and call at all times and at all hours of the day and night. Sometimes she would be called to his bedside in the dead of night to administer to an imaginary ailment of the patient. If he found a London theatre draughty he would telegraph to Mme. Scala to come to cure him of a cold

The contract covered all quarters of the globe. Thus, should Mr. Pulitzer cable from New York or San Francisco or Japan, Mme. Scala was bound to respond Another condition of the contract regarded the color of her clothes. He would tolerate no red or green, and the contract states that he preferred blue to all other colors, because the tone soothed his aching eyes.

Mme. Scala's suit is for the continuation of her annuity. The defence claims that the maker of such a contract was of unsound mind. Should the courts hold this to be the case then the contracts made by Albert Pulitzer for annuities from four insurance companies, including the New York Life and the Aetna, must also be considered null and void. In which case the said companies will be compelled to hand over about half a million dollars to Walter Pulitzer, the heir to Albert Pulitzer.

Mary Garden Centre of Battle Over Who Will Sing New Role

Three Grand Opera Stars All Want to Be "The Girl of the Golden West" in Philadelphia Opera.

Special Cable to Boston American

MILAN, Oct 1 [illegible] the Girl of the Golden West [illegible] three interpreters at the [illegible] this season—Mme Destinne will create it at the Metropolitan in New York on December 6 then Mary Garden will do it in Chicago, while Carmen Melis will take the part in Boston

Now there is trouble [illegible] stars shall have the honor of creating the part in Philadelphia, where the opera will be given early next year [illegible] to a big row between the affiliated choruses, embittering especially the old feud between Herr Dippel and [illegible] Casazza The entire battle is [illegible] out over the pretty head of M[illegible] Dippel insists she shall sing the Golden Girl in Philadelphia, but Gatti-Casazza backs his own sta[illegible]

By the way, Miss Ga[illegible] hit on Wednesday night [illegible] at the Paris Opera House

KING'S INTIMATE.

Royal Valet May Open Restaurant in United States.

LONDON Oct 1 F Meth[illegible] more intimately associated with [illegible] King Edward than any other person in the court. His memory for uniforms and the correct way to wear them was wonderful. It was always Valet Metlinger who actually dressed his Royal Master to whom he was passionately devoted.

The late King, when in a very irritable mood, frequently vented his wrath on Metlinger, and on one occasion when he found he was in the wrong, apologized in the most graceful way. Metlinger was, in fact, a sort of safety valve for the King's feelings, and he always recognized the fact and was proud of it

He started life as a caterer, and at one time ran a restaurant He is now thinking of emigrating to America and establishing a restaurant.

PARIS REVOLUTION.

City Hall to Be Cleaned by American Methods.

PARIS, Oct 1—Clifford Grant Cook a young San Franciscan and brother of Miss Ethel Cook, who married Clarence Postley, has revolutionized Paris. He has persuaded the municipal authorities to let him clean the City Hall, which, like all the other buildings of Paris, has not been cleaned really since it was built The French way is to do a little scraping and brushing during two weeks each year when the various departments take their vacation

Young Cook seeing the dirty buildings thought of the "sand blast" process by which American buildings are cleaned, and finally convinced the authorities that the thing could be done They told him to try his plan on a private house, No 124 Boulevard Haussmann. He got experts and in five days made the house front look like new The French way of hand scraping takes five weeks.

BIRTH RATE LESS.

Fewer Children in British "Upper Classes."

LONDON, Oct. 1—The most interesting feature of the Church Congress at Cambridge was a discussion on what in America is called race suicide. The Bishop of Ripon said the birthrate had gone down 35 per cent in Western London but has increased 2 per cent in the East End Those who can best afford large families have the fewest children.

Another speaker made the striking statement that since 1875 the average number of children had halved in the best families of all classes in our nation

Jews and Catholics continue to rear families, the others voluntarily restrict theirs.

RIOTS MAKE VOTES.

Stead Says Germany Gains in Social Democrats.

LONDON, Oct 1—W. T Stead writes the following.

"The Berlin riots aptly illustrate the necessity for tact and caution in dealing with a street riot. The Prussian policeman is emphatically a man with a big stick and as his big stick takes the shape of a revolver and sabre, the result of letting him loose is somewhat bloody The Social Democrats will gain many votes for every man and woman sabred or shot in the streets of the capital. What with high prices and police brutality the stars in their courses seem to be fighting for the Social Democrats in Germany."

DR. JORDAN RETURNS.

Coming Back to United States After Studying "Peace."

LONDON, Oct 1—Dr David St[illegible] Jordan, president of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, who has been in Europe for the purpose of sizing up the men and forces that must be taken into account in any movement toward inter[illegible] peace, is soon to sail for the United Sta[illegible] He is in good health and enthusiastic.

He speaks at Caxton Hall next Tuesday afternoon just before sailing for the States on the "Negro in America." His address may help smooth the troubled waters for Booker Washington, whose coming [illegible] eon on Thursday is contemplated with some uneasiness.

41,710 Illiterate Voters.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—There were 41,710 illiterate voters at the last general election, according to a government return just issued. More than half were in Ireland. One voter was illiterate in every 337 in England, in every 323 in Scotland and in every nine in Ireland.

AMERICAN WELCOME TO REDMOND STIRS ALL IRELAND

News From Buffalo [illegible] Most Important [illegible] Rule Fight.

By AUSTIN F. MAGUIRE.

Special Cable to Boston American

DUBLIN Oct 1 The news from Buffalo which came on Thursday that [illegible] delegates from the American [illegible] of the United Irish League had [illegible] Home Rule [illegible]

[illegible] of faction, and landlords like Lord Clanricarde Lord Ross[illegible]

They were [illegible] Redmond and his [illegible] with coolness and [illegible] race in America [illegible] dumfounded and dis[illegible] getting a sendoff [illegible] whose political career.

Brings Victory Nearer.

It now looks as if this mission of Redmond and his colleagues to the Irish race in America would bring the question of home rule within the range of speedy settlement. Public opinion in England, Scotland and Wales is ripe for a settlement and the British democracy gives every sign of its whole-hearted desire to see the problem solved on terms that will be honorable to both sides.

Leading editorials in the principal papers, not only of London but of the provincial press, take a serious and common sense view of the action of the Buffalo convention. Their tone follows the line of reasoning that it is perfectly plain the Irish Parliamentary party can count on all the financial support it needs to carry on the struggle And this being so, the sooner the Irish question is adjusted the better it will be for the interests of the whole British empire.

It is known that Prime Minister Asquith and his fellow-ministers, notably Augustus Birrel, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill, have their minds made up on what they shall do to end the bitter struggle But the veto power of the House of Lords must first be restricted before progress can be made

As one prominent statesman put it yesterday, it would be sheer madness to bring in a Home Rule measure now. The fangs of those hereditary obstructionists in the House of Lords must first be drawn, so that they may not be able to throttle the bill when it goes up to them from the Commons So the whole combined forces of the Liberal party, which includes the powerful labor party, and of the Irish Nationalists will be flung against the House of Lords when Parliament assembles on November 15.

Feudalism vs. Democracy.

Will the Lords fight back? Perhaps they will. Down in the hearts of their opponents there is slumbering a silent hope that the peers will throw down the gauntlet. The challenge will be taken up with eagerness by the British Liberal and the Irish leaders. There will then come a battle between feudalism and democracy in which for the first time in history the [illegible] Scotland and Wales [illegible] common cause with the people of Ireland in a fight for supremacy between peers and people will be begun.

It will be a terrific conflict once it [illegible] can have but one ending, victory [illegible] people.

[illegible] such a contest as the present [illegible] welcome and he will use all his [illegible] to avert it

But whatever occurs, Ireland is sure to benefit It may be that even at the eleventh hour the ostriches of the peerage will pull their heads out of the sand and take a look at the world about them. If they read the lesson of their eyes, they will not in the present state of world opinion destroy the coming bill granting home rule.

DECAY OF POLITENESS.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—M. Andre de Fouquieres, who is called the last last of the Paris dandies declares in an article in the Matin that the French people are losing their reputation as the politest people on earth.

"We are copying the faults of our friends across the Channel," he says, "and we are copying them badly [illegible] the dandy, who went out [illegible] to be rude. Is the [illegible] young 'elegants' will rarely [illegible] to notice the guests [illegible] have to dine, thinking [illegible] fashion."

ALL ROYAL SWAINS PINE FOR GERMAN PRINCESS

No Sooner Is One [illegible] Denied Than Another Ru[illegible] Gains Circulation.

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

(Special Cable to Boston American)

PARIS, Oct 1 No sooner is the romance of one royal suitor for the hand of the Kaiser's daughter [illegible] than another [illegible] bustling to action A few days ago it was announced that the Princess Victoria Louise was engaged to the young Archduke Carl Franz of Austria That was denied and now I hear in German circles that her engagement with young Prince Carol of Roumania will soon be announced

The charming young princess has the healthy qualities of the young girl who has romped a good bit with her brothers. She is now eighteen, but the German Emperor believes in early marriages. Prince Carol of Roumania is a son of the Crown Prince of that country and direct heir to the throne. He is young, handsome and brave a veritable Prince Charming

No Change in Faith.

Is Alfonso XIII. to lose his title of "His Most Catholic Majesty," so proudly worn by his predecessors, Charles V. and Philip II? Is Spain to become a nation of agnostics?

It must be remembered that Alfonso XIII is the godson of Pope Leo, and I do not think he is in any danger of losing the title of "His Most Catholic Majesty," or that the people will give up the faith of their fathers

It is astonishing how many American married women come to Paris to study music There is for instance Mrs. John A Drake of New York, who has been for some time one of Jean de Reszke's most faithful pupils. There is also Mrs. Wilson Smith of Washington, who leaves Captain Smith at home, while she goes to study with Signor Braggiotti, who, by the way, is a son in law of B. Schlesinger, the composer

Many Study in Paris.

I learn also that Mrs. J. H. Van Dyke wife of the Standard Oil magnate, not only confines [illegible] go to school, but im[illegible] of her marriage, that it should not [illegible] her from the stage I am also informed that Mrs J. Harrison Power of Mississippi has resumed her musical studies. The last time she was here she might be seen every morning driving from the Ritz to De Reszke's studio to take her lesson.

It is no exaggeration to say that a continuous stream of wealthy American married women flows to the various popular musical instructors of Paris since Mrs William Sprague of Rhode Island set the example a good many years ago.

I have just met H Rubens, the Chicago lawyer who is on the quest for a sculptor to make a statue of Heine for the great central metropolis And why not? The Chicago women whom I have met over here know more about Plato than they do about pork, and I am told that Browning clubs are thicker than gambling clubs in that city of the West.

Now we have monuments of illustrious foreigners like Washington and Franklin and Shakespeare, but they were all presented to us Chicago wants a statue of the poet Heine and she wants to pay for it herself.

But why not let an American sculptor make the statue destined for the most American city of the Union? All the more so as there are many excellent American sculptors in France.

MAY PAY "MEMBERS."

British Conservatives at Sea on the Question.

LONDON, Oct. 1—It is understood the Liberal ministry will bring in a bill for the payment of members of Parliament and of returning officers expenses. Conservatives are all at sixes and sevens on this subject. Mr. Smith of Liverpool, who has been cruising in the Levant with Winston Churchill, has plunged for the payment of members but the rank and file shrink from any measure which would render a fat purse no longer essential for a Parliamentary candidate.

Guillotine for Pekin.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The "Gaulois" states that the Chinese authorities have obtained from France a guillotine, which, arriving in good condition, has been installed in the new prison at Pekin, constructed and kept up on modern lines.

Bernhardt Rides on Top of Omnibuses to Keep Young, She Says

Confessing the Age of 66, She Pl[illegible] Part of Youth of 19 and Looks It, Too

Special Cable to Boston American

LONDON, Oct 1 Mme Bernhardt [illegible] at the [illegible] her most famous dramas on the vaudeville stage, was asked how it was she retained her perennial youth To the querist she gave the whimsical reply

"By riding on the top of the omnibuses."

Whatever the cause may be the result is certain. Bernhardt appears and acts with all the grace and vivacity that she displayed twenty years ago, and whether as Lorenzacchio, the Distant Princess or L'Aiglon, she displays what seems to be imperishable adolescence.

Yet this wonderful woman is a great grandmother. Confessing to the age of sixty-six, she plays a lad of nineteen, and looks it.

MILLIONS WAITING.

Vast Sum Remains Unclaimed in England.

LONDON, Oct. 1—Some of those who are at present engaged in the quest of treasure, supposed to be buried in a sunken Spanish galleon, might possibly turn their attention with greater profit to the mass of unclaimed treasure which stands to the credit of suitors in the books of the pay office of the Supreme Court.

The amount so standing in England alone is nearly $10,000,000, of which the interest and a large part of the capital will, in default of a successful petition, ultimately go to the reduction of the national debt. Once every three years a list of the accounts to the credit of which the funds stand is published in the Gazette, and it appears that half of them do not exceed $750 in value, and only about one-twentieth exceed $5,000

There was a time when the investment of these funds—and the enjoyment of the dividends—was left to various officials of the courts, but in the general clearing away of pleasant perquisites this easy system was done away with

WOMEN DUPED

Aviation Made Bait for Up-to-Date Swindle.

BERLIN, Oct. 1 Aviation has appeared for the first time as the bait of a swindle, which worked very well for a time

An advertisement appeared in one of numerous matrimonial publications which flourish in Germany, stating that the inventor of a new and wonderful flying machine, who was without funds, wished to meet a wealthy lady ("view to matrimony") so that he might be able to finance his scheme and win numerous prizes with his machine

Answers flocked in and the "inventor" gathered in a rich harvest of shekels from various confiding and husband-hunting women, whom he gulled with his tales of what marvels he was going to work in the aviation line. Of course, there was no aeroplane and no plans, but the ingenious swindler, who had promised marriage to dozens of women, was prosecuted and sentenced to a severe term of imprisonment

NEVER ILL; DIES AT 110.

Farmer Never Had Doctor; Took Occasional Drink.

DUBLIN, Oct. 1—The death has occurred at the age of 110 years of Thomas Kelly of Larganboy, Tyrone He claimed to have been born on January 1, 1800, so that at the time of his death he was 110 years and eight months old

With the exception of his hearing, which became slightly defective during the last few years, all his faculties were unimpaired, and during his long life he never consulted a doctor, took any medicine or was known to be a day sick. He never smoked, but took an occasional glass of whiskey.

Bishop Favors Football.

LIVERPOOL, Oct 1 The Bishop of Liverpool, addressing a meeting of football referees, said that the game conferred great benefits, physical and moral, on those who played it. "Football," he remarked, "tends to strengthen the mind, body and character. It sends us back to our work better workmen, better citizens and better men."

The Bishop, however, deplored professionalism and the buying and selling of players. He wished that people would play football more and watch it less.

ROYAL BEAUTY WEARS 23 FEET OF PEARLS

Princess Henry of Pless Ca[illegible] Sensation in Berlin Society With Wonderful Jewels

BERLIN, Oct 1 Society circles here have been given a fruitful source for talk by the Princess Henry of Pless one of the prettiest of the young nobility, wife of the dashing Prince, who is universally liked The Princess [illegible] chain of pearls, almost twenty-three feet in length In the chain are about 2,000 pearls

The Princess [illegible] much of late at social functions Everywhere its beauty and intrinsic merit have created unending talk, and the Princess has always been the recipient of [illegible] compliments on acquiring so uncommon and handsome a jewel

The facility with which the [illegible] of pearls lends itself to adornment aroused the artistic enthusiasm of many of the admirers of the Princess [illegible] of such length that [illegible] her swan-like neck [illegible] matter Worn thusly, the jewel [illegible] the [illegible] of the Princess in a [illegible] markable manner

At times also the Princess wears her almost priceless chain crosswise on the breast. Without the slightest difficulty, she succeeds in making four loops, with enough of the chain left pendant for a watch or other ornamental jewel The effect is exceedingly pretty. Sometimes she binds the [illegible] about her hair and the [illegible] as to evoke the [illegible] compliments from her friends.

In fact the pearls can be made use of in many ways, but no matter in what style the Princess wears her chain, the result is always one of added beauty The Princess Henry, say society people has just reason to be proud of her matchless pearl chain

FLOATING AEROPLANE.

This Will Be Next, Is Prediction of Expert.

LONDON, Oct 1. A floating aeroplane or "airship" in a very literal sense will be next development in aviation, according to Stephen Marples, engineer to the Aerial League of the British empire. No details of the amphibious aeroplane are given, beyond the promise that it will be able to descend upon the water and rise again when necessary. Mr. Marples adds that such a machine is already in existence but it is not yet ready for a public appearance

It will probably be first seen during the competition for the best aerial journey between Boulogne and Folkestone and back repeated four times in a week, with one or two passengers The prize offered is $10,000.

French Nobility Grows.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—There were only 30,000 noble families in France before the Revolution, now there are ten times as many claiming to be blue-blooded aristocrats, this in spite of the fact that a great many of the old families have died out or are dying out.

A Converted Marchioness.

The Marchioness of Londonderry, one of the haughtiest peeresses of England, has [illegible] entertaining the Mothers [illegible] Friendly Society at Wynard Park Her Ladyship gave an instructive address as well as tea and buns and everybody spent a happy day. NO PILGRIMAGES IN 1911.

Papal Mandate Calls for Quiet Year for the Vatican.

ROME, Oct 1—It is authoritatively stated that by order of the Pope, there will be no pilgrimages to the Vatican next year, nor will there be any beatification ceremonies or consistories

Next year is the jubilee of the re-establishment of the Italian kingdom, in celebration of which a great international exhibition is to be held in Rome, and the Papal mandate is said to be for this reason.

POPE'S GREETING TO K. C. PILGRIMS DESCRIBED BY PROF. MONAGHAN

Blessing of Pius X. Extended to American Brethren at Memorable Meeting.

Tourists Visit Historic Places at Genoa, Birthplace of Great Discoverer.

Members of Knights of Columbus touring party in front of St. Peter's Church at Rome; and Prof. James C. Monaghan, who is writing special articles on the pilgrimage for the Sunday American.

THE doings in Genoa and in Rome of the Knights of Columbus pilgrims are detailed to-day in the Sunday American in another article from the pen of Professor James C. Monaghan, whose opening article, published on this page last Sunday, attracted widespread interest and attention.

Dr. Monaghan gives this morning a graphic pen picture of Genoa and its people and the reception the pilgrims from America received there. Then he carries his readers to Rome and into the Hall of the Consistory in the Vatican, where Pope Pius X. received and blessed the pilgrims and spoke to them words of affection. It was a memorable scene and it is skilfully portrayed by the able writer for the Sunday American.

By PROF. JAMES C. MONAGHAN

THE scene as we found ourselves in Genoa was indescribably affecting, moving many almost to tears. What [illegible] dreamed and worked for was [illegible] of we who wandered at his [illegible] sacred to us as Knights [illegible] just as [illegible] the great [illegible]

The building [illegible] perhaps too massive. [illegible] first sight at least a [illegible] seum at Rome, both because of its size and of its form. Its architecture [illegible] heavy, stupendous, awe-inspiring.

People's Love of Song

If Moore was able to call Ireland the land of song, what is to be said of a people that sing all day and all night? And what voices! Of course the Tuscan tongue is the most beautiful in the world [illegible] itself to song. [illegible] Italians may [illegible] "La lingua Toscana nella bocca Romana e la lingua [illegible] del mondo" (The tongue of a Tuscan in the mouth of a Roman is the most beautiful language in the world). It certainly is.

On the boat among the steerage we had heard voices that stirred us to tears at times, and then to a limit of enthusiasm such as one feels when "Dixie" or "The Star Spangled Banner" is borne to one's ears. If it were possible to find fault, where all has been so successful, it would be with the Saturday and Sunday night singers who kept us awake. Never on any stage have I heard voices like some heard in and around Genoa.

Curious customs come up on all sides. For example, there are no seats, as with us, in the churches. Near the door are chairs that may be hired for a cent or two. In the beer and wine saloons you pay a higher price for drinks in the evening than during the rest of the day. On the streets, vehicles and people, as in England, pass to the left rather than to the right, as with us.

There are Sunday, as well as Saturday evening papers. Houses, churches and public buildings are often painted in soft, subdued colors, and are not infrequently decorated with beautiful pictures. Then there are beautiful arcades or galleries. "Why can't we have such?" said 107 out of our party of 108. Of course, we can and will, once Boston, Baltimore, New York and the rest wake up.

Perhaps the thing that impresses one most in Genoa is the Campo Santo, or Holy City, the Cemetery. It has no equal of its kind on earth. It is more like a [illegible]

[illegible] and art gallery than a [illegible] are deposited [illegible] tier, of [illegible] correction [illegible] one I hope to see [illegible] In [illegible] and in other [illegible] It is that of [illegible] with red or pink [illegible] the nurse's arms [illegible] blue ribbons [illegible] was new, of course [illegible]

[illegible] Pope [illegible] the [illegible] wept. It was strange and painful and pitiful [illegible] way one woman, Mrs. Broderick of Boston, put into words what all of us would have said had words come to us. But all were awed into a strange silence.

In that room stood the successor of a long line of great men, the Popes, the successors of St. Peter, the Vicegerent of Jesus Christ on earth.

As the Pope entered all knelt and would have remained kneeling but for a kindly word that was passed from pilgrim to pilgrim that only those about to receive His Holiness's blessing need kneel.

That put us all at our ease. We stood up and waited till His Holiness was near us when we went down on our knees as a child might, as was done of old in the patriarch's day, to a fond parent.

Pius X. has a way all his own. It is not the way of his great predecessor, Leo XIII., but it is a beautiful, friendly, happy way. His face beamed with kindness, and his every act was marked by as gentle a courtesy as ever characterized Leo.

In every movement one saw the actions of a man near to God. And yet, his face was sad. Indescribably sad, so sad that it pained one [illegible] watch him, as I did for a long time.

At the Holy Father's request Monsignor [illegible] rendered the address into English.

His Holiness imparted the apostolic benediction to the pilgrims and having given them his hand to kiss returned to his private apartments.

Photographed at St. Peter's.

Thus ended a day long looked forward to, long desired. A glorious, most successful day for all concerned. It was called so all who had a hand in its preparation. After the audience the pilgrims were photographed on the steps of St. Peter's. It was proposed by some that His Holiness be asked to sit with the group; but the leaders believed this to be too great a lowering of the Pope's dignity, the more so as some people are presuming upon the gentle kind old man's goodness, using every word he utters as an [illegible] for their schemes of self-praising or self-aggrandizement, some going so far as to boast about their influence at the Papal court.

The good, kind, gentle white shepherd is so unsophisticated, so absolutely honest, straightforward and true himself, that he cannot think anyone would use him for any but the best of ends. The matter finding no favor with those asked to decide, was dropped, and the picture was taken without His Holiness.

And so the soft, warm sun sank behind the hills. Day went into night. As we sat, after it all, talking together, we wondered at the perverse ways in which men wander, seeking at The Hague what the Papacy is so well prepared to furnish, a final tribunal, a high tribunal of peace.

CATHOLICS ERECTING MODEL GYM IN CAMBRIDGE

St. Mary's $80,000 Building to Contain All the Latest Improvements.

THE $80,000 building of St. Mary's Catholic Association at the corner of Harvard and Prospect streets, Cambridge, will be dedicated Monday night, October 24, with exercises and entertainment commensurate with the dignity of the building and the meaning it has to the people of St. Mary's parish and to the diocese as well.

His Grace Archbishop William H. O'Connell and other church dignitaries will be present. The State and the laity will be represented. Invitations have been sent to Governor Draper, Mayor Fitzgerald and Mayor Brooks of Cambridge, Senators Lodge and Crane, Representative McCall in whose district the association is located, to the subscribers to the building fund and the subscribers to the Father Scully Memorial. These guests, with members of the association and people of the parish generally, will make an assembly of 3,000 to 3,500 for the dedication night.

Old Gym Burned.

The building is on the site of the old Cambridge Gymnasium, which was burned in May, 1909. The old gymnasium was dedicated on October 13, 1885. Elders of the parish will recall that impressive occasion of a quarter-century ago. Among those present were the late Archbishop John J. Williams, the late Dr. McGlynn of New York, John Boyle O'Reilly and the late Governor William E. Russell.

The program for October 24 will combine inspection of the building, the dedication exercises proper, presentation of the Father Scully Memorial and the dedication ball.

The Father Scully Memorial will be a treasured part of the new building. It will be in honor of the late Rev. Thomas Scully, P. R., who was pastor of St. Mary's for many years, and who died eight years ago. He founded the organization which occupied the old gymnasium.

When he died the Father Scully Memorial was founded to obtain funds to establish a suitable monument to [illegible] The funds have been collected and the [illegible] It is a white marble drinking fountain placed on the ground floor of the main entrance of the building. The fountain was designed by Edward T. P. Graham, architect of the building. The design calls for four bowls placed around a base of polar. The fountain streams issue from dolphins' heads.

Chance to View Building.

Around the hallway where the fountain is located is built a low settle from which one may study the architectural details of the memorial. A large [illegible] painting, life size, of Fr. Scully [illegible] appropriately [illegible] Mayor Brooks [illegible]

[illegible] building is of brick, giving [illegible] though containing three [illegible] of the main hall on the upper floor gives this four-story appearance [illegible]

[illegible] and dignified and makes an imposing appearance. The main entrance, which is beautified by an ornamental hood and panels of cut stone, is approached by a double flight of steps, forming a brick terrace, under which is the entrance to the basement.

On the Harvard street side is a separate entrance leading to the ladies' room on the first floor, thus giving the ladies of the parish a [illegible] to the room that was [illegible] for their exclusive use.

The basement includes a large and airy gymnasium 54x60 feet, finished in wood and extending two stories, twenty-five feet in height. The gymnasium will be adequately equipped with the latest apparatus. Surrounding the "gym" on two sides, at the level of the first floor, is a wide corridor balcony, where spectators may view the athletes exercising.

Many Shower Baths.

Leading off the gym is a large room, where are installed thirteen of the latest approved shower baths, with all their accompanying and necessary conveniences. This feature should prove one of the most popular of the entire building. A locker room for three hundred metal lockers, several toilet rooms, a small kitchen for [illegible] are also [illegible] the gymnasium. On the other side of the basement is the large area where the six regulation bowling alleys are being installed. A space along the last alley and behind the bowlers will give the spectators an opportunity to witness the games.

Leading from this hall are the gymnasium balcony and the principal rooms, each of which is about 25x35 feet. These are to be used as reading, game and class rooms.

One of the chief triumphs of the entire work is the main hall or auditorium, 80x80 feet. St. Mary's parish will have the distinction of possessing the second largest public hall in Cambridge. It has a seating capacity of 1,500 on the floor and 200 in the balcony. The stage, 35x12 feet, will accommodate [illegible] There is [illegible] to obstruct the [illegible] The latest [illegible] heating [illegible] reception rooms with [illegible] for ladies and gentlemen, have been provided on either side of the stage. Four distinct stairways affording absolute safety of egress, lead from the hall to the street. On two sides of the auditorium a raised platform has been constructed.

Private Dressing Rooms.

Of the shower baths, eight are equipped with private dressing rooms. The walls and partitions of the showers are of clear black slate, and the floor is of granolithic. The shower valve is of the anti-scalding type, with hot and cold water, controlled by one handle; so arranged that danger from scalding is practically eliminated. The shower is provided with a five-inch rain head above, also a three-inch band spray for those who do not care for a head shower. The whole fixture is made of very heavy brass, nickel plated, and is designed especially for hard service.

A Ladies' Auxiliary to the association has been founded and will have its own part of the building, with separate entrance. The bowling alleys, baths and gymnasium will be reserved for the auxiliary members one evening or one or two afternoons a week.

The Rev. M. J. Doody, P. R., pastor of St. Mary's parish; James J. Casey, president of the St. Mary's Catholic Association; the officers of the memorial committee and the general membership of the two bodies have worked for the new building.

Lynn Collections To-day.

Lynn Catholic churches collect their annual contribution toward the support of the charities in the diocese to-day, and several thousands of dollars are expected to be realized. The churches in Lynn to direct their proceeds of the day to the cause are St. Mary's, St. Joseph's, Sacred Heart, St. Patrick's and St. John's of Swampscott.

THOUSANDS TO MARCH IN COLUMBUS DAY PROCESSION

Every Band of Music in Boston Will Be Heard During the Monster Parade.

ALL plans are now in working order for the great Columbus Day parade to be held in Boston on Wednesday, October 12.

Colonel John J. Sullivan of the Ninth Regiment, the chief marshal, and Captain Jeremiah G. Fennessey, chief of staff, are working out in true military fashion the enormous mass of detail which is crowding in upon them in connection with the celebration.

Some idea of the immensity of the procession as it is beginning to take shape at the hands of its commanding officers may be gained from the fact that every band of music and every drum corps within the jurisdiction of the Musicians' Union of Boston has been engaged for the day, and to meet the demand for musicians, for the first time in the history of organized labor, non-union bands, including bands of the United States army and navy, will be permitted to head organizations in the line.

The parade will move in Beacon street, passing the State House and then turn into Tremont street, going as far as Court street to Washington street, and through Washington street to Temple place, then to Tremont to Boylston and finally to Park square, where the dismissal will take place.

Four Points of Review.

There will be four points of review. The first will be for Most Rev. William H. O'Connell at Arlington and Beacon streets; the second, the State House, where Governor Draper will review, the third at a point in Tremont street for Mayor Fitzgerald and the final review at Park square for the Chief Marshal and his staff.

It has been decided that the Holy Name Society will form in eleven divisions. Joseph A. Sheehan will be the first marshal of this detail, with eleven other marshals. William J. O'Brien, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus, will be the marshal of the Knights of Columbus' division. The Hibernians, the Foresters, the Portuguese societies, the Lithuanians, Poles and others will select their marshals this week.

The Italian societies are to have the right of line.

The military bodies acting as escort to the parade will have their own officers and these will include United States Coast Artillery [illegible] from the war ships to be [illegible] for Columbus Day and the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., as well as other State military bodies.

Chairman William J. O'Brien of the Columbus Day executive committee has announced the following committees for Columbus Day:

A. O. H. PLANS FOR COLUMBUS PARADE

Divisions of This Section Are Preparing for a Record Turn-Out.

Notwithstanding that the elections are taking place in the several counties, and other important matters pertaining to the A. O. H. are claiming the attention of the members, plans are going ahead for the great parade on October 12. County President Bland Dwyer will announce his staff this week and will also send each president instructions as to time and place to report. The Hibernian section will be very large, as every division in the county has voted to parade. The matter of uniforms has been left to each division, and where organizations are not equipped with regalia, dark clothes, black derby hats, white tie and white gloves will be worn. Each section will have a band. The divisions will parade numerically. South Boston, Roxbury, Charlestown, Brighton, Dorchester and Jamaica Plain will send large contingents. President Dwyer expects to have delegations from Lynn, Worcester, Lowell and all cities and towns around Boston. A number of the divisions will entertain after the parade.

The first social and dancing party of Auxiliary No. [illegible] of Roxbury was a complete success. A large number was present, including Mrs. Minnie Finlay Reynard, [illegible] president. The regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held at No. 8 Warren street on Sunday evening, October 23.

Division No. 48 will meet in Paine building next Sunday evening [illegible] arrangements for Columbus Day. President [illegible] J. Kilbride expects to have the complete roster of the division in line that day.

Two excellent military companies will parade October 12 [illegible] of South Boston. The [illegible] organized fifteen years ago, [illegible] Michael O'Brien [illegible] company first organized will have [illegible] Handsome new [illegible] be worn that day.

Suffolk County will nominate officers next Friday [illegible] October 16. There will be [illegible] It is [illegible] Dwyer will be re-elected by acclamation [illegible] steward [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Division No. 2 [illegible] Hall [illegible]

[illegible] vice-president, [illegible] sentinel, [illegible]

[illegible] will meet this evening [illegible] The committee [illegible] the parade October 12 [illegible] includes Thomas [illegible] Patrick J. Burns, George [illegible]

A committee [illegible] the presidents of [illegible] 49 and 50 will meet [illegible] a hall and [illegible] several degrees on over 200 [illegible] One of the best degree teams in the State will do the work. The attendance will be very large, as the combined membership of the divisions interested is over 1,000 men.

The Suffolk County L. A. delegates chose the following officers for the ensuing term: County President Mrs. Elizabeth A. Dowd of Roxbury; vice-president, Mrs. Minnie Finlay Reynard of Roxbury; secretary, Miss [illegible] F. Dignan of East Boston; treasurer, Miss Nellie F. Carroll of Neponset. State Treasurer Mrs. Ellen M. Murphy, the retiring county president, was presented a handsome diamond ring. Mrs. Elizabeth Giblin of East Boston made the presentation speech on behalf of [illegible] State President Mrs. Mary [illegible] Boston and County Chaplain Rev. [illegible] P. R., pastor of St. Joseph's, Roxbury, delivered addresses.

The Plymouth-Bristol County convention will be held in A. O. H. Hall, Weir street, Taunton, this afternoon.

Delegates from Norfolk County met in Historic Hall [illegible] and elected the following officers: Dennis J. Slattery of East Weymouth, county president; James L. White of Walpole, vice-president; Patrick J. Ferguson of Quincy, recording and financial secretary; Thomas J. Hannon of Dedham, treasurer, and the Rev. James J. Chittick of Hyde Park county chaplain.

Reports submitted by the officers show that Division No. [illegible] Waltham is one of the strongest in every department [illegible] of the State. President James J. [illegible] is to be congratulated on [illegible] showing.

NEWS of IRISH COUNTY CLUB'S

Another meeting of the Kildare Association will be held this evening at No. 694 Washington street to admit a number of candidates who were unable to be present at the institution of the Club last Sunday evening. A big charter list was present when Council President Patrick F. Hastings called the meeting to order. The officers chosen include Michael Ahearn, President; Patrick Conway, Vice President; Charles Ennis, No. 2 Allegheny street, Roxbury, Secretary; William Fitz[illegible], Financial Secretary Treasurer; Denis Carroll, Sergeant-at-Arms; Thomas Higgins, Sentinel. The officers will act as delegates to the Central Council. Charles Ennis, Patrick Conway, William Higgins and Joseph Flanagan will prepare the new constitution and by-laws. A schedule of regular meetings will be adopted to-night and arrangements made for a series of social meetings. All former residents or the descendants of former residents of Kildare are cordially invited to attend this meeting or correspond with the Secretary.

The Central Committee will meet in Sever Hall, [illegible] next Tuesday evening. New delegates will be present from Queens and Kildare counties. President Patrick F. Hastings will issue the new password and all clubs are expected to pay the annual fee in order to obtain this quarter's issue.

An important meeting of the Mayo Men's Benevolent Association will be held this afternoon at Friendship Hall, No. 12 Kneeland street. After the initiation of a large number of candidates the ball committee will distribute tickets to the members for the annual reunion concert and ball at Paul Revere and Talbot Halls on Wednesday evening, November 30. The usual high class literary entertainment will be given after the business meeting to-day.

Wednesday evening, November 16, has been selected as the date of the third annual ball of the [illegible] Association. Paine Hall will be the scene of the affair and the committee of ten is now making arrangements to give every guest that evening a handsome souvenir. At the meeting to be held Sunday evening, October 23, in Appleton Hall, the officers to have charge of the floor and reception of guests will be appointed.

The Kilkenny Mens' Association will meet this afternoon at No. 164 Canal street, near the North Station, and commence preparation for the reunion and ball to be held early in January in Paine Hall. The executive board will have a number of important matters to submit to the members. Owing to the recent death of James Carroll, one of the members of the flute and pipe corps, resolutions will be adopted. The usual Irish concert given after each business meeting will be omitted to-day.

President Peter A. Conroy will open the meeting of the Dublin Association this evening in [illegible] Hall, No. 694 Washington street, at 8 o'clock. The committee appointed to arrange for a [illegible] the members that have been [illegible] the past summer will [illegible] the date and place for the reception. [illegible] arrangements will also be made for the fourth annual concert and ball.

The [illegible] annual reunion concert and ball of the [illegible] will be held in Paul Revere Hall on Wednesday evening, December 14, promises to be the event of the season. The committee [illegible] arranging details for the reunion and several [illegible] are promised. [illegible] music for Irish [illegible] will be provided. [illegible] will be held [illegible] Warren street [illegible] Sunday evening, October 16 [illegible] are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

The Kilkenny Ladies' Association will meet in Phoenix Hall, No. 724 Washington street, next Sunday afternoon. The programs arranged for the Winter season include a number of club socials.

The Tipperary Men's Association will meet this evening in Investigator Hall, No. 9 Appleton street. With [illegible] of [illegible] reports of committees, and the arranging of dates for the several social affairs the Tipperary men will have a busy season.

The Clare Men's Association will meet in Vernon Hall, No. 1208 Tremont street, Roxbury, next Sunday afternoon. A number of measures concerning residents of Clare will be acted upon. A musicale will be given after the meeting.

The Clare Ladies' Association will meet next Sunday afternoon and complete arrangements for the annual Autumn social and dancing party in Paine Hall on Thursday evening, October 27. A crowded hall will be the result of the committee's efforts as the young ladies are bending every energy towards making this party one long to be remembered.

The Monaghan Association will commence its Fall and Winter series of social meetings this evening in Wells Memorial Hall. A feature of each meeting is the large list of candidates that present themselves for initiation. Among the speakers this evening will be a number of the Central Council officials.

The annual concert and ball of the County Down Association will be held in Lyceum Hall, Village Square, Brookline, on Thursday evening, December 1. The members will endeavor to make this party the banner one in that district and the meetings being held every week by the hall committee are enthusiastic. The regular club meeting will be held on Sunday evening, October 16, in Carpenters Hall, Brookline.

Cavan people in Greater Boston will assemble in Paine Hall on Thursday evening, December 8, when the annual reunion and ball of the Cavan Association will be held. The committee will spare no expense in efforts to have the reunion the best yet held under its auspices.

STRANGEST OF ALL THEATRE PUZZLES IS WHY NEW PLAYS MEET SUCCESS OR FAILURE

"Every Play Is a Failure Until It Is an Established Success," Said William Gillette, Even After Warm Greeting to "Electricity."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

AT the close of the first performance of "Electricity" William Gillette was asked what he thought of his new play.

"It's a failure," he said briefly. "I call every play a failure until it is an established success. That is the only safe way to estimate the value of a new production."

Mr. Gillette had sat through a performance of "Electricity" much after the manner of a man who was bored to death and wished someone would invite him around the corner. Nothing in his appearance indicated any interest in the play that was going merrily on its way to failure or success. Not even the apparent friendliness of the audience encouraged him to call the play a success until it had been definitely proved. He had been too long in the game—he had seen too many probable successes go crashing into theatrical doom to take any notice of the unreliable opinion of an occasional audience.

Theatrical success is a fickle creature—if you don't believe it, look over the list of plays that have been produced in the last three years and try to figure out in your own way what element of dramatic art, technique or skill made some plays successful and others, with equally sound foundations, dismal failures. Mr. Gillette himself, as he waits for the final verdict on "Electricity," is doubtless turning over in his mind a recollection of his own "Clarice" that was wonderfully successful in Boston, where it played for several weeks, yet failed utterly in every other city it visited. Boston liked "Clarice"—New York and Philadelphia would have none of it at any price, and the transfer man had another teaming job.

The mystery of success and failure in the field of dramatics is past understanding. For two weeks "Paid in Full" was looked upon as not only dead but buried, and Eugene Walter, whose faith in his play never faltered, was compelled to furnish a guarantee against loss to Wagenhals and Kemper before they would consent to give it a week in the Astor Theatre. What happened after that is too well known to those who follow the theatre to repeat. Mr. Walter became famous in a night, and from actual want he suddenly found himself drawing an income of about $2,000 a week from royalties on his play.

THERE'S ALWAYS A CHANCE.

"The Man of the Hour," which earned $200,000 in a single season for its producers, was looked upon as another dramatic joke after its initial performance in Philadelphia. The failure of this play during its early performances was so complete in the opinion of William A. Brady that the usual two weeks' notice of closing was posted and the members of the company were invited to look for other engagements. Mr. Brady, however, was prevailed upon to give the play a week's tour through Pennsylvania, and, to everyone's surprise, a [illegible] was extended to the piece. With this encouragement the play was taken to New York, where it became one of the pronounced successes of the season. How near "The Man of the Hour" came to riding straight to the storehouse is not generally known to the play-going public.

Even "Paid in Full," which played to enormous business in nearly every city in the country, fell flat in its Boston engagement—it failed in every particular, yet it had proved itself an overwhelming success.

"The Merry Widow," which was doubtless the most successful of any musical play since "Florodora," had everything its own way wherever it appeared, but its return engagements brought to light the astonishing fact that the East would have no more of it in a big way, while the Western cities were as hungry for it as ever.

It will be said that Boston is not a good city for return engagements, and such genuine successes as "The College Widow" and "The Music Master," which caught its first rough weather during its second visit to the Majestic Theatre, will be cited as examples. The rule hardly holds good, however, when you bring to mind "Ben Hur" and "The Round Up," both of which always find profit in great abundance here.

GEOGRAPHY A STRONG FEATURE.

That the success or failure of a play may be more geographical than constitutional is shown in "The Melting Pot," which was hailed as a sensation in Chicago, but drew only scant attention in New York and Boston. Even "The Fortune Hunter," which everyone who has seen it calls the most delightful comedy of seasons, and with a record of prosperity in New York and Chicago that has not been exceeded by any play in ten years, has not caught on in Boston with the same intense spirit that welcomed it in other cities. And "The Fortune Hunter" is a play that has all of the excellent qualities that make a rousing success—this has been proved by its records in New York and Chicago.

"The Climax" was another New York success that asked for charity in Boston—and didn't get it. The same might be said of "The Battle," and a score of others well-built and splendidly-cast plays. You cannot always tell just how the public is going to behave.

Another example of theatrical uncertainty is found in "The City," which had an exceedingly dull and unpretentious opening at the Globe Theatre in Boston. There was never a more persistent staying away from a theatre than during the two weeks the play was at the Globe, yet New York opened wide its arms and welcomed the piece as one of the dramatic masterpieces of the time. Three companies of "The City" have been organized for this season, but it is doubtful if the Shuberts will risk losing money by sending the play to Boston.

So, doubtless, Mr. Gillette had most excellent reasons for withholding his judgment on "Electricity" until the final count is taken. His attitude was that of a philosopher as well as a playwright.

At any rate Mr. Gillette did not hasten away from town without leaving a pleasant memory in the shape of a story about his very dear friend, the late Mark Twain. Mr. Gillette will meet you cordially, but he will not be interviewed. He would not even respond to an application of the third degree. But he was friendly enough to jeopardize his chance of connecting with the midnight train for New York by waiting to tell this story about Mark Twain.

A MARK TWAIN STORY.

"Mark had been invited to go golfing with a certain well-known Senator, who shall be nameless," related Mr. Gillette. "The humorist, not being a golfer, preferred to look on. Evidently the Senator on that particular day was off his game, for in making a drive he dug up a considerable portion of the links and sent it flying principally in Twain's direction. Somewhat embarrassed, and to cover his confusion, the Senator said: 'What do you think of our links?' To which Twain replied, spitting out a mouthful of grass and sand: 'They are the finest I ever tasted.'"

Mr. Gillete says that he considers his refusal to be interviewed a properly protected trade mark. It was useless to argue with him.

* * * * * * * * *

Mr Brady, with the assistance of Douglass Fairbanks and Thompson Buchanan, has been fussing over the final scene of "The Cub" for a week, with the result that the play has taken on a new finish that is expected to overcome the severe criticisms that have fallen so heavily upon it. All of the dramatic specialists in Mr. Brady's employ have been confined at hard labor on the job, and if numbers count for anything "The Cub's" new ending will win by a large majority.

* * * * * * * * *

The coming week will give Boston its first glimpse of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's "The Dawn of a To-morrow," which was counted as one of the positive triumphs of last season in New York. It was in this play that Miss Eleanor Robson shone so brightly before she embarked upon prosperous matrimony with August Belmont. Miss Robson's role will be played by Miss Gertrude Elliott, who, it seems, impressed New York by her ability to make the most of her opportunities.

* * * * * * * * *

"Girlies" will be found at the Boston Theatre to-morrow, and we are informed that absolutely none of the young women of Frederic Thompson's astonishing chorus will be missing. That is encouraging.

"The Girl and the Drummer" will bring a stage full of new faces to the Majestic to-morrow. This will be the first offering here by the new Shubert-Brady $1,000,000 corporation that promises to promote theatrical ventures on a wholesale basis.

* * * * * * * * *

Although Boston does not figure seriously in the dramatic world as a producing center, it can at least claim the distinction of having the two richest producers in the country on its voting list. According to Rennold Wolf, in a recent magazine article, the two men engaged in the uplift of the drama who can write the longest checks are B. F. Keith and Henry W. Savage.

Shubert Theatre.

Gertrude Elliott in "The Dawn of a To-morrow," will begin a limited engagement at the Shubert Theatre to-morrow evening. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. While the play has not been seen here, the reputation which preceded it is a sufficient guarantee that it will prove a welcome treat. In it Miss Elliott seems personally to have scored the personal hit of her career. The piece is by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett and is founded upon one of the most remarkable of her stories bearing the same title as the play. Miss Elliott first played in "The Dawn of a To-morrow" in London and scored such a hit that Messrs. Liebler & Co. engaged her to tour America in the piece. A thoroughly adequate production has been supplied by Liebler & Co., said to be conspicuous for the marvelous reproduction of a fog in the scene in the Whitechapel slums.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Crown Prince," which the John Craig Stock Company will give at the Castle Square during the coming week, is a romantic comedy of picturesque scenes and lively incidents. It opens in the mythical kingdom, ruled over by a beautiful queen and a minister of war who is in love with her. The dashing young heir to the throne of the adjoining kingdom of Moraatia has been betrothed in infancy to the Queen. The first act opens at a masked ball, at which the Crown Prince of Moraatia is present, having gone to Rhodoland in search of mysterious papers, and he dances with the Queen, neither knowing the other's identity. He kisses her, whereat she is very properly indignant, but she forgives him when he seeks a duel with a highwayman who has insulted her. In the meantime the Prince has discovered that the minister of war of Rhodoland has himself stolen the papers of which he is in search, and he therefore plays the highwayman himself, holds up the minister's coach, and is about to take the papers when the real highwayman appears. Then comes a comic situation and a duel wherein the Prince carries off the day, the outcome of the play being his final winning of the hand of her who is his by right of betrothal. The cast will be headed by Mr. Craig and Mary Young as the Crown Prince and the Queen.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

Since the days of John T. Kelly, known the country over as "The Roll Mill Man," there has not been a storyteller to equal Frank Fogarty, who comes to B. F. Keith's the next week. Mr. Fogarty was a concert entertainer up to about four years ago, when he was induced to go into vaudeville, and since then he has easily held the leading place in this line of work. His stories are always new, bright and humorous and he has a way of telling them that is all his own.

Other features will be the famous Bellclaire Brothers, who have just returned from Europe, where their feats of strength [illegible] attracted wide attention; the Borman Brothers will appear with their latest songs; Al White's new grotesque dancers "The Jolly Jiggers"; Gordon Eldrid and company in the comedy sketch called "Won by a Leg," and Maximo, the Cuban wirewalker.

Majestic Theatre.

If advance information is reliable, "The Girl and the Drummer," which comes to the Majestic to-morrow, is not a compromise comedy with music. It is not a string of tunes and acrobatic dances with [illegible] dialogue. In these two characteristics it is entirely out of style. There are several other distinguishing features about this production of William A. Brady's that might well serve as models to energetic producers of tinkling nonsense. The first is the behavior of the chorus and its utilization. Not only does this animated background keep in the picture, it contributes an atmosphere of artistic repose. Its evolutions are not only [illegible], but—they are novel. This [illegible] partly simplicity and partly an [illegible] laying aside of all posturing and [illegible] invitation to the audience. The [illegible] headed by Herbert Corthell, [illegible] by Phil H. Ryley, Miss [illegible] Marie Flynn, Hans Robert [illegible] Lewis, Miss Belle [illegible] Baldwin.

Boston Theatre.

"Girlies" will be seen at the Boston Theatre this week. With Joseph Cawthorne and Maude Raymond at the head of its cast of one hundred, the organization, which includes "the famous chorus of sixty girls," will come here [illegible] to present down to the last detail, the successful feature exactly as it was shown during the months of June, July and August on Broadway. In its preparation the ingredients of humor, melody, color, action and the spirit of youth were mixed in the proper proportions, and the result is an entertainment, the sparkle and effervescence of which cannot fail to enthuse the most blase theatregoer, steeped though he be in the conventionalities of a hundred other musical entertainments. "Girlies" is the joint work of George V. Hobart, Harry Williams and Edgar Van Alstyne. It is the first production of the kind to be made by Frederick Thompson.

Hollis Street Theatre.

There remains but one more week of the engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre of that rollicking farcical romance "Love Among the Lions," in which Charles Frohman introduced to Boston audiences the brilliant young English comedian, A. E. Matthews. The story of "Love Among the Lions" is one that appeals to every man and woman, for all the world loves a lover.

Colonial Theatre.

The seating and standing capacity of the Colonial Theatre has never been put to a more severe test [illegible] the last three weeks of the engagement of "The Arcadians." At every performance the big playhouse has been crowded to its absolute limit with lovers of clean, bright fun, rollicking songs, dainty dances and the most artistic scenery and costumes.

Howard Athenaeum.

The program at the Howard this week will include "The Dreamlands," headed by Dave Marion, Agnes Behler and a host of charming girls. Mr. Marion is a big card at the Howard and this season he brings a company that knows how to sing and act. "Snuffy," the cabman, will be a welcome feature, and a continuous bill will be in evidence. A concert program will be given to-night.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Ginger Girls," the Burlesque Producing company's latest extravaganza production, will be the offering at Waldron's Casino during the coming week. The principal fun purveyors are picked from the most prominent centre of the comedy market. Ed. Lee Wrothe, late star of "Me, Him and I"; George Stone, late star of "The Wizard of Oz"; Jennie Le Beau, Jeanette Sherwood and Bertie Grady carry the bulk of the comedy. Smoking is permitted during the performance.

Tremont Theatre.

"The Fortune Hunter" continues on its merry way at the Tremont Theatre, where John Barrymore and an excellent company are showing the intimate life of a small town. The play enters upon its third week at the Tremont to-morrow, and playgoers will doubtless keep it on the safe side of prosperity for some weeks to come.

Park Theatre.

Marie Doro, who will begin a new week at the Park Theatre to-morrow in "Electricity," has found nothing during the first week of her stay here to indicate that she has lost any of her exceptional popularity. Miss Doro is one of the [illegible] young women on the stage, and her success in the new Gillette piece is pronounced.

Globe Theatre.

The third highly successful week of the engagement at the Globe Theatre of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Cub" begins to-morrow evening with an advance sale of seats for the next sixteen performances large enough to warrant the greatest optimism on the part of William A. Brady that his young star will be able to remain in Boston for some time.

Grand Opera House.

Henri Bernstein's drama, "The Thief," will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House this week, being its first [illegible] in this city at popular prices. "The Thief" exposes the inner workings of a woman's heart—a woman so deeply in love with her husband as to go to a [illegible] to please and to satisfy him. [illegible] company engaged to present "The Thief" is composed of players of ability, headed by Miss Selma Herman, who will be seen in the role of Marie Louise.

Columbia Theatre.

The Columbia Theatre will be enlivened this week by the presence of "The Brigadiers"—advertised as "The Swiftest Thing in Burlesque." Always well liked, "The Brigadiers" show this season is said to have scored a bigger success than any previous season. The customary burlesques and vaudeville olio are offered.

Gaiety Thteatre.

One of the real thrillers among the burlesque attractions on the road this season will be at the Gaiety Theatre to-morrow. It is known as "The Marathon Girls," and you may be sure everything will move along at true Marathon speed. There are a score of handsome young women in the company, and a long list of vaudeville entertainers.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be the usual number of entertaining features on the program at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week. The Levy family, musicians; Julia Tracy, lively comedienne, the Ezi Trio, in a laughing comedy feature, will be viewed. There will be a concert program to-night.

Hub Theatre.

This week's bill at the Hub Theatre will have as a feature the well known [illegible] Troupe, portraying a series of beautiful and as bewildering mysteries as have ever been placed before the public. For the first three days Dan Barrett and company and Ingram and Feeley will also be seen. The usual Sunday concert will be given to-night.

Scenic Temple.

The sterling attractions presented at the Scenic Temple and the splendid conveniences of the house, which add to comfort and the enjoyment of a show, account for its enormous patronage. Next week's bill promises to be even better than any yet offered at the Temple. Leona Howe's Union Orchestra will remain as a feature.

King Philip Trips.

The regular trips of the steamer King Philip to the fishing grounds are as heavily patronized in the Fall months as in the Summer. And the fish are just as hungry, too, as those who have made recent voyages to the deep water have found.

Satellite Trips.

Judging from the crowds that go to the fishing grounds daily on the steamer Satellite, there is nothing to indicate that the season for deep water sailing is nearing its end. Good luck with the lines is reported by all who make the trips.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Frank Moulan, who has the dual role of James Smith and Simplicitas in "The Arcadians," took a three months' course of gymnastic training before entering that production in order to meet the requirements of the role. His training now continues on the stage. When "The Arcadians" was first given in New York city ten months ago Moulan weighed one hundred and sixty-[illegible] and to-day he tips the beam at one hundred and thirty-eight.

"Won by a Leg," the sketch presented by Gordon Eldrid and company at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week, was written by Lincoln J. Carter. Mr. Carter is the author of [illegible] melodramas [illegible] stage instead of the [illegible] from which [illegible].

Lions and lion tamers figure prominently in two [illegible] productions this season, although in both plays the beasts themselves are in evidence only to the ear. In "Love Among the Lions" there is a lion tamer, while in "The Dollar Princess," which will come to Boston later in the season, Will West will be seen in the role of the lion tamer with songs.

Edna Aug is waiting for Miss Rose Stahl to take on a new play, for it will mean that Miss Aug will go on the road in "The Chorus Lady." Miss Aug has been under contract with Henry B. Harris for some time, with the understanding that she will succeed Miss Stahl as Patricia O'Brien in James Forbes's comedy.

Billie Burke's hero, although the actress is English—is Lincoln. She will go miles out of her way to see a statue or a new picture of the statesman. When playing "Mrs. Dot" in Springfield, Ill., last week, she even went without her dinner to visit Lincoln's home and monument there.

Donald Gallagher, the boy actor in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," has grown an inch during the engagement of the piece at Wallack's Theatre in New York. It begins to look as if Donald might outgrow his part before the other cities in the country are visited.

Craig Campbell, one of the newest singers to join the Shubert forces, was the tenor soloist in the Little Church Around the Corner until recently. Mr. [illegible] will make his professional debut early in November.

Miss Julia Marlowe has just returned from Europe and will begin rehearsals with Mr. Sothern at once. "Macbeth" will be added to the repertoire this season, which will be opened in Boston.

Winona Winter is with the Sam Bernard show. Her father, still "The Man at the Helm" of several vaudeville productions, is again on Broadway, with his daughter appearing in a theatre on the same street.

The first of Mr. Craig's Shakespearean productions at the Castle Square this season will be "Twelfth Night." Mr. Craig will himself appear as Malvolio, and Mary Young will be the Viola.

Henry W. Savage has decided not to produce the latest work of Puccini, "The Girl From the Golden West," for which he holds the American rights in English, until after the Metropolitan has offered its production in Italian.

Hans Robert, who has the juvenile role in "The Girl and the Drummer," is a Boston boy, who gained his first stage experience with the Castle Square Opera Company.

Rumsey Morris, who is here as business manager with "Electricity," was the author of the popular play, "The Ninety and Nine."

IN THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

There is a movement on foot in Toronto to lift the license fee of the pure picture houses in town who wish to add vaudeville acts to the [illegible].

Thomas A. Edison has admitted that he has been a frequent visitor at moving picture shows. He declared that the newspapers should get after some of the shows in Newark, where the managers try to economize by giving poor light. According to the inventor it is almost as cheap to give good light and the pictures are greatly improved.

Maurice Costello, of the Vitagraph Company, had a thrilling experience the other day. He was riding, clad in Wild West make-up, down the Brooklyn Speedway on his milk white Arabian steed, when a runaway came dashing at frantic speed in his direction. With great skill and coolness he wheeled his horse toward the approaching animal, grabbed it by the halter and brought it to a standstill. [illegible] had been accomplished a man came out of a nearby stable, took hold of the horse and said: "That's all right, he was just coming from the pasture to the stable."

The Exhibitors' League of Ohio has recently been organized. At present there are only sixty members, but it is the aim of the organization to enroll the 1,300 exhibitors in that State.

There will be no board of censors for the moving picture theatre in Indiana, according to John A. Ladd, who is legislative librarian for the State Board of Charities. Mr. Ladd says that inasmuch as a greater part of the films exhibited in Indiana are censored before they are sent [illegible] New York a State censorship is not necessary.

A woman recently visited the Vitagraph studio and offered to furnish a company of [illegible] that would perform before a camera. The suggestion did not receive a great deal of encouragement.

VAUDEVILLE NEWS AND GOSSIP

W. Scott Adacker has been visiting the vaudeville theatres in New York for a week, looking for attractions that might be considered desirable catches for Ashton's Agency, London. The royal part of Ashton's Agency is accentuated on Mr. Adacker's card in the left hand corner by an engraving of the royal arms, under which appears the words, "By Appointment."

John Hayman is in this country looking over American acts in the interest of Moss-Stoll music halls of London and the provinces.

Harry Corson Clarke, who is doing vaudeville in England for a change, writes his friends that he likes it.

Two thousand dollars is the price mentioned as having been agreed upon between William Hammerstein and May Tully for her "baseball act." Christy Mathewson and "Chief" Myers, of the "Giants," will constitute the major portion of the turn to be seen at Hammerstein's next month.

Katherine Nelson and Elizabeth Otto, Boston girls who are in vaudeville, will return in two weeks. These girls made their debut at B. F. Keith's theatre about two years ago.

Signor Maximo, the Cuban wire walker [illegible] at B. F. Keith's theatre this week, comes of a famous family of circus artists. His brother, Robledillo, appeared here last Winter under Mr. Keith's management.

COMING EVENTS

"The Chocolate Soldier," with its fascinating music, comes to the Majestic Theatre for an engagement, beginning Monday, October 17.

Barney Gilmore will be seen at the Grand Opera House next week in a new play, entitled "Kelly From the Emerald Isle."

Preston Gibson's "The Turning Point" will be seen in Boston for the first time at the Grand Opera House in the near future.

"Seven Days" will be the next attraction at the Park Theatre, following the engagement of Marie Doro in "Electricity."

Nance O'Neil's return to the Hollis Street Theatre, next week in "The Lily," will be her first appearance at that house in a modern play, save the Ibsen works, which she included in her former repertoire.

MASCAGNI IS COMING BACK WITH HIS NEW OPERA

Italian Composer Forgets His Grievance of Eight Years Ago Against Boston

Symphony Concerts

The first concerts of the Symphony Orchestra will be held on next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. As usual the hall is completely sold out for the Friday afternoon rehearsals except the second balcony which is held for [illegible] seats at twenty-five cents each. For Saturday night there will be a [illegible] of seats on sale at the box office, although the greater part of these will be disposed of [illegible] season tickets to the course of [illegible] next week or ten days.

For the first concert Mr. Fiedler, who arrived in New York yesterday, has made out a program in commemoration of the one hundredth [illegible] Robert Schumann, following the [illegible] celebrations of this event in Germany during the past Summer. The soloist will be Alwin Schroeder, who will this year again be a member of the orchestra. The program comprises the "Manfred" overture, the "Rhenish" symphony, the concerto for [illegible] tunity to hear so much of his music.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the usual eight concerts to be given in Sanders Theatre, Harvard University [illegible] coming Winter [illegible] November 17 [illegible] April 27.

The Kneisel Quartet will give a series of four concerts at [illegible] Hall during the coming season [illegible] will be held on Tuesday evening, November 8, December 6, January 10, and February 21. The quartet this season [illegible] Franz Kneisel, first violin; Julius Roentgen, second violin; Louis Svecenski, viola, and William Willeke, 'cello.

As usual the Kneisels will play interesting novelties. In addition to the favorite classics there will be performed for the first time a Suite Basque by Charles Bordes for flute, two violins, viola and cello, a manuscript quintet by Rubin Goldmark and a new quartet by Max Reger.

The Kneisel Quartet will make an extensive tour of the country this season and its concerts in the East are slightly curtailed in number.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, LOVER OF ATHLETICS

Sketches from life of Douglas Fairbanks by American Artist Roth.

Star in "The Cub" Has a Taste for All Kinds of Out-Door Sports, Especially for Tennis.

By STEPHEN WISE.

This taste for out-door life holds Douglas Fairbanks in a grip that cannot [illegible] as he watched around the grounds on the Longwood Tennis Club, restless and uneasy, as he watched Miss Eleonora Sears and Beals Wright send a tiny white ball across the net. Mr. Fairbanks was fairly aching to get into the game himself, and you could readily believe it, for he made the confession without urging.

And tennis isn't the only sport that [illegible] his more important work [illegible] Theatre, although to hear him talk [illegible] the stage was merely an incident in his [illegible] instead of the principal source of [illegible]

"Of course I'm strong for life in the open," he declared, "was, the love of it [illegible] to pray for the farmers every night, they're our noblest citizens, for they earn their living from the soil, the soil from which all wealth springs. Now wasn't that a corking stroke?" and he switched from his prayers to a devout admiration for the skill of Mr. Wright, who smashed a liner across the court [illegible] on his toes like a Russian [illegible] for an American engagement.

Likes Tennis and Boxing.

Mr. Fairbanks is athletic because it gives him pleasure, and his love for physical exertion is as varied as it is [illegible] He takes tennis in strong doses [illegible] He will spend an after[illegible] terms [illegible] a welterweight who has the nerve to face him. He represents the strong arm of the drama in private life and stands ready to defend his title against all comers. Ask him.

Of course, he does other things besides tennis, squash and sparring. He motors, golfs and turns handsprings without any invitation, and for no reward which puts him in the amateur class, although Jack (Twin) Sullivan declares he ought to be a professional for the good of the game.

"I really suppose a man's inclination for [illegible] is [illegible] gift," he smiled, "for, like myself, my son is passionately fond of golf."

"He must be a big boy now," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," and there was a ring of true pride in the reply, "he's nearly ten months old. Why a person's tastes are born not made.

"An actor needs to be an athlete," explained Mr. Fairbanks from the folds of an English overcoat that fitted like a blanket and might have weighed a ton. "We have to keep in shape, you know, [illegible] season is broken into [illegible] the country with one [illegible] in which you find long hours and bad food. An actor who takes any pride in his profession is compelled to keep in proper [illegible] and there is no way to keep strong like outdoor life and the games that belong to it. Why, all Summer long when I was in England, I played eight sets of tennis every day, and it was great for the constitution, which includes your wind and general staying qualities. Look at Beals Wright, he is as hard as nails, and it all comes from tennis. You can do as well with squash, swimming or boxing but I think I rather prefer tennis. It doesn't muss you up so much."

Wanted to Play Himself.

It was plain to any one with half an eye that Mr. Fairbanks was hungry for a slap at the ball that Mr. Wright and Miss Sears were cuffing about most shamefully.

Mr. Fairbanks turned from athletics to the stage by saying that he wasn't altogether a stage reporter, though that might be the general impression from the roles he played in "A Gentleman From Mississippi" and "The Cub." "I played a regular reporter once in Philadelphia to win a bet—and while I don't want to discourage any of the young men now engaged in newspaper work by threatening to become a regular instead of a volunteer, I was considerably impressed with the fascinating features of the work. I covered the street car strike in Philadelphia for one day and found the task [illegible] reminded me of tennis. But the call of the stage lured me back to the footlights where I belonged. You get all the best of it as a stage [illegible] when I understand isn't always the case when you are a regular practitioner, you know. I have listened patiently to Thompson Buchanan's stories of rough times in newspaper work. Mr. Buchanan, by the way puts his own experiences on the stage in 'The Cub.' He worked on a Louisville paper and was sent into the Kentucky mountains to collect news on a feud that had been raging for years over the price of two hogs. So you [illegible] The Cub [illegible] of fiction, at any rate."

You might have reminded Mr. Fairbanks that his own physical activities seem more like the product of fiction than anything that has appeared on the local stage this season.

MAUDE RAYMOND'S LATEST.

If You Like Irish Stories Here Is a New One.

Here is another of Maude Raymond's famous collection:

Two sons of Ireland who started out from their native town together for the purpose of seeking their fortunes in this land of the free at length arrived in New York, and after securing employment sent back home for their respective wives, and in due time became established as American citizens.

One day Pat and Mike were sent out on a job which took them away from the city, and while there were laying bricks, elbow [illegible] Mike [illegible] fell [illegible] ground. It is needless to say he never knew what happened, but after he had been picked up in pieces the duty of informing the widow fell upon the shoulders of Pat.

Pat was in a quandary. He knew Mrs. Mike very well and he also knew she would be very much upset when she received the sad news. He must send her [illegible] He sat down and labored for some time over the message he would dispatch. He could not begin by stating that Mike was dead; that would be too sudden and the shock might kill her. He must get to it gradually. At last he sent this telegram: "Mike [illegible] off the seventh floor to-day. He broke his collar-bone. His legs is broke in two places and his arms is broke. He is in bad shape, in fact Mike's dead."

But after the message had gone Pat got to thinking it over. "My! but it was awful to tell the poor woman that," he reasoned, and the longer he thought the stronger became [illegible] that he had worded the telegram too strongly. The result was that later in the day he sent a second wire which read:

"Pay no attention to first telegram. Mike was not broke in so many pieces, but he's dead all the same."

CHICKEN-WING HAT.

Marie Tempest Wears Eight on Her Headgear.

The despairing head of the house often wonders whether there will ever be a limit to the ingenuity of women in inventing new styles of hats, but at all events there is no end in sight this season with the increasing feminine fondness for the Chantecler rules. Quite the latest among these is the White Hen but which Marie Tempest has originated. While summering in the French capital Miss Tempest attended a performance of "Chantecler." When the white hen came on in beautiful contrast to the color of the other birds a French woman sitting beside her exclaimed rapturously, "Wouldn't she make a wonderful Winter hat?" Miss Tempest immediately took the suggestion to a fashionable milliner and had him make up a Winter bonnet of the wings of white Leghorn hens. Eight birds in all were used to provide enough to cover a peach basket frame. So if the style is generally accepted, as Miss Tempest believes it will be, the wingless chickens will be common at the restaurants this Fall, and boarding house guests will no longer have to endure "chicken wing" luncheons.

NOVELIST HONORED AS A PLAYWRIGHT

The Wonderful Success of Mrs. Burnett, Who Wrote Gertrude Elliott's New Play.

Frances Hodgson Burnett, who wrote "The Dawn of a To-morrow," is probably best known as the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," although she is also the author of many books. Mrs. Burnett, while an Englishwoman, is looked upon in reality as an American novelist and playwright [illegible]

[illegible] 1865 and at the close of the Civil War, went with her parents to Knoxville, Tenn., where she took up her residence. Eight years afterward she married [illegible] Burnett of Washington. Two years [illegible] Knoxville [illegible] began writing and her first story, "That Lass o' Lowries," was published in Scribner's Magazine, and later in book form. Among her other works are "Surly Tim," "Haworth's," "Louisiana," "A Fair Barbarian," "Through One Administration," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Sara Crewe," "Little Saint Elizabeth," "The Pretty Sister of Jose," "A Lady of Quality," "His Grace of Osmonde" and "The Captain's Youngest."

Mrs. Burnett's first dramatic work was when she made "Little Lord Fauntleroy" into a play. This proved one of the most successful stage writings on record, having netted the author more than $100,000. [illegible] her notable play was "A Lady of Quality," in which Julia Arthur appeared, and which is still being played in all parts of the country. In her present play, "The Dawn of a To-morrow," it is said that Mrs. Burnett has [illegible] the very last word in modern thought and constructed a vital, interesting drama that is so vivid and picturesque that it commands attention.

It is also interesting to note that although Mrs. Burnett was born in England her greatest success was achieved in America, while the new star of the piece, Gertrude Elliott, is a player of rare talent, born in New England, who first won a stellar place on the London stage.

SELWYN STARTED AS THEATRE USHER

Star Tells How He Received Fifty Cents for Early Performance.

Edgar Selwyn, who is concerned in many ways with the theatre and its environment, formed his early acquaintance with the stage while serving in the capacity of usher at the Herald Square Theatre in New York a number of years ago during a Richard Mansfield run there.

"I used to imitate 'the Great Richard,'" said Mr. Selwyn, "and one day I became so brazen as to present myself before Mr. Mansfield in order to give him an opportunity of seeing himself as others saw him. As a result of jumping in where angels feared to tread, I found myself suddenly without a job.

"Soon afterward I met Alf Hampton, an actor, who was projecting a tour of the Long Island Summer resorts, and I was engaged to join a company at the sum of $7.50 per week. Hampton had become impressed with my ability, partly through observation, but principally through the adulation bestowed upon me by several of my usher acquaintances, and he had such confidence in me that he proposed we give a burlesque of 'The Heart of Maryland,' in which I was to play John Kelerd opposite him as Mrs. Leslie Carter.

"Well, we started out, with Babylon, N. Y., on [illegible] arriving in town I was told that the first thing I was expected to do was to distribute bills. I stowed a bundle of them under my arm and scattered them over the village, much in doubt as to whether this menial service was befitting to a first-class actor as I now considered myself. When I reached the theatre that evening I was informed that I must take the tickets at the door until time to go on.

"Well this tended to place me in such a state of nerves that when it came time for my appearance before the footlights I gave so creditable a performance that I netted just fifty cents for my evening's work, actual railroad fare from Babylon back to New York."

PLAYS PART THIRTY YEARS.

Denman Thompson One of the Wealthiest of His Profession.

[illegible] years ago Denman Thompson [illegible] vaudeville once [illegible] his career as Joshua Whitcomb. The character he later assumed in "The Old Homestead," and in which he is still playing in vaudeville. Although Mr. Thompson has appeared before as many people as any living star, and is considered among the "well fixed" members of the theatrical profession, there was once a time when every penny counted with him. In his early days he was a member of a stock company in Toronto where his salary did not exceed $25 per week and there were weeks when even this amount did not materialize. When Thompson left Toronto he is quoted as having said, with a good deal of feeling: "Blessed is the man who is in debt, for he hath obtained something out of the world which the world can never get out of him." His success at dodging the accumulation of wealth up to that time had been marvelous, but in later years when he returned to his old town with a veritable gold mine in "The Old Homestead," he called a convention of his creditors and they were paid in full. Many peculiarities are credited to Denman Thompson. He is said to have never worn a flower during his career. He is a Christian Scientist, claiming that the belief keeps a man cheerful when his infirmities are coming on.

JERSEY LILY TO REAPPEAR.

Mrs. Langtry to Have Part in a Drury Lane Drama.

Many memories are revived by the announcement that Mrs. Langtry is to have a part in the "Dreadnought" drama at Drury Lane, for the "Jersey Lily," as she was known in the days when her beautiful figure brought much profit to the photographers, has a stage career of nearly thirty years. She made her first appearance with the Bancrofts at the Haymarket in 1881 when she had just celebrated her twenty-ninth birthday, as Kate Hardcastle in "She Stoops to Conquer." It was in America, of which country she has been a naturalized citizen for more than twenty years, that Mrs. Langtry undertook the most extended and prosperous tour of her career. Relying largely on "Peril" she made a fortune of more than $300,000 in six years. When she returned to England she opened first the St. James's and then the Princess's Theatres, under her own management, but illness in the first, and unsuccessful plays in the second instance, brought each to a speedy termination. Her last attempt at management was when she rebuilt and sumptuously decorated the Imperial Theatre, but here again success was wooed in vain, and her last appearance in London was in the Spring of 1903, when she appeared at the Haymarket as Mrs. Arundel in "A Fearful Joy," and showed exceptional ability in a poor play.

At Last! the Out-Door Prima Donna Is Found!

Mme. Carmen Melis, the out-door prima donna

CARMEN MELIS

Here's an Italian Singer Who Doesn't Fear Drafts and the Rain.

When Garibaldi entered Rome at the head of his victorious troops a little girl, carrying a bouquet of flowers, came to greet him at the head of Via di Leone, but as the grizzled soldier was about to pass her by without noticing the child's piercing wail arrested his attention. He dismounted, picked the little girl up and 'midst the delightful shouts of the populace he kissed her as her arms wound themselves about his neck.

The little girl was the mother of Carmen Melis, the new prima donna of the Boston Opera Company, and the singer declares that this bit of family history is dearer to her than the records of her many triumphs in this country and abroad.

It will be the first time that Boston will have the opportunity of hearing Carmen Melis when she appears this coming season at the Opera House, and those Bostonians who are fond of outdoor life will be certain to meet the prima donna, for whom Winter colds hold no terrors and who declares that she finds joy in physical exercise, no matter what the weather.

Wrong Idea About Tigers.

"For some reason people believe that a singer, no matter what her size, is a frail thing that must be tenderly pampered, defended against colds, who cannot put her nose outside of the door without having costly wraps thrown all over her, who spends most of her days in trembling lest her physique being will be endangered by some change in the atmosphere," says the charming singer.

"I never entertain any fears of that kind and I am certain a good walk is the best of [illegible] a game of tennis is a [illegible] rowboat holds the secret of [illegible] and that a swim in the sea is the greatest rejuvenator. I was brought up to love outdoor sports, and when I think of the saving in doctor's bills that I am enabled to make, thanks to this circumstance, I am really moved to pity the physicians when I think what would become of them should the rest of mankind be educated just like I was.

"There are also people who think that true womanhood and her love of athletics are incompatible. I believe they express their idea in the phrase 'mannish woman,' and I hope nobody will ever accuse me of being that.

Knows No Beauty Secrets.

"I never learned any beauty recipes, but at the risk of [illegible] conceited I am willing to declare that nature comes pretty near being the leader of beauty doctors. Of course, there is always the danger of overdoing things, but this applies to almost everything in life.

"I love to walk around barefooted, and when I get to my dear Livorno in the Summer I'll tell you a secret, that I am still able to wear a No. 3 shoe comfortably. I confess to handling a pair of oars whenever I have the opportunity, yet No. 5½ gloves do not make my hands feel cramped, and as I boast of a fairly good muscle I honestly believe that I could learn boxing. I detest mannish clothes, and I just dote on visiting my dressmaker.

"Oh, my love of sports does not kill all my feminine instincts, and there is an unholy feeling of triumph in my heart whenever I secure a hat that makes other women stare with envy. You see women of the opera are very much like every other woman. Personally, the moment I discard my stage clothes I just plunge into ordinary living, five minutes after I have the theatre I forget the excitement of the performance and I will discuss the problem of dress with much more pleasure than the news of a new musical work of wonderous power. I hate being given advice and I never give advice, but I will permit myself this much—the less a woman worries about her beauty the sooner she may secure it."

AUGUSTUS BARRATT TO LEAD ORCHESTRA

Augustus Barratt, for years chief musical director for the Henry W. Savage productions and composer of the music of "The Girl and the Drummer," the sparkling musical comedy which William A. Brady, Ltd., presents at the Majestic Theatre for two weeks beginning to-morrow evening, will conduct the orchestra in person during the stay of "The Girl and the Drummer" in Boston.

Reports from Chicago, where the musical comedy ended a ten weeks' run last night, give promise of an unusually tuneful score and interest is heightened by reason of Mr. Barratt's personal leadership of the orchestra of thirty musicians.

SHE'S MRS. MATTHEWS.

Delightful "French Girl" in Reality Is English Matron.

The majority of the patrons of the Hollis Street Theatre, after witnessing a performance of "Love Among the Lions," are led to believe that the young woman that portrays the role of the lion-tamer's assistant is a daughter of France—so convincing is her delightful Gallic accent. As a matter of fact, Miss May Blayney, the young woman in question, is a daughter of England, and in private life is Mrs. A. E. Matthews, the wife of the young comedian who heads the cast. Miss Blayney was last seen in Boston in the ingenue role of "The Walls of Jericho" with James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering. In London she was the pupil and associate of Charles Hawtrey.

Miss Blayney has the notable distinction of having managed a big farm in South Africa during the Boer war—a farm that was run solely for the benefit of the British army, for all its products went to the army hospitals. Returning to London after peace was declared, she appeared with distinction in "The Little Damozel," and took part in the last "command" performance before King Edward VII., at Sandringham.

LAUDS ENGLISH MAIDS.

Stella Mayhew Says That Theatre Dressers Are Not Grafters.

Stella Mayhew says there is one thing she discovered in England last Summer, and that is that the maids or "dressers" at the theatres there are really human and like occasionally to do things for people out of goodness of heart without eternally looking for graft, as they do in this country. "I paid my dresser in London a salary of ten shillings a week while I was there," said Miss Mayhew, "and when I left I gave her a crown. She was so overcome she fell on my neck weeping and insisted upon kissing me good-by. She also begged me to bring her to America because I had been so good to her. These women are very poorly paid in London and this girl told me that she had waited on two chorus girls in one of the big music halls there for a whole week and when they went away they had given her 'thru-pence' each. Imagine it! What would happen in New York if I offered a maid three pennies? She would have me arrested."

LOCKE A SHY AUTHOR.

Just Like His Hero in the Story of "Septimus."

William J. Locke is not unlike the hero of his story "Septimus" in his shyness and preference for a life away from the madding throng. He spends his time partly in London and partly in a little Thames side house in Berkshire, where "Septimus" and his latest story, "Simon, the Jester," were written.

It is said that when Harrison Grey Fiske went to London to see Mr. Locke in reference to the dramatization of "Septimus" the novelist made an appointment with him for luncheon at one of the clubs. Mr. Fiske naturally felt a delicacy in first broaching the subject and waited for the author to do so. He waited in vain, however, and at length had to break the ice himself in a rather abrupt way. Locke's own peculiarities of character appear to be manifest in the characters he portrays in his stories.

NEW PARIS COMEDY WASTED IN GOTHAM

That Is to Say "Decorating Clementine" Not Properly Appreciated.

REAL HUMOR, SAYS DALE

Even Explanations of Humor Fail With Audiences at the Lyceum.

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—It would be ten thousand pities if such a delightfully witty, effervescent and frothy little comedy as "Decorating Clementine," at the Lyceum Theatre, should die of inanition in New York. As "Le Bois Sacre" at the Varieties in Paris, its success made "Chantecler" look like thirty cents. I saw it, and absolutely revelled, for it was interpreted by five of the very finest comedy actors that could be scooped in. At the Lyceum Theatre I saw it, and revelled again. It was well acted for the most part; it was surprisingly well acted when you remember that its geography was absolutely different. And yet some of it didn't seem to get over the footlights.

Somehow or other, "Decorating Clementine" in New York seemed astoundingly French. The struggle of the "feminine lady novelist" for the coveted decoration of the Legion of Honor appeared to count for so little with an audience to whom the Legion of Honor is somewhat cryptic. It can, of course, be explained—it was explained—but it didn't seem to be understood.

Fine Sarcasm Wasted.

All the fine sarcasm piled into the scene "at the Ministry of Fine Arts," at which Paris roared—and it was really gorgeous—was wasted. The idea of the Minister, who was always so busy and who was perpetually oppressed by his efforts to discover the names of the nine muses—which nobody knew—set all Paris a-giggle. It did not set New York a-giggle. Often I think that New York is too busy to laugh at anything that isn't New York. Paris won't laugh at anything that isn't Paris. London despises anything that isn't London. Very big cities are haughty and "insular." It is a pity, but it is ever that.

Yet to the "jaded theatre-goer" who is a personality just like the "tired business man" this "Decorating Clementine" is a cocktail. It is so full of good things. Its humor is so jolly. To be sure, it is devoid of slang which seems to account for a lot nowadays, and at times it is necessary to properify certain situations. To be sure, its very idea is foreign to us and some of its touches elude us, but just the same, "Decorating Clementine" is immensely clever. All clever people will think so. Maybe there will not be enough clever people. And those who are not clever can always justify themselves by the idea that "Decorating Clementine" asks really nice people to assume certain really disagreeable things. As a matter of fact, though, it is not necessary to pulverize this silly little comedy by any such justification.

Yes, She Adores Her Husband.

Clementine longs to be "decorated." She writes the "big sellers." Oddly enough, she adores her husband. That does sound so quaint in a French play. She loves him because he is so healthy, and every time she kisses him she feels as though she was eating a hunk of bread-and-butter with jam on it. But she is jealous of another author, also apparently a woman, who is to be decorated.

So she goes to see the Minister of Fine Arts to plead her cause. He kisses her, and she slaps his face. She decides that her cause is lost, for she is a perfectly good lady. Later the fact occurs to her that if her husband should make love to the minister's wife, who is very susceptible, the influence of that susceptible creature may secure the coveted decoration.

That's all there is to the plot. The character of the minister's wife is gorgeous, according to the French idea. When she sees a man who appeals to her she is so paralyzed that she lets everything she is carrying in her hand drop and falls in a semi-faint. She cannot help it, poor thing, and there is no cure. The first time she sees Clementine's husband she utters a piercing little shriek and falls rigid in a chair.

Then there is the Russian Count. He is a philanthropist. He has conceived a most philanthropic idea. He follows women who have grown too old and homely to be followed. He wants to bring joy into their lives. "They are so happy, poor things," he says, "when I follow 'em. And it is so inexpensive."

Who but a Frenchman could think of that? Who but an old and homely woman could fail to appreciate it? Isn't it a much kinder sort of humor than some which makes a butt of an old woman, who has to be insulted by the entire cast?

Problem for New York.

Yet the fact remains. "Decorating Clementine" is a problem as far as New York is concerned. The five fine actors that made it in Paris were not duplicated here. Little Miss Doris Keane in a difficult, fantastic part was really admirable. She was a delicious little feline sphinx. I didn't think she could have done it. It was most difficult, and most un-American. Miss Keane succeeded and smashed geography into splinters. The dance with Huntley Wright in the last act, however, fell flat. It was badly done, and it should have caught the house, for a dance at least is intelligible everywhere.

Miss Hattie Williams gave a straight and agreeable performance of the ambitious novelist. Perhaps Miss Marie Tempest might have given it the touches that Jeanne Granier gave it in Paris. But Miss Williams was most conscientious, and kept into the role for all it was worth, without finesse. G. P. Huntley was excellent as the Russian. He could not conceivably have done better. He was in English what Max Dearly was in French. Louis Massen, Richie Ling and Ernest Lawford were all good. It was really a capital cast for such a very French play.

The feminine novelist who was competing with Clementine for the decoration turned out to be a man writing under a feminine nom de plume. The entrance of this person to the minister's office was the climax of Act II. The minister, preparing for a conquest, is astounded to find that madame is a man. This was awfully funny in Paris. Mr. Frohman had a man who wasn't funny, and who looked like a hayseed. A little, squat, dump, vaudeville person in his place might make this climax amusing.

QUIT GRAND OPERA.

Ethel Cadman Now a Member of "The Arcadians" Company.

While the ranks of musical comedy are full of young people with ambitions toward the grand opera stage, "The Arcadians" can boast of one member who deserted grand opera for musical comedy. Ethel Cadman, the Sombra of "The Arcadians" at the Colonial Theatre was a chorus girl in the Moody Manners English Grand Opera Company five years ago, but a year later was singing prima donna roles in "Carmen," "Faust," "Traviata" and other classics. It was George Edwardes who tempted her from the grand opera stage with the offer of the role of Natalie in "The Merry Widow" and later as the Princess in "The Waltz Dream."

Charles Frohman saw her there and arranged for her release for a visit to America in order to create here the role of Sombra in "The Arcadians," a role that calls for not only a grand opera voice, but also for beauty of face and form and a superlative grace.

Miss Cadman is a graduate of the Guildhall School of Music in London, where she enjoyed the special tutelage of Professor Ernest Ford, a friend and associate of Sir Arthur Sullivan.

SOCIETY YIELDS TO CALL OF AUTUMN TO THE CRIMSON HILLS

Now Seek Rest to Prepare for Swirl of Coming Season; Grand Opera Again to Be Dominating Note; Vincent Girl's Wedding.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

WHEN October's "bright blue weather" beckons, where are they who can resist?

Not in the ranks of Boston society surely, for when the crimsoning hills are calling through the quickly passing Autumn days even its most ardent devotees throw petty conventions to the winds and flock to the world o' the woods for rest after the enervating Summer and to prepare for the swirl of the coming season.

And such a season as it promises to be!

The woman who has no music in her soul will fare badly in the world of fashion this year unless she can feign an interest she does not feel, for again grand opera is to be the dominating note, and again the great song-birds of earth are winging their way to the Hub that the Hub's elect may have of earth's best in the way of musical offerings. Incident to all this, dinner hostesses are planning brilliant dinner parties to be followed by opera, rather than bridge and lively luncheons, and charming little suppers are also to be accessories. But while all this is somewhat distant as yet, brides and their happy affairs are just now holding first place in society's attention.

October is evidently growing in favor as a bridal month and this year has more weddings to its credit than did the favored month of June. The initial wedding of the month was that yesterday of Miss Anna Mills, second daughter of Mrs. Arthur Mills of Irving street, Brookline, and John Whitman, 3d of the same suburb. The ceremony, which was one of the most brilliant of the Autumn, took place in the First Parish Church at 12 o'clock, and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's mother.

The bride, who was regal in her white satin robes, being tall, slender and graceful, with handsome brunette coloring, is one of the most popular and talented girls in the Vincent Club set, and any number of her clubmates were on hand to wish her joy.

Her group of attendants was particularly attractive, and included pretty Mary Whitman as maid of honor, while the quartet of bridesmaids was made up of Miss Katherine Higginson, daughter of the Frederick Higginsons of Brookline; Sarah Bliss, Janet Ritchie and Dorothy Coburn.

Lucius M. Thornton of Brooklyn, N. Y., was best man, and the ushers were Hendricks H. Whitman, Arnold Whitman, Charles A. Vinal, Charles F. Salvey and Bruce L. Sherarton. At the conclusion of their bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. Whitman are to reside on High street, Brookline.

VINCENT CLUB GIRLS BRIDES OF AUTUMN

Another Vincent Club girl to become a bride yesterday was Miss Anita Clark, daughter of Mrs. Homer B. Richardson, whose marriage to John Varney Woodard of Bangor, Me., son of Mrs. Charles F. Woodard, took place in St. Paul's Church, Dedham. The ceremony, which was at 1.30, was performed by the Rev. Francis L. Whittemore.

The bride's sister, Miss M. Frances Clark, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Jessie Hazard of New York, Miss Florence Burton of Cedarhurst, L. I.; Miss Cornelia B. Hoyt of New York, Miss Eleanor Quincy and Miss Ruth Nickerson, both of Dedham, and Miss Elizabeth Jackson of Boston.

Glidden Osborne of Chicago was best man, and the ushers were William C. Gilbert of Cincinnati, Louis Starr, Jr., and John J. Higginson, Jr., both of New York; Henry E. Widener of Philadelphia and William Minot and Benjamin Loring Young, both of Boston.

A small breakfast at "Midwood," the home of the bride's mother, followed the ceremony.

Still another wedding yesterday of prime interest to the fashionables was that of Paymaster Littlefield, U. S. N., and Mrs. Kirk B. Armour of Kansas City, who has for several summers occupied a house at Magnolia and figured prominently in North Shore society. Mr. Littlefield, who has recently resigned his position in the navy and who spends his Summers at Marblehead Neck, is a well-known clubman. He is prominently identified with the Country, Eastern and New York Yacht Clubs, Chevy Chase and Metropolitan of Washington and many more. The wedding was a quiet affair yesterday at the home of Mrs. Armour in Magnolia.

October 6 is the date set for the wedding of Miss Virginia Belle Gammon of Marlboro street, daughter of Mrs. Frank Royal Gammon, and George Robert Armstrong of Beacon street, Brookline. The ceremony is to take place at the country home of the bride's parents at Centre Harbor, N. H., and will be followed by a large and brilliant reception.

Another wedding of Brookline interest, on the same day, will be that of Miss Irene J. Brown, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Brown of Beacon street, Brookline, and Edward A. Watson, which is to take place in the First Parish Church. At the conclusion of their wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Watson are to reside at Wellesley Hills.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wheeler Darling of Kilsyth road Brookline, have issued cards for the wedding reception following the marriage of their daughter, Miss Clara Irene Darling, and Clarence Cecil Horne, on Monday evening, October 3.

FISH-CUTLER WEDDING IN OCTOBER.

The marriage of Miss Rosalind Fish and John W. Cutler of Brookline, which is to take place in St. Philip's Church, Garrison, N. Y., on October 8, will without doubt be one of the most brilliant matrimonial events of the year. Miss Fish is the second daughter of Hamilton Fish of New York, while Mr. Cutler is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Cutler of Brookline. Mr. Cutler, who is a Harvard, '00, man, was one of the foremost athletic men of his class. Eliot Cutler, who is to be his brother's best man, was also a leader in sports and graduated the same year as his brother.

Miss Fish, who is one of the leading belles of her set, is to have ten most attractive attendants at her wedding. They will include Miss Eleanor Mortimer, Miss Dagmar Wetmore, Miss Hortense Howland, Miss Jessie Thompson, Miss Helena Fish, a sister, Miss Edith Deacon, who is to wed George Lee Peabody of Boston in January, Miss Helen Coster, Miss Elizabeth Cutting, Miss Janetta Alexander and Miss Katherine Tweed, who has figured so conspicuously in the smart doings of the younger set on the North Shore the past Summer. The wedding reception will be given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish of New York, an aunt of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Chickering, who spent the Summer in Falmouth, will be the guests of Mrs. William A. Russell (Frances A. Hall), Mrs. Chickering's mother, until the 1st of November, when they will return to their home in New York. Mrs. Chickering is a sister of the late William A. Russell, who married Mary Head, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head.

The Russell S. Codmans came up to town the first of the week from the small Clark cottage on Blossom Lane, Manchester, to their town home on Marlboro street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Wheeler (Mary [illegible]) have returned to town for the Winter and are occupying their house at 55 West Cedar street.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Morse closed their North Shore season the past week and returned to their town house on Fairfield street.

Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Storer and their daughter, Miss Muriel Storer, have returned from their Summer home at Islesboro, Maine, and are at their Brimmer street house for the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden of Chestnut Hill have closed their Manchester cottage for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Wheelwright will spend the Winter in town and will occupy the house at 135 Mt. Vernon street, which they had last year.

The many Boston friends of Samuel W. Bates, who, prior to his recent marriage abroad, was considered one of our most desirable bachelor clubmen, are delighted at his decision to return from Europe and make his home in Boston. He has taken a large apartment on Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. Bates was previous to her recent marriage, that interesting young widow, Mrs. Annie W. Cramer, and the wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schelling in Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Livingston Grandin of Commonwealth avenue, who sailed for Europe in May and have since been traveling extensively on the other side, were recently in Paris, where they were registered at the Hotel Majestic. They have previously visited Bruges, Tours and other interesting cities. The Grandins will return to Boston the last of the month.

Mrs. Poultney Bigelow is planning to come over from England in November and spend the Winter with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis A. Clark (Evelyn Bigelow) at their new house in Fifth avenue, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Clark are still at their Summer place at Newport, but will return to their town house about the middle of the month.

A. H. Latham and Mrs. Latham, who have been spending some time in England and Switzerland, have returned to their home in Brookline.

Among the past week's arrivals from abroad were the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith and [illegible] Smith and their daughter, Miss Margaret Smith, who have been abroad all [illegible] and who have gone on to their Washington for the season.

[illegible] Mrs. Paul Burdett (Mildred [illegible]), who have been enjoying their honeymoon abroad, are to return the coming week. They will make their future [home] in Brookline, where they will figure [conspicu]ously in the smart affairs of the [younger] married set.

[An]other young married couple who will [figure con]spicuously in the affairs of [the] season are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph [illegible] (Ruth Pitkin), who have returned from their tour of the Continent. [In] London the Thayers were met by [illegible], who traveled with them during the [summe]r but who remains abroad to continue his study of architecture in Paris.

Lieutenant Bruce Cotton and Mrs. Cotton, who were married in England last August and who have since been motoring [on] the Continent, arrived home the past week. They went immediately to Mrs. Cotton's estate, Clynburn house, near Baltimore. Mrs. Cotton, who when Mrs. Jesse Tyson, was well known in Boston society, [i]s considered one of America's most beautiful women.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage and their pretty young daughter, Miss Elizabeth Burrage, who recently arrived from their Summer abroad, have opened their town house on Commonwealth avenue for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Robb de Peyster Tytus, who are still at their country estate, where they have entertained extensively throughout the Summer, are planning to sail for Europe later in the season to spend the Winter abroad.

Count and Countess Moltke (nee Thayer) who spent the Summer abroad, have returned and are guests in Newport of the Countess' father, Nathaniel Thayer, who is still quite ill.

UNCONVENTIONAL PHOTOGRAPH OF MISS ESTHER SLATER

MISS ESTHER SLATER.

One of the prettiest and most winsome of Boston's buds of the near future is Miss Esther Slater, who has just returned with her mother, Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater, from a Summer's sojourn in Europe. Miss Slater, beside bearing the distinction of being one of the prettiest of the younger girls of the smart set, is one of the wealthiest, and upon the occasion of her formal presentation her debut will, no doubt, be most brilliant. The Slaters last Winter occupied apartments at the Puritan. They own a beautiful estate, "Pine Bank," at Readville, where they will remain throughout the Autumn.

JUNIA RUSSELL WILL BE A BRIDE OCT. 26

AN important bridal on the 26th will be that of winsome Junia Russell and Harold Francis Mason, which is to be solemnized in Christ Church, Cambridge.

Miss Converse Soon To Be Derby's Bride

IT is said that the marriage of Miss Olga Converse and Augustine Derby of Boston, who recently announced their engagement, is to take place in the near future, possibly in November.

Miss Converse is one of the most interesting and talented girls in Washington society. The youngest of the three daughters of Mrs. Converse and the late Rear Admiral George A. Converse, she became a belle as soon as she came out. Miss Converse is as dainty as a fairy and is hardly larger than the "little people" of one's nursery tales. She is distinctly chic, and her frocks and hats reveal the fact that she understands thoroughly her own particular type. A bit foreign in style is tiny Miss Olga, with brilliant dark eyes, waving dark hair and the clear, pure pallor over which the French rave.

Miss Olga is a genius, too, although she declares that the divine spark in her case rests rather in her feet than in her head, for she is acknowledged to be not only Washington society's cleverest danseuse, but she is also one of the finest dancers in the country. Few are the girls in society who can by appearing one night in an amateur show, with its ranks recruited only from the belles and beaux of society, take by storm an entire public and cause canny theatrical managers to send representatives of offers tashrdlu tap tau taptantawo tatives with offers of engagements at big figures. That, however, is what talented Miss Converse did.

Two years ago, when the Washington society folk decided to give a play for charity, Miss Converse, then a debutante, was chosen to give a dance. When it came to rehearsals the rest of the cast stood about in the wings and gasped with admiration and awe when Miss Olga went through her dance. They recognized that the youngest daughter of the Converses possessed uncommon talent, and they kept "padding" her part until [illegible] it came to [illegible] performance Miss Converse was [illegible] the whole show.

Miss Converse is a talented [illegible] as well [illegible] dancer [illegible] of the [illegible] girls in society.

Mr. and Mrs. John Frank Morrill of Roxbury have announced the engagement of their daughter, Caroline Edna, to Taunton Edwin Forrest of New York City, Harvard '05. Miss Morrill is a prominent member of the Brae Burn Golf Club and is one of the most enthusiastic members of the Women's Golf Association of [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. and Mrs. William [illegible] have been closed for the season and they are now at their apartment at the Hotel Essex, with their daughter, Miss Lillian.

Miss De Acosta to Be November Bride

NOVEMBER has been decided upon for the wedding of Miss Angela de Acosta, whose engagement has just been announced to William G. Sewall. Mr. Sewall, who is the only unmarried son of Mrs. William B. Sewall of Commonwealth avenue, has of late years made his home abroad but since [illegible] with his mother. He is a graduate of Harvard in the class of '97 and belongs to many of the leading [illegible] clubs, including the Puritan and [illegible] He is also a member of the Harvard Club of New York. His older brother, [illegible] Sewall of [illegible] street, married [illegible] Hewitt of New York and they are prominent members of the fashionable [illegible] colony. Harold Sewall, another brother, married [illegible] Evans, daughter [illegible] Beverly [illegible] home [illegible] Bar Harbor. Miss de Acosta is a sister of Mrs. Andrew Roosevelt of Brookline, who has been so cordially welcomed into the exclusive fold of Boston's inner circle. Her other sisters are Mrs. Philip Lydig and Mrs. Oren Root. After the wedding the young couple will [illegible] their home in London. Mr. Sewall's business interests being centred there. Miss de Acosta has just returned with her mother and sister from [illegible] on the continent, during part of which Mr Sewall was a member of the party.

Another wedding in the Cutler family besides that of John Cutler and Miss Rosa [illegible] Fish will be that of Donald Cutler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Cutler of Upland road, Brookline, and Miss Margaret [illegible]onberger of St. Louis. The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac [illegible]berger of Westmore [illegible] and [illegible] her marriage was to se[illegible] Her father is a member of all the smart St. Louis clubs, including the University, Noonday and Country, and is a graduate of Princeton, '77.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Marie Winthrop, the only daughter of the late Buchanan Winthrop and the sister of Captain Henry Rogers Winthrop, to Morris W. Kellogg of New York. Miss Winthrop is a member of the old Massachusetts family of that name and is a direct descendant of the famous colonial Governor.

Epes Turner Goes to Altar in St. Paul

WORD has reached Boston of the marriage in St. Paul, Minn., of Miss Katherine Ames, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Charles W. Ames of that city, and Epes Turner, formerly of Cambridge, Harvard '05, son of Mrs. Samuel Epes Turner of Cambridge. The ceremony, which was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives, took place at the Unity Church, the Rev. John B. Reed officiating. Miss Margaret Ames, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Alice and Elizabeth Ames, sisters of the bride, Miss Edith Winter of Minneapolis, her cousin, Miss Mary Squires of St. Paul, Miss Clara Turner of Cambridge, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Lydia Bush Brown of Newburg, N. Y. Howard Turner of Cambridge, the bridegroom's brother, was best man, and the ushers were Leslie Ames, brother of the bride, Holyoke Davis, Moncrief Cochran, William Graves, all of St. Paul, William Schoyer of Pittsburg and Edwin Brown of Minneapolis. A reception for five hundred guests followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Turner will be at home after November 1st at 11 Summit Court, St. Paul.

On Wednesday evening, Charles W. Whitmore, a graduate of Technology in the class of 1908, son of Mr and Mrs. Swanton Whitmore of Cambridge, was married in Saco, Me., to Miss Mary A. Bryant, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Frank A. Bryant. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents and was performed by the Rev. William F. Skerrye of Templeton, Mass. The bride was attended by Miss Bertha N. Whitmore, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, and Mrs. Charles E. Cleaves, Miss Flora Milliken, Miss Florence Richardson of Andover and Miss Sally Pratt, also of Andover, as bridesmaids. Roy S. Whitmore, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Charles A. Hardy of Boston, Earl L. Bryant of North Brookfield, Orrin S. Lyon of Malden and Charles E. Cleaves. Mr. and Mrs. Whitmore will make their home in Cambridge.

Worcester Wedding Interests Social Set

OF considerable interest to Boston was the wedding Thursday in All Saints' Church, Worcester, of Miss Marion Olive Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hudson Willard [illegible] street, and Lieutenant Owen Riggs Meredith of the Twenty-seventh [illegible] The Rev. Arthur [illegible] Church [illegible] Lawrence, a cousin of the bride, officiated, and the ceremony [illegible] o'clock was followed by a reception in the Willard residence. The Rev. Thomas F. Davies, rector of the church, was in the sanctuary during the marriage.

Mr. Willard presented the bride for the ceremony. She wore a gown of white duchess satin cut with long court train. The gown was elaborately trimmed with duchess and point lace that was worn by the bride's grandmother on the latter's wedding gown, and also on the bride's mother's wedding gown.

Mrs. Hueston Burke of Brookline was matron of honor, and Miss Frances M. Syme, maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Eugenie W. Root of Detroit and Miss Olive Parks Gavin of Newark.

The matron and maid of honor wore gowns of gold crepe meteor in semi-empire mode and garnitured with bands of gold embroidered net studded with gold and pearl ornaments. Lieutenant Meredith and his brother officers wore full military dress uniforms.

Lieutenant Robert E. O'Brien of Fort S[illegible], a classmate of the groom at West Point, was best man.

Lieutenant Meredith and his bride left on their wedding journey after the reception [illegible] the bridegroom's [illegible] before going to the White Mountains for their wedding journey. Lieutenant and Mrs. Meredith will attend the marriage of the bride's brother, Charles Turner Willard, and Miss Olive Parks Gavin, which will take place in Newark Wednesday.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Meredith of O'Neil, Neb., and was graduated from West Point in the class of '08. He is now stationed at Fort Sheridan.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jacoby (Alice Hovey), who were married last June in the Church of Our Saviour at Longwood, are planning to spend the Winter in town and have taken an apartment on Boylston street. Mrs. Jacoby is a cousin of Mrs. Robert Amory (Leonora Cobb), whose marriage to Mr. Amory took place in New York a couple of weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Vincent Kidder (Madelin Appleton), who are still on their wedding trip, will soon go to Santa Fe, N. M., for the Winter, where Mr. Kidder is to represent the scientific department of Harvard University. The Kidders were married in Ipswich September 6.

Among recent arrivals in town are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Shuman, who returned last week to their Beacon street house, after spending the Summer with their two little sons at their Summer cottage at Marblehead Neck.

The John Endicott Peabodys will spend the Winter in Cambridge as they did last year. Mr. Peabody is planning to build a new home in Longwood.

SEASON'S PLANS OF SOCIAL SET ARE MATURING

While Some Wait for Last Vestige of Summer in the Country, Others Are Settling in Their Winter Homes.

MANY of our fashionables are still unsettled regarding their Winter plans and are as yet wandering about in search of [illegible]. Many of these same wanderers have, however, made definite plans for the Winter and are [illegible] now beginning to make them known. [illegible] of the newly-weds are of most interest.

That interesting young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner, Jr. (Elizabeth Denny), who were married a fortnight ago in the Church of the Holy Redeemer at Chestnut Hill, are planning to reside in [illegible] after their return from the wedding [illegible]. Mr. Gardiner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner, who spent the Summer at Gardiner, Me., have returned to their house on Beacon street for the Winter.

Another interesting young Miss whose name has recently been added to the list of prospective buds is Miss Julia Newbold, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Newbold, and a granddaughter of Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge of Dartmouth street, who will make her first bow to the [illegible] world of fashion in New York. Miss Newbold is a niece of Mrs. Lucius M. Sargent of Dartmouth street and of Mrs. Frederick R. Sears, Jr., and is a cousin of Miss Eleonora Sears. Her mother, before her marriage, was Miss Sarah Coolidge, daughter of Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Aldrich (Dorothea Davenport), who were married in Trinity Church last March, are to reside in New York this Winter and have taken a house at No. 31 West Twelfth street. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Davenport, Mrs. Aldrich's parents, who have been at Marblehead for the Summer, are to return to town October 15, when they will open their house on Beacon street for the Winter.

The Carl A. de Gersdorffs have deserted Stockbridge for Hot Springs, Va., where they arrived yesterday. They will shortly open their New York house.

On Thursday Mrs. Elisha Dyer and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore entertained dinner guests at their Newport homes.

Debutantes Plan Bows to Society

THERE is much interest centering about the debutantes of the coming season who are now so busy with plans for their gay festivities and the dates and functions for their initial bows are gradually being made known. An interesting young girl who will be introduced at a ball at the Somerset early in December is Miss Katherine Ayer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Commonwealth avenue and the North Shore. Miss Ayer was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Miss Beatrice Banning Ayer, when she married Lieutenant George Smith Patton, Jr., U. S. A., in May at the Ayer Summer residence, "Avalon," at Pride's Crossing.

Mrs. Oscar Iasigi gave her farewell dinner at Clovercroft on Friday evening. She will close the Lenox place October 10, and is sailing on the 15th for a Winter sojourn on the continent.

The Misses Isabella, Elizabeth and Mary Stotter and their guest, Miss Bessie Hanlon, have left Lenox for New York, where they will attend the Vanderbilt cup races.

A number of improvements are to be made on the R. M. Cushing estate at Newport, recently purchased by F. Lathrop Ames of North Easton.

Mrs. John Bolt, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Baty Blake at Pine Needles, Lenox, has returned to her home in Brookline.

GAY SEASON FOR BOSTON DEBUTANTES

SO many of our debutantes are preparing for the fray of the endlessly gay season ahead that they are now quite the most pre-occupied young folks in the country. There are so many details to be attended to, the [illegible] and wraps for the various occasions and the thousand and one other things that they haven't time to stop for any of the minor hospitalities which are taking place daily.

Miss Edith Prescott's season promises to be quite the gayest of any, as she is so young, pretty and winsome, and besides has so many relatives with unlimited wealth at their command to do her honor that her success is already assured.

Miss Prescott is the daughter of Mrs. Linzee Prescott of Gloucester street, and is a favorite niece of Mrs. Roger Wolcott. She has had the advantage of much foreign travel, and is quite a linguist. She has recently been in Paris with her mother and her friends have it that she was there for the express purpose of selecting her gowns for the coming season.

HIRAM CARPENTER'S WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS

After 20 Years of Intense Suffering When All Thought He Had but Short Time to Live. Earnestly Prayed to Die. Condition Deplorable Beyond Description.

Tries Cuticura. Eureka! Relief at Once. Stopped Terrible Burning Sensation from Word Go. In Six Weeks Skin Smooth as This Paper.

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with an obstinate skin disease, called by some M. D.'s psoriasis, and others leprosy, commencing on my scalp; and in spite of all I could do, with the help of the most skilful doctors, it slowly but surely extended until a year ago this winter it covered my entire person in the form of dry scales. For the last three years I have been unable to do any labor, and suffering intensely all the time. Every morning there would be nearly a dustpanful of scales taken from the sheet on my bed, some of them half as large as the envelope containing this letter. In the latter part of winter my skin commenced cracking open. I tried everything, almost, that could be thought of, without any relief. The 12th of June I started West, in hopes I could reach the Hot Springs. I reached Detroit and was so low I thought I should have to go to the hospital, but finally got as far as Lansing, Mich., where I had a sister living. One Dr. —— treated me about two weeks, but did me no good. All thought I had but a short time to live. I earnestly prayed to die. Cracked through the skin all over my back, across my ribs, arms, hands, limbs; feet badly swollen, toe-nails came off; finger-nails dead and hard as a bone, hair dead, dry and lifeless as old straw. O my God! how I did suffer.

"My sister, Mrs. E. H. Davis, had a small part of a box of Cuticura in the house. She wouldn't give up; said, "We will try Cuticura." Some was applied on one hand and arm. Eureka! there was relief; stopped the terrible burning sensation from the word go. They immediately got Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment and Soap. I commenced by taking one tablespoonful of Cuticura Resolvent three times a day after meals, had a bath once a day, water about blood heat; used Cuticura Soap freely, applied Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. Result: returned to my home in just six weeks from the time I left, and my skin as smooth as this sheet of paper. Hiram E. Carpenter, Henderson, N.Y."

"We hereby certify that we are acquainted with the aforesaid Hiram E. Carpenter, and know his condition to have been as stated. We believe his statement to be true in every particular." L. B. Simmons & Son, Merchants; G. A. Thompson, Merchant; A. A. Davis, Millard E. Joiner, Merchant; John Carpenter, A. M. Leffingwell, Attorney and Counselor-at-law, all of Henderson, N. Y.

The above remarkable testimonial was written January 19, 1880, and is republished because of the permanency of the cure. Under date of April 22, 1910, Mr. Carpenter wrote from his present home 610 Walnut St., So., Lansing, Mich.: "I have never suffered a return of the psoriasis and although many years have passed I have not forgotten the terrible suffering I endured before using the Cuticura Remedies."

Since this cure was made by the Cuticura Remedies, they have made their way to every part of the civilized world. A 32-page booklet describing humors and affections of the skin will be mailed free to those desiring further information by the Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Boston, U. S. A.

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets—

are the most economical corsets a woman can wear.

Quality

THEY are designed, not only to shape fashionably and comfortably, but they are made to wear well, that is the cloth, whether coutille or batiste, cannot tear. It is especially woven for strength; the double, celluloid-tipped bones cannot rust, break or punch through, or can the eyelets pull out. The metal parts of the Security Rubber Button Hose Supporters are as rust-proof as the metal parts of the corset.

Shaping

THE form, if properly corsetted in a Warner's retains its youthful supple lines. A Warner's through its pliancy and wonderful shaping power models and controls the flesh, supporting the bust, "holding" the waistline.

Try a Warner's—You'll find it equal to whatever wearing strain you may put upon it and you will find it gives you the best figure you ever had.

We stand back of your merchant in these statements. Every Warner's Corset is guaranteed to fit, to wear—not to rust, break or tear.

CHAPTER I.
Tragedy at Dawn

IT had been an all-night affair in the studio of Sam Richardson, in Chelsea, and Richard Jardine, bachelor and sculptor, had decided to walk home through the quiet London streets as the day was breaking.

Jardine felt a bit disgusted with himself. The game was not worth the candle, he thought. He felt that he could not stand the pace as he [illegible] younger days, and that it was f[illegible] him to put in an entire night at studio fun, never mind how good a fellow his friend Richardson was.

Musing as he made his way home, Jardine found himself at Cleopatra's needle, near the Thames. The Surrey side of the river was shrouded in a gray veil of mystery. The sun was beginning to show through the mist, and he stopped to realize himself with the dawn.

Through the mist loomed the vague outlines of factories and wharves, not as distasteful things of the present busy day [illegible] tawny stream, gliding dream castles and a dream city with the imagination of artist and poet.

A Demand for Alms

"A copper, lady, for the love of the blessed saints. Just a copper, lady," he heard a croaking voice mutter, and turning, he beheld an old beggar known as 'Jake, the Duchess,' beseeching alms of a young girl.

The girl's back was turned to him, but her [illegible] that of a gentlewoman. Her [illegible] texture which tells of [illegible] and the charm [illegible] youth. He knew [illegible] must be pretty and he [illegible] her face as [illegible] wondered [illegible] even could have [illegible] of the gro[illegible].

He [illegible] heard her say, "take this. It is all I have."

The voice was fresh and young, but it faltered.

The old beggar woman croaked out benedictions on the young girl and Jardine saw her turn and walk to the stone steps leading to the river.

Saved from Suicide

The sculptor hastened his steps for [illegible] had come to his vision through the mists of the morning, intended to do herself harm. As he neared her [illegible] her shoulders. She gave a little cry and in an [illegible] herself into the water to her death.

Jardine darted to her side and laid a hand gently on one of her arms.

"My dear young lady," he said, simply [illegible]

[illegible] They were shifting in color from a soft grey to a pale green. They made him think of sunlight in the woods and of many things so mysterious and lovely.

"How dare you [illegible]," she stammered. [illegible]

"Why Didn't You Leave Me."

"I think that [illegible]," [illegible] replied, in a voice [illegible] show."

"In my case? What can you know of my case?" The tears came to her eyes. "It was impertinent—cowardly. Why didn't you leave me alone when I had the courage?"

She [illegible] and Jardine put out an arm [illegible] and upholding her.

"We won't [illegible] of that [illegible]," Jardine told her [illegible]. "You are going to let me take care of you and after you are warm and I have had food and drink we will talk. [illegible] won't you?"

"No, no," she protested feebly. "I don't know what I have been saying."

She tried to take her hand from his, but he held it firmly and she seemed finally to realize that a friend in need had come to her.

"Which is the worst crime?" she asked [illegible] "to try to take one's own [illegible] or to [illegible] a man one has never seen before. But thank you, I will go with you. I have not had breakfast, lunch or dinner."

Jardine hailed a cab and gave the address of a quiet restaurant [illegible] Soho.

The Cloud of the Past

"My name is Beatrice Charters," she said when they were seated at a little [illegible] and a glass of wine had brought back the color of life to her cheeks. "I [illegible] tell you."

"My dear child," said Jardine, compassionately, "you have been near death. Don't bother to explain now. Wait until you are strong again."

The poor girl was indeed hungry. She [illegible] of the dishes ordered by the sculptor and finally looked up to him gratefully.

"To-day is my birthday," she said with almost childish solemnity. "And after all I am having a fete of it."

[illegible] Jardine said "what [illegible] you to this [illegible] to end your life."

Her face clouded as if bitter memories had suddenly awakened.

"I come from a convent in Paris," she said. "My father died a poor doctor while I was studying there. The good nuns took care of me and I came out into the world to be a governess."

The Governess and—One Man

"And then what happened?" he asked, as she hesitated.

"I secured a position with a wealthy American woman," she went on. "I loved her little daughter and thought I was doing very well when her son appeared. I should have been an ugly girl. It is not right for governesses to be pretty, is it?"

"You poor child," said Jardine, as he guessed the rest of her story.

"He forced his attentions on me. He was a dissolute man. I despised him." The girl's cheeks were like two flames. "One night when I supposed the family to [illegible] the theatre and I was alone in the house, the man came to the room where I was waiting.

"This happened here in London where the son has charge of the English branch of his rich American father's business. He persecuted me; I fought him off. His mother entered the room and saw her son trying to force his love-making on me. She flew into a rage, blaming me. I was dismissed from her service and with five pounds in my purse tried to find another place. I tried hard. I was conquered. I thought of the river and I went to it."

"Home—and Trust Me"

"The detest[illegible] hound," she heard him mutter between his teeth.

"Why should I bore you with this?" she asked with petulancy in her voice.

"Please look upon me as a friend," Jardine begged her. "All men are not of the stamp of the one who was the cause of driving you into the street and to the river."

"You have been so kind to me," she said, rising and extending her hand. "Now I must go. You will believe me grateful, won't you?"

"Do you think I am going to let you go out into this big city penniless and alone?" he asked gently. "If you do you are mistaken. You are going with me."

"Where?" she stammered.

"Why, home, of course," he told me. "The sun is shining brightly. It is not far away. We shall walk."

"But I cannot do that," she said.

"[illegible] Miss Charters," Jardine told her kindly. "I have thought over this thing carefully. If I had not acted with all the intentions of a friend in the truest sense of the word, it would have been better for you to have been left to drown yourself. Trust me."

CHAPTER II.
Murder of Lewis Stuvessant

FROM the Strand they turned into the little alley making the upper part of Watergate street.

At the end of the street Jardine paused in front of an old-fashioned house, just such an aged, friendly decrepit old mansion as would appeal to the artist wanting space and quiet for his working and living place. Here he occupied two floors, one for his studio and one for his living apartment, and in the same building lived his warmest friend, Dominic Fleury.

As they entered the hall Beatrice drew back. She again pleaded to be allowed to go whither she knew not.

"I did wrong to come," she stammered, blushing. "I thank you ever so much for your kindness, but I must go." She turned and started for the door.

The Door Is Opened

"Come, come," said Jardine. "I have been treating you as a woman when I should have treated you as the child you are. Mrs. McIlwraith, my housekeeper, will take ample care of you. She is a good, motherly soul with a heart of gold and with plenty of wisdom."

Beatrice, at the mention of the woman, abandoned her purpose of running away from the sculptor, and followed him up the stairs to the top floor.

Jardine felt for his keys and found that he had left them in another pocket. He sounded the old brass knocker and the door flew open, showing the smiling face of Mrs. McIlwraith.

"It is a fine way to treat me," began the housekeeper, in good natured scolding, "making me miss that last mass of the [illegible] you don't know that it is Sunday. Oh!"

Mrs. McIlwraith saw that Jardine had brought a young woman with him.

"I beg your pardon," she added. "I did not know that you were going to bring company with you."

Then she leaned over and whispered to Jardine.

"Where?" asked the sculptor.

Mrs. McIlwraith nodded to the door of another room.

There was [illegible] anger look in Jardine's [illegible].

An Old Acquaintance

"Miss Charters," he said, turning to the girl, "[illegible] such a nuisance, but some one is waiting for me in the other room the son of a relative; a distant relative."

"Please don't think of me, Mr. Jardine," Beatrice whispered. "Let me go."

"Don't talk nonsense," he said. "Wait here. I will [illegible] and then we can talk with Mrs. McIlwraith."

Mrs. McIlwraith had already gone down stairs. Jardine left Beatrice standing in the room, a room handsomely decorated and hung with many fine prints and paintings.

Beatrice stood near the centre of the [illegible] the seconds dragged on, an eternity. She heard the sound of a voice in laughter. Her ears took on added keenness. Yes, she knew the voice. She could not be mistaken in that shrill unpleasant sound. Only a man of his type could laugh like that. It was the man who had driven her into the streets.

"My God!" she whispered to herself. "I must get out of here."

She turned and looked about her. There was an open window. She went to it and one glance told her that she could not escape by that way.

A Cry of Fury—and Silence

Again she heard the voice, the voice of Lewis Stuvessant, the man who would have ruined her wantonly, could he have done so, the man who caused her to be cast out of a place where she was earning an honest living.

Her hand suddenly struck one of the little panes of glass in the window and broke it. The glass tinkled to the sill, splashed with blood from a cut in her hand. Something had startled her. She turned quickly.

The laughter of Stuvessant had ceased. Another sound, an indescribable sound, smote her ears, and then came a cry full of fury, short and sharp. She put her hands to her face in her terror.

The cry was not repeated. She could stand the terror no longer. She groped her way to the door and opened it. She staggered into the hall, glancing apprehensively about her. A large, white cat set [illegible] paws in the dim light. She could have cried out with the unearthly horror of it all.

The End of Lewis Stuvessant

There, near the cat, lay the body of a man. It was Lewis Stuvessant, dead with all his unspent millions, as coarse and sensual looking in death as he had been in life. Beside him was a bloody scalpel. His stiff white shirt and his Tuxedo showed that he had been stabbed to the heart.

Beatrice reached down and picked up the weapon of death and then a piercing cry escaped her lips.

Jardine had gone to his apartment on the floor below for a moment. At the sound of the cry he dashed to the hall and up the single flight of stairs. As he entered the upper hall he beheld Beatrice half bending forward, the bloody scalpel in her hand and Stuvessant dead at her feet.

CHAPTER III.
The Veil of Clay

BEATRICE had fainted at the appearance of Jardine.

The sculptor was quick to realize that Stuvessant, the dissolute son of an American cousin, was the man who had been the cause of Beatrice seeking the river.

"What shall I do?" he asked himself. "Why should this tragedy have been played to the end here? What can I do?"

He looked at the living girl and the dead man.

"You poor little fool," he muttered as he picked up Beatrice and placed her on a divan. "It was, perhaps the best thing you could have done—the beast is better dead. But now you are in for it."

He had no reason to believe other than that she had slain Stuvessant and he gave her credit for the deed.

Hiding the Body

His heart swelled with a sudden and intense pity for the poor girl. Then he realized that his own testimony would send her to the gallows in all probability.

He must save her. How?

Jardine's face took on a grim aspect. At any moment some one might enter—one of the men from the other flats or Mrs. McIlwraith.

He locked the hall door.

The hall of the flat was wide and high and he used it as an exhibition room. In one corner was kept a great pile of rolled canvas. He reached down and took the body by the shoulders and began dragging it to the corner.

He had it half way to the hiding place when the knocker set up a most awful clatter. He paused, startled, but in a moment knew that his friend Fleury was on the other side of the door.

"All right, old chap; just a minute," he called.

Then he lifted the body and in a moment had it safely hidden under the dust-covered canvas.

This done, he admitted his friend Fleury.

"You're a very hospitable friend, old chap," drawled Fleury, with just a faint touch of Irish accent. "Where's Stuvessant? You haven't murdered him, have you, for if you haven't, I have a bone to pick with that gentleman."

"Shut up, you ass," commanded Jardine. "Look there." He pointed to the unconscious Beatrice.

"Oh!" exclaimed Fleury. "Who is she? What's up, old man?"

"An old friend of mine," explained Jardine. "I met her by chance to-day, and found her looking so seedy that I brought her here. She fainted, and, of course, Mrs. McIlwraith was not around at the time."

Fleury went to the divan and looked at the girl.

"Poor lass," he said, "she looks mighty bad. Seems as if she hadn't had much to eat. She looks starved and in a very bad way, I think."

"You don't mean that she is going to die?" demanded Jardine.

"Not if I can help her," Fleury retorted. "But see, her hand is cut, cut almost to the bone, and you have some of the blood on your hands."

Fleury looked at his friend, and Jardine felt there was suspicion in his glance.

A Telephone to the Rescue

"Oh, yes," he stammered. "That is so."

He felt a terrible fear creep over him that the body was not entirely hidden by the canvas and that Fleury knew that Stuvessant had been in the studio just before he came.

The whirr of the telephone call gave him sudden relief. He picked up the receiver. Some one had given the wrong number. He saw his chance to disarm suspicion about Stuvessant's absence.

"Yes—so it is you, Stuvessant?" he said into the phone, after the number had been rung off. "What on earth did you mean by going away in that sudden fashion? Oh, I see; certainly."

"Dick!" called Fleury, "is that Stuvessant? Let me talk to him."

"[illegible] can't. He's rung off."

"Where did he call from?" demanded Fleury.

"Some pay station; he did not say which."

The Laughing Satyr

Jardine got a glimpse of his friend's eyes and again thought that suspicion lurked there.

Fleury went to the girl and called attention to the fact that something should be done for her. Mrs. McIlwraith was found and Beatrice was taken to the quarters downstairs. The harder they worked to bring her back to consciousness the less they seemed to accomplish. She lay as if in a trance.

Jardine dared not send her to a hospital. What would she say when she regained the power of speech? The whole tragedy would come out. Her delirium might bring it out. No, she must remain there in his quarters with the watchful housekeeper to nurse her. He sent for a physician.

This course settled on, he found himself face to face with the even more dangerous problem of hiding the body of Stuvessant. It could not lay there many days under the canvas rolls.

In his working studio was a great clay model of a laughing Satyr. The work was nearly finished. Its base was large and, of course, hollow.

The Veil of Clay

Stuvessant, an undersized, effeminate type of man, hardly measured five feet in his shoes. He pondered the problem far into the night and when there was no longer danger of anyone coming to interrupt him, he took a mallet and crashed in one side of the pedestal under the laughing figure. He dragged out the body from the canvas and stowed it in the pedestal.

Jardine moistened his clay and in a few minutes had replaced the pedestal's broken side and the body was [illegible] sealed in a veil of clay.

He looked at his work. It was done skilfully, but from the veil of clay there seemed to come to him a mocking presence, something that would be with him forever, haunting, deriding him and making him suffer in a sweat of fear and agony through many a night as the Satyr grinned down at him.

He had taken on his own shoulders the guilt of another's crime. His action in hiding the body and covering the facts in the murder would prove him guilty if he were ever taxed with the crime. His plight preyed on his mind so that he could not sleep. The physician attending Beatrice had given him a drug to force somnolence.

"Where Is My Son, Lewis?"

After a night of terrible vigil with the Satyr, he threw himself on a divan and fell into a nightmare, the empty drug bottle on a tabouret beside him.

The murdered man pursued him through his dreams, changing from Stuvessant to the Satyr and then back again. He came out of the nightmare with a shock. Some one was in the room. He could almost hear the beat of the other heart. He jumped to his feet in terror.

Magda Stuvessant, his American cousin, and the mother of the dead man, faced him.

"Cousin Richard," she said coldly, "you look as scared as if I were the skeleton that you keep in your closet."

Jardine stammered some commonplace of greeting.

"I suppose a [illegible] in your profession must live fast; you are the color of the yolk of an egg," she commented. "Dissipation doesn't suit you. You had better turn over a new leaf."

He could think of nothing to say as he rose from the divan and fell into a chair.

"Cousin Richard," she said abruptly, explaining the reason for her visit. "I came to inquire about my son Lewis. Something has happened to him. Where is he?"

CHAPTER IV.
The Words of Cain

JARDINE and his rich cousin hated each other. Mrs. Stuvessant disliked him for a number of reasons, the chief being that she knew that he did not like her son, Lewis, and that he could have made life in England very pleasant for her boy. Jardine disliked her because she had the gaucheries of a very rich woman who was new to English society.

No other person on earth could have so disturbed Jardine by her presence at such a time. As they sat and talked in the studio they seemed to gather hate for each other. Jardine, worn to the very edge of his nervous system, could not help thinking of the ghastly incongruity with the woman who was the mother of the dead man sealed within the laughing Satyr. He shuddered from time to time as this thought came to his mind.

"I know nothing of the whereabouts of your son," he told her. "He was here for a few moments. He had an I O U from me for a small sum he had loaned me. I went downstairs to my living apartments to get the money for him, and when I returned to the studio he had gone. I cannot explain why he left in such haste. He had been out all night and still wore his evening clothes. He did not stop by the flat below as he went out."

Cross-Examination

"But Lewis is always polite," the mother declared, a bit angrily. "He does not take his departure from the home of a friend in that way."

"In this instance he did." Jardine lied as best he could with his mind in a turmoil and with one eye always on the door that led into his workshop, where he knew the Satyr stood grinning horribly.

He forgot the telephone incident entirely and he saw no reason why he should mention the presence of Beatrice Charters in his studio on the fatal day.

Mrs. Stuvessant continued to question him and he was in agony when Fleury dropped in and joined in the conversation. At last Mrs. Stuvessant made her departure, asking Fleury to see her to her carriage. On the way out they chatted about the disappearance of Lewis Stuvessant and Fleury mentioned the telephone incident.

More Suspicions

"Where did my son telephone from?" Mrs. Stuvessant demanded.

"I don't know; he rang off suddenly."

"Could not Dick give you the number?"

"I believe he said it was a call number. He was awfully upset about the girl."

"What girl?"

"Why, didn't Dick tell you?" Fleury asked innocently. "That very day he brought into his studio a girl who had been about to kill herself. She'd been a governess. I [illegible] stand [illegible] the son of the [illegible] had made love to her. The young man's mother then dismissed her, and all that sort of thing. Couldn't get another job, y'know—nothing to eat—river."

"He told me nothing of her," Mrs. Stuvessant replied.

"I wonder if the girl was that Charters creature?" she asked herself.

"Why, there's Mrs. Knowles; how d'ye do, Mrs. Knowles?" exclaimed Fleury, lifting his hat to [illegible] young woman dressed in [illegible], who drove up [illegible] an electric [illegible].

"Don't you know her? You ought to. She's Dick's sister—a widow. Why, what am I saying. You know her, certainly. Stu was in love and is, I understand, with Lewis."

Mrs. Stuvessant, who cared as little for Mrs. Knowles as she did for her brother, Dick Jardine, turned away with a short bow.

"SLENDER" NEMOS

Stout Women No Longer Monopolize the Nemo Hygienic Service

Many women still think that all Nemos are for stout figures. No doubt some dealers encourage this erroneous belief, because they like to sell goods that sell easiest—and Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets practically sell themselves, the world over.

The truth is that the "slender" Nemos do just as much for women of slight build as the more famous Self-Reducing Corsets do for their stout sisters—same hygienic excellence, same comfort with perfect style, same unequaled durability.

Your dealer will show you the "slender" Nemos, if you insist.

Nemos the World's Standard

(New York Press, Mar. 13, 1910.)

Lastikops Corset No. 330

Most Stylish and Comfortable Corset Ever Made for Slender Figures

Nemo No. 330 is not merely an improvement: it's an actual REVOLUTION in corset making.

Such a corset could never have been made before we invented our new "Lastikops Webbing"—and can never be made without it.

It is a beautiful model, with long, lines that give a slight form the acme of slender grace.

And it's healthful and comfortable, for those two bands of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing perfectly support the internal organs, completely prevent that cramped, bearing-down feeling, and insure absolute hygienic safety, no matter how tightly you lace.

No slender woman who has once been fitted in a Nemo No. 330 will ever willingly wear any other corset.

Fine white coutil, sizes 18 to 26; Lastikops hose supporters—$3.00.

Nemo "Relief Bands"

COMFORT FOR STOUT WOMEN
In Self-Reducing Corsets Nos. 403 and 405 — $4.00

Some stout women do not need the extreme support of the Lastikops Bandlet; therefore, thousands are perfectly satisfied with Nemos made with Nemo Relief Bands, which is the next best reducing device.

No. 405, for tall stout figures, has high bust and a long skirt that comes well around to the front and reduces hips and upper limbs. The Relief Bands follow the curve of the lower abdomen, giving firm support from underneath. Fine white coutil, sizes 20 to 36—$4.00.

No. 403 is a similar model, but with lower bust and under arm, for short-waisted stout women—$4.00.

No Substitute for Nemos

The wonderful comfort of Nemo Corsets is due to the Nemo patented inventions—which, of course, cannot be used in any other corsets.

LASTIKOPS BANDLET

Greatest of all Inventions for Figure Reduction and Control

The illustration below shows the construction of the semi-elastic Lastikops Bandlet; also its position in the corset, and that comfortable supporting curve, which cannot be produced by any other fabric, and which insures the highest degree of fashionable slenderness.

The Bandlet gives better support than the best separate abdominal band you can buy at any price; self-adjusting, can't slip out of place; overcomes all dangers of tight lacing.

Used only in Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets Nos. 522 and 523, at $5.00.

Lastikops Hose Supporters

Every Nemo Corset (except the few $2.00 models) is finished with Lastikops Hose Supporters, guaranteed to outwear any corset.

Self-Reducing No. 320

Best reducing corset made at the price. For tall or medium stout figures. Long skirt—great reduction, and perfect ease. Worn also by many slender women who need support. Sizes 19 to 36—$3.00.

No. 318 —is a similar model, but lower bust and under arm, for short-waisted women—$3.00.

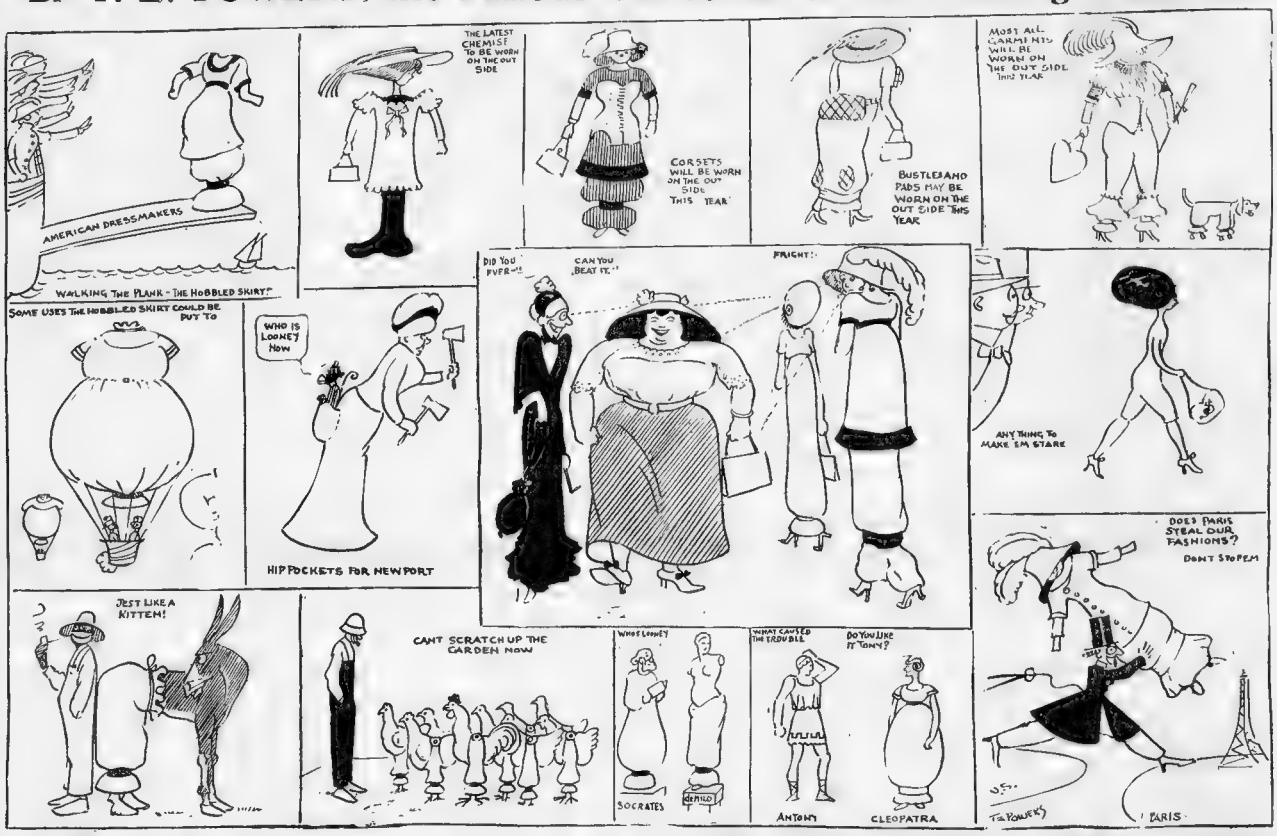
After the Hobble Skirt—What?

By T. E. POWERS, the Famous Cartoonist of the Evening American



ALWAYS THE ACTRESS--By James J. Montagu[illegible]

(Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

THE mortgage is due on the homestead; the farmer is feeble and gray;
The sheriff has taken the heifer; a cyclone has taken the hay.
The stout-hearted son of the household cries: "Father, depend upon me;
I'll carve a career in the city and pay off that mortgage, b'gee."
But see where the sinister actress enraptures the fatuous lad—
She lures him away to the chorus, away from his doting old dad;
He pawns the new self-binding thresher to buy her a frock for the stage—
The father is left there to perish, a terrible thing at his age.

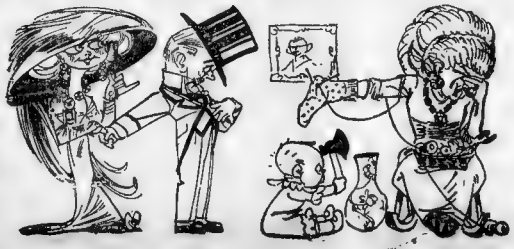
The wife calmly waits for her husband; she hears a light step at the door.
He staggers and falters before her, but who is this jade at his heels
Who brings in the scent of patchouli, gin fizzes and automobiles?
An actress! Ah, yes, 'tis an actress! The wife cries in helpless dismay.
But what is her woe to the actress who's stolen her husband away?
The wife must depend in the future on the wage of a seven-year kid,
And this (for the aid of the playwright) the sinister actress has did!



THE poet is writing a poem; he labors through long Winter nights;
He still has a stanza to finish, his feet nearly freeze as he writes.
An actress looks in at the window, she sees that the screed will bring fame.
She smiles (such a smile!) at the poet, that gets him to blow the whole game.
He gives up his claim upon laurels, he ruins his golden young life,
He follows the actress distracted—she sneers (and they sneer like a knife).
He now is a felon in prison, he breaks stubborn fragments of stone.
O actress, O sinister actress, why didn't you let him alone?

THE elderly Captain of Finance has four billion bones in the bank.
What's that? Did you ask where he got it? He stole it, my friend, to be frank.
But now he intends to restore it, to give every cent of it back,
But just as he feels for his check book an actress draws near, and, alack!
She tells him she has something on him. She asks for the whole pile of pelf,
He shudders and passes it over, and she blows it all in on herself!
O actress, O sinister actress! we shrink 'neath your sinister gaze,
But we must confess to you, nevertheless, that without you we couldn't write plays.

There sits the English High, [illegible] Latin High the Public Library, [illegible] the City Hall on the crest of that [illegible] One has to climb the paths to learning here. It is doubtful to my mind which building furnishes the [illegible] education. Some are schools for [illegible] and one is a school for [illegible], though it doesn't pull off a graduat[illegible] the pupils like to re[illegible] enjoy the benefits that accrue from studying tax rates and city documents.

POTSDAM ADVOCATE—Who is [illegible]

MEGAPHONE MAN—John M. Woods. He's the man who got President Taft before John Fitzgerald of Boston got him.

MAN IN CHECKED SUIT—For how long?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Have done, sir. He got him to review the Somerville Fourth of July parade, sir, and it was a spectacular affair. Mayor Woods is a solid, substantial business man. He once invited the entire city to his birthday party.

PORTSMOUTH DAME—Where did he hold it?

MEGAPHONE MAN—In his residence, Madam.

PORTSMOUTH DAME—Did they all get in there?

MEGAPHONE MAN—They all tried to, Madam, but the next time I guess Mayor Woods will hire the Squantum aviation field.

PITTSFIELD OFFICE HOLDER—Popular?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, Street Commissioner Asa Pritchard might not think so, but he is. You see they had a little argument once over the macadam.

CAPE COD SHIPPER—How long was that Fourth of July procession?

MEGAPHONE MAN—It took an hour to pass by President Taft.

CAPE COD SKIPPER—Gee,—he must be a whooping big man.

PARTY ON FOURTH SEAT—I used to live in Somerville [illegible] ago. That man over there looks familiar to me.

MEGAPHONE MAN—That is Captain Robert R. Perry, of the police department. He has been forty year or more in the service and has Jack Johnson shaded when it comes to putting them away. Some of 'em never come back. Nevertheless it's only the offenders who deserve it, he goes after and many boys have cause to recall his friendship with gratitude. I remember one occasion when he wasn't too hard on a boy caught stealing cherries.

SAME PARTY—Who's chief now?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Charles A. Kendall. He was in the Concord reformatory. I mean that he was once superintendent there, and a mighty good one he was, too.

MAINE DEMOCRAT—This is a Democratic city?

MEGAPHONE MAN—No, but it might be if some of the fellows who have moved out here would stop sleeping in Boston on the last night of April and get busy. Charlie Shea, the chairman of the Democratic city committee, is a hustler.

GOTHAM BANKER—Any [illegible] made men out here?

MEGAPHONE MAN—I should say yes. Now there's Walter S. Glidden, of the Governor's Council. He's one. Then take Elmer A. Stevens. He won his way in the world. That man spends more money in a year than John D. Rockefeller ever thought of getting rid of. He's the State Treasurer.

JOHN J. HIGGINS is the district attorney and had to fight and fight hard for everything he ever got.

HINSDALE (N. H.) POET—Sam Walter Foss is out there, isn't he?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Yes, indeed. Sam is librarian of the public library and can dash off yards of poems if he sees fit to. (To Chauffeur) Swing around into School street. Now, Ladies and Gentlemen, on the left you see the Winter Hill Baptist church. The Mizpah class for women, the largest of its kind in New England, meets here every Sunday. (Automobile emerges on Broadway.) The big building back there is Odd Fellows' Hall, where Arthur G. Pearson gives a mighty good moving picture show about rangers and lovers and Indians and laugh producers every night for 10 cents admission. The Broadway Theatre here has a fine patronage too. We are now about to pass over the top of Winter Hill.

STUDENT OF ENGLISH—You mean the summit.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I reiterate what I said. The summit is no more, for they took a little bit off the summit years ago, but the top remains. I can't but pity the nag that P. Revere rode when he went up this incline, every time I pass over this interesting route, where the deeds of patriots are cherished by a warm hearted people.

MUNICIPAL EXPERT—Will Somerville join in the movement and become a part of Boston?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Not so you would notice it.

MUNICIPAL EXPERT—Why not?

MEGAPHONE MAN—While I pass around once again and collect the additional emolument that accrues to the beneficent concern I work for as [illegible], is there any lady or gentleman who would care to answer the gentleman's question. No? Why it's easy. What city wants to sink its own identity with a berg that can't turn out a winning ball team. Now, if the Red Sox won, it might be different. (Commotion at rear of auto.)

MEGAPHONE MAN—If that gentleman, who looks like Mr. A. Mutt, will kindly refrain from attempting to place a bet until we reach Lexington, I'll take him on for two seeds on the chances of Bob Goodthing getting a rebate. Turn the crank James; Music by the bag-pipes Larry.

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THE LITTLE CHILDREN SAY

LITTLE MARGARET [illegible] with snickets and smother[illegible] giggles.

"Do [illegible] that kind of a [illegible]" asked her mother.

"N[illegible]" [illegible] that!"

BEN [illegible]

"You swore!" declared Ben.

"Didn't either!" said Harry.

"Yes you did. You said a wicked swear. [illegible] Father's [illegible]"

• • •

WHILE [illegible] stopped in a butter and egg store to purchase some eggs. Suddenly Cornelius asked,

"Aunty, why don't you buy them at the corner grocery?"

"Because they are fresher here," said I.

"Why," replied Cornelius, "do the people lay th[illegible]?"

TOTTY [illegible] and her [illegible] beyond the point which considers patience a virtue [illegible] give her a good spanking.

The little [illegible] for the davenport, bounced herself down on the springiness of it and, clutching the upholstered edge [illegible] with both hands, looked up with [illegible] eyes and said:

"You can't do [illegible] on it."

LITTLE ETHEL, aged four, had been to visit her cousins two merry, romping boys and now, seated on her father's knee, she was telling him of her visit.

"Papa, every night Jack and Joe say their prayers and they ask God to make them good boys," said she.

"That's nice," replied her father.

"But he ain't done it yet," added Ethel thoughtfully.

"WARREN, my dear, what are you crying for?" I asked [illegible] the boy, who had just come in [illegible] I am afraid [illegible]

I HAVE two little cousins who, just [illegible] their mother that their new teacher was a [illegible] day came and in [illegible] when they came home, [illegible] the ghost sisters" and [illegible] we are twins," and [illegible] right in my face."

• • •

A YOUNG financier was in his first copy book at school and his proud father, thinking to encourage his son in his Spencer in efforts, and, [illegible] bit of [illegible] first [illegible] with the first shoes and [illegible] other little "first things," offered twenty-five cents for the completed copy book. In due time the book was turned over to an admiring papa in exchange for the twenty-five cent [illegible] copy book was brought home by a confident and bargaining son.

"Here, papa," he said, "is another copy book, but you got to give me half a dollar for this one, cause now I can write twice as good as I could when I sold you one for a quarter."

MILLIE came running in crying: "Ma, my stomach says it's dinner time."

I asked her what that time was and, after looking at the clock, she said:

"My stomach's five minutes fast."

MY little son George was about to spend some money for candy, when his uncle approached him and said:

"George, don't you think that instead of spending all the pennies you get it would be better to put them away for a rainy day?"

"Oh, what's the good of money on a rainy day?" said George scornfully.

"Mother never let me stir [illegible]"

LITTLE Elsie, who was looking through a collection of cards, picked out one which she especially liked. Upon being told that it was one her mother had received from her father before their marriage, she exclaimed,

"Why, [illegible], did you know papa before you were married?"

• • •

JOHNNY was proudly boasting of his [illegible] saying that he was eight, and [illegible] be a man.

"W[illegible], you are only seven," exclaimed his mother. "I ought to know because I was here when the stork brought you!"

"Well, wasn't I here [illegible]" Johnny.

SOON after the noon meal I took my two little nieces and my young nephew for a jaunt in the country to gather berries. Also I took along a bag of good things for lunch.

Before we had gone half a mile my elder niece complained of being hungry. Then my nephew uttered the same complaint. Seeing their game, however, I tucked the lunch bag out of sight in the wagon, telling them they could have none of its contents until we reached our destination.

Hardly had the bag been put away when the youngest of the party, Catherine, aged four, leaned close to me and said:

"I'm hungry, too, uncle, but I'm not saying anything about it, am I?"

• • •

WHEN my son went to bed last night, [illegible] asked me who made him and I replied:

"God made [illegible]"

"And did He make you, too, mamma?"

"Yes, He made me and you and all the people in [illegible]."

"Well," he said, "don't He ever get tired? You know, God must be a pretty old man."

• • •

MURIEL, two years old, wanted very much to taste some horse radish which her [illegible] were enjoying.

"You will not like it," warned her mother. "It will burn you."

But Muriel persisted and received a generous mouthful. She blinked violently, struggled to restrain the tears, and then gasped:

"I'll wait till that gets cool before I eat any more."

A LITTLE girl was told by her mother to ask God to make her a good girl. When bedtime came she knelt by the bed and said:

"Dear Lord, please make me a good girl, if you can, but, gee! It will keep you busy."

MY father being fond of woodchucks, used to shoot them and bring them home to eat. My little brother, not three years old, would watch him skin them. Upon the arrival of a new baby, the little fellow exclaimed.

"What am it, papa? Am it a woodchuck? When are you going to skin it?"

HOSTESS—Mr. Smith, may I help you to another piece of pie?

Guest—No, thank you, Mrs. Jones. I really could not take any more.

Little Willie—Then, mamma, give me some. You said I could have another piece if Mr. Smith left enough.

SUNDAY School Superintendent—Who led the children of Israel into Canaan? Will one of the smaller boys answer?

No reply.

Superintendent (somewhat sternly)—Can no one tell? Little boy on the seat next to the aisle, you tell who led the children of Israel into Canaan.

Little Boy (badly frightened)—It wasn't me—I just moved here last week from Mizzoury.

LITTLE ELSIE—Mama, where do babies come from?

Mama—Why, the people buy them, my dear.

Elsie—Well, it's funny that the poorest people always buy the most babies, mamma.

• • •

LITTLE MARY went into the country on a visit to her grandmother. Walking in the garden she chanced to spy a peacock—a bird she had never seen before. After gazing at it in great admiration, she ran quickly into the house and cried out:

"Oh, grandma! Come and see; one of your old chickens is in bloom."

LITTLE JOHNNY (aged six)—Mamma, how many hells are there?

His Mother—Why, one, Johnny; why do you ask?

Little Johnny—'Cause I see funerals going in all directions.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER—Why, Thomas, I am surprised to hear you say you do not believe our prayers are answered.

Tommy—Well, the angels brought a new baby to our house last week, and all the time I had been praying for a goat.

• • •

A LITTLE boy once asked his auntie if she married an Indian. "Why do you ask such a silly question?" she inquired.

"I dunno, but I saw some scalps on your dressing table," he answered.

WE had a lady visiting us, who had two little girls named Marion and Helen. I asked Helen how old she was.

"I'm a twin," was her reply.

The Voice of the Voiceless

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

I AM the voice of the voiceless, made [illegible]
[illegible] speak;
[illegible]
[illegible] weak.
[illegible] and from kennel,
From jungle and stall, the wail
Of [illegible] the sin
[illegible] against the frail.

I AM a ray from the Centre,
And I will feed God's spark,
Till a great light glows in the night
[illegible] shows
[illegible] dark
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] may [illegible]
Cloaked under an honored name.

THE [illegible] formed the sparrow
[illegible] man, the king.
The God [illegible] gave a spark of soul
To furred and to feathered thing.
And I [illegible] brother's keeper,
And I will [illegible] his fight,
And speak the word for beast and bird,
Till the world shall set things right.

LET no voice cavil at Science—
The strong torch bearer of God;
For brave are the deeds, though dying creeds
Must fall where his feet have trod.
But he who would trample kindness
And mercy into the dust
He has missed the trail, and his quest must fail,
He is not the guide to trust.

FOR love is the true religion
And love is the law sublime
And all that is wrought [illegible] not
Will die at the [illegible] of time.
And Science, the great Revealer
Must flame his torch at the Source
And keep it right with the holy light,
Or his feet shall fall on the course.

OH, never a brute in the forest
And never a snake in the fen
Or ravening [illegible] starvation stirred
Has hunted his prey like men.
For hunger and fear, and passion
Alone drive beasts to slay.
But wonderful man, the crown of the Plan,
Tortures, and kills, FOR PLAY.

HE goes well fed from his table,
He kisses his child and wife;
Then he haunts a wood, till he orphans a brood,
Or robs a deer of its life.
He aims at a speck in the azure;
Winged love, that has flown at a call;
It reels down to die, and he lets it lie;
His pleasure was seeing it fall.

AND one there was, weary of laurels,
Of burdens and troubles of state;
So the jungle he sought, with the beautiful thought
Of shooting a she lion's mate.
And one came down from the pulpit,
In the pride of a duty done,
And his cloth sufficed, as his emblem of Christ,
While murder smoked out of his gun.

ONE strays from the haunts of fashion
With an indolent, unused brain;
But his sluggish heart feels a sudden start
In the purpose of giving pain
And the fluttering flock of pigeons,
As they rise on eager wings,
From prison to death, bring a catch in his breath,
Oh, the rapture of killing things!

NOW, this is the race as we find it,
Where love, in the creed, spells hate,
And where bird and beast meet a foe in the priest
And in rulers of fashion and state.
But up to the Kingdom of Thinkers
Has risen the cry of our kin,
And the weapons of thought are burnished and brought
To clash with the bludgeons of sin.

FOR Christ, of a million churches,
Come near to the earth again,
Be more than a Name, be a living Flame;
"MAKE GOOD" IN THE HEARTS OF MEN.
Shine full on the path of Science,
And show it the heights above,
Where vast truths lie for the searching eye,
That shall follow the Torch of Love.

WHEN BILLY AND I ARE MARRIED

A New Series of Betty's Day Dreams

SINCE we've been engaged I've discovered that my Billy is just a WEE BIT sentimental—he loves to have me play and sing love songs to him in the evening. Don't imagine that is just because the COURTSHIP stage isn't over yet. I've studied Billy CAREFULLY, and I know that 'way down DEEP in the manly nature of him—in the spot where I'm going to plant MYSELF to take root there FOREVER—Billy has feelings as gentle and tender as those of a GIRL. And I've discovered that the way to keep those feelings fresh in Billy is to give him a sentimental song or two, in the evening when the lights are low and I'm on my SWEETEST behavior!

There's nothing like having the stage properly set, and a cheerful and agreeable opening of the scene. This means, first, a GOOD dinner.

Of course I've placed Billy's big easy chair right at the end of his grandmother's old-fashioned square piano (which she left Billy in her will, and which has the sweetest tinkly tones you seldom hear nowadays), and no sooner is he seated in it than he'll ASK me to sing about "Love and I." And with the smoke from Billy's pipe curling 'round me it will be strange if I can't make him FEEL me 'way down in that tender, GIRLISH spot in his heart!

SHE—How much do you charge for this magazine?

He—Forty cents.

She—Aren't you a little dear?

He—That's what the girls all say.

HE (reading a paper)—Here's an account of a man who insulted a woman with a child.

She—What did the woman do?

He—She hit him over the head with the child.

* * *

SHE (reading over his shoulder)—There's a funny thing

He—What? St. Louis wins?

She—No, no; see that story there? It says in Afghanistan men pay twenty-five cents for a wife. Isn't that awful?

He—Oh, I don't know; some wives are worth twenty-five cents.

ROONEY AND BENT.

WHEN I was a young man I didn't know whether to be a burglar or a politician. At last I decided to become a burglar, for I wanted to be as honest as I could.

* * *

ALL of us burglars carry dark lanterns. It isn't much bother lugging them around—they're so light, you know.

I DON'T feel much like burgling to-night. Fact is, I haven't ambition enough to break into a perspiration.

UNLUCKY? Well, I should say I am! Why, if there was a thousand dollars in bills hanging on a tree right here this minute, I'd probably have the rheumatism so bad that I couldn't climb up and get it.

MY little daughter was leaning out of the window watching a man load ash cans into a wagon. Presently the horse started up suddenly and one of the cans fell with an awful smash on one of his feet.

"I think that ashman must be a very religious man, papa," said the girl, telling me of the incident.

"What makes you think so?"

"Oh, because when the can fell he sat down and held his foot in his lap and talked to God for the longest time about his horse."

CHARLES SWEET, the Musical Burglar.

A BIBULOUS gentleman, having yielded freely to his inclination, is coming home very late. His progress is slow and uncertain, and while fumbling for his keys he soliloquizes thus:

"I'm getting so that I don't feel at home unless there's sawdust on the floor. This is the last time I'll ever go to a clam bake. Went down for a bake and came home with a stew."

He tries to get the key into the door, which, by the way, opens into a house not his own.

"Don't cry, little key, you might get all rusty, and then you won't fit. Funny, I can feel the keyhole, but I can't find it. Wish I had a funnel."

He imagines the key tells him to go in through the window.

"That's a good idea. You're a very smart little key You must be a Yale key."

From "IN AND OUT."

A BOY who stuttered badly was standing in the New York Grand Central Station. A stranger came up and asked him how to get to Central Park. The boy told him as best he could, and then turned to a man standing by and said:

"G-g-g-ee, that's t-t-t-tough l-luck. There's f-f-f-four m-m-million, s-s-seven hundred and s-s-sixty-six th-thousand eight h-h-h-hundred and eighty-three p-p-p-ple living in N-N-N-N-New York, and yet he h-a-h-had to p-p-p-pick me out."

A VISITOR passing through an insane asylum noticed one of the inmates hitting himself vigorously over the head with a stick.

"Why you do that?" asked the visitor.

"Because it feels so good when I stop," was the reply.

"WHERE is Africa?"

"I don't know; have you got it?"

"No, no; I mean what city is it in?"

"Do chickens grow in Africa?"

"They do when they have a chance."

OF course, I never talk about other women, and I'm not going to say a word about her—only just this one thing. She went out walking in a sheath gown night before last and actually had her stocking picked.

THE woman who lives next door to us is the greatest person to borrow things you ever saw. One day last week she was going to give a party. First she borrowed some flour to make a cake, then some sugar and then some chocolate. At last, when I thought she had everything she wanted, she came running over for a dish to bake the cake in.

"Look here," says I, "you bring all that stuff back and we'll have the party ourselves."

And what do you think—the next day she wanted to know if we'd let her take our corned beef for a while to cook with her cabbage!

I'M going to marry Looey. He's a pretzel bender in a bakery. When he asked me to be his wife, I said to him:

"How much salary do you get Looey?" And he said.

"Three dollars a week."

"That's not salary," said I, "that is wages."

"It ain't much, I know," says Looey, "but if they paid me any more, think how much more I'd be losing when I was out of work."

EDNA AUG

I WENT down to Sheepshead Bay on keepaway day—I mean get away day. The first is a better name for it, though. It's the day you should keep away. By the way, did you ever walk from Sheepshead Bay to New York? Well, it has been done.

On this particular day I made up my mind to test my courage. I was determined to go right down to that track and sit out six races without making a bet. I bet myself that I could do it—and with a lot of money in my pocket, too. I went around among the boys of the White Rats and collected all they could spare. Then I took the train to Sheepshead, went up to the grandstand and sat down with my hand on that money.

First race comes along, and I sit there. I pick the horse in my mind, and he comes in, good price, but I never move.

Second race. I know what horse was going to win that race. The horse told me himself.

Third race. Ah! the third race! I was sitting there waiting for the bugle to call them out when up comes a friend of mine and sits down beside me. He was one of them, or, trouts—no, touts—but a fish just the same. He says

"George, my boy, I've got one that's IN."

"I'm not gambling to-day," said I.

"George, this isn't gambling—this is taking the money right out of the bookies' pockets!"

Well, any time you can take the money out of a bookie's pocket it's time to sit up and take notice. I said to my friend:

"Suppose that this horse hows a tendon during the race?"

"Say, George, this horse could break three legs and then hop in on the one good one and win the race."

Well, I had never bet on a hopping horse and it looked good to me.

"What will I bet on this race?" says I.

"Bet your life," says my friend

"Well, I'd rather bet something valuable," I said. So I put all my money on this horse

"I'll bet just this once, remember," I said to my friend, "but don't ever approach me again, for I'm through."

Well, I happened to see my friend Dougherty in the stand and I calls him over. I tell him about the hopping horse and he puts his money with mine. We give it to my friend—my dollar and a half and Dougherty's two. Dougherty is all excitement He gets down to the rail to get a good look at the horse. Name was Ehret. Dougherty goes to the fence at the head of the stretch to wait for the ten regular horses in the race and the one we bet on

Bell rings and they're off. The ten regular horses finish, but Ehret was nowhere in sight. Dougherty still held the fort at the head of the stretch The crowd had left the track, the other ten I guess were in the stalls and the trainers and jockeys were in their cottages having supper when along comes our horse. Dougherty waits until his jockey is in sight and then he yells as he points up toward the finishing wire

Say, they went up that way!"

Alfred—Weren't we all fat little red worms once? And see what we are now?

Jimmy—Big fat worms

AGGIE—The only thing that will bring Alfred back is a baby

Zoie—But how could I get one?

Aggie—Adopt it

Zoie—That will never do. Alfred's so fussy. He's always wanting his own things around

ALFRED to Zoie—Before we were married you pretended to adore children. The moment you got me you declared that all children were horrid little insects and that someone ought to sprinkle bug powder on them

"YES, Bill's got a good job now. He's janitor of a church choir."

"Janitor of a church choir! Why, I never heard of such a thing. What on earth does the janitor of a church choir do?

"Well, when any of the singers are sick he takes their places and when they're all on the job he sweeps out."

* * *

"SO you were in the Spanish War, were you? In what particular battles did you fight?"

"Oh, I wasn't particular. I took 'em as they came."

"GERALDINE, I would learn to love you."

"Aw, go on, Percy—you haven't money enough to pay for the education."

* * *

"YOU shouldn't criticise my mother's cooking. She was baking pies before you were born."

"Yes, the one she gave me last night must have been baked as long ago as that."

* * *

"I'VE been married three times, but the Lord took two of my wives away."

"That's sad."

"Nothing sad about it—I'm perfectly willing to keep on furnishing 'em as fast as he'll take 'em away."

"TALK about looking old! Why, you look as if you were born before the Dead Sea died."

"Well, I've got nothing on you. You look as if you'd been on earth several years before the Dead Sea was first taken sick."

FOR WOMEN WHO WEAR HOBBLE SKIRTS

THE much-maligned hobble skirt has a warm champion in Miss Georgie Lawrence, who plays an important role in James Forbes's successful comedy, "The Commuters." According to her, all the trouble over this newest form of attire is due to the fact that most of the women who wear hobble skirts have never learned to hobble properly. With the right preliminary training she says that hobble skirts are graceful comfortable garments. Miss Lawrence says she finds them so, and she wears them both on and off the stage.

For the benefit of every woman who wears, or wants to wear, a hobble skirt, Miss Lawrence has formulated a set of rules which she guarantees to make hobbling easy. The illustrations accompanying them are from photographs by White for which the actress specially posed.

"Always carry a parasol to maintain your equilibrium if you want to stand still for a few minutes."

"I'm disgusted with my sex when I see some of the pitiful attempts at hobbling"

By Miss Georgie Lawrence

POOR hobble skirt! Ridiculed by the men, abused by the women who wear it, and doomed by the fashion experts to early retirement—really some philanthropist should take pity on this ill treated, much misunderstood garment.

The hobble skirt does not for a minute deserve such treatment. When properly worn it is a graceful novelty in feminine attire that deserves, on its merits, to remain in vogue much longer than most styles do.

The trouble is that not one hobble skirt wearer in a thousand knows how to hobble properly, and unless you can hobble you are as out of place in a hobble skirt as a deep sea diver in a monoplane.

I'm disgusted with my sex when I see some of the pitiful attempts at hobbling. Such grotesque awkwardness! Such risk to life and limb! Such expressions of bodily discomfort and fear that "something will happen" as the faces of the would-be hobblers wear!

Women forget that the hobble skirt cannot be donned as carelessly as they would a pair of new gloves. Weeks, sometimes months of training are required to perfect your carriage and gait so that you can hobble in comfort and without making a sight of yourself on the street.

Only women who are pigeon-toed can forego this training. The peculiar twist nature has given their feet enables them to hobble in ease and comfort with little or no practice.

The best way to learn to hobble is to spend a reasonable length of time each day in walking in a meal bag. Did you ever see a meal bag? Well, that's the idea. Get into the sack, deposit a bunch of potatoes in each corner of it, shut it down the chute just a trifle, draw it up around your waist—and then walk. In this crude but practical method you will find much profit. Strive to acquire a graceful poise and carriage while you're in the bag, and you'll get along first rate when you're in the skirt, for the same limitations apply to both.

If you can't get a meal bag, or if you don't really want to get into a meal bag, you can make a bag from some other fabric. There are any number of fabrics which may be obtained at the shops that are equally suitable. Perhaps by this time the shops are offering ready-made bags for the purpose. The waist measure of the bag should be rather full, but the width of the bag at the bottom should not exceed eighteen inches.

In acquiring the perfect hobble carriage, advance each foot gingerly, because haste is waste, and, in this case, bad taste. Did you ever walk on eggs? Intentionally, I mean? No? Well, imagine, if you can, how lightly you would have to step if you were walking on eggs lest you break the thin and fragile shells. Imagine still further then, and picture the eggs not over six inches apart, and then start in and walk.

You'll find it the hardest walk you've been called upon to learn since the kangaroo came in. And, my! how you have to practice. After you've learned to hobble on the level, you've got the stairs staring you in the face. Here's where your fortitude must bear the test, and the least infraction of the following hard and fast rule is bound to result in your utter undoing.

Going up the stairs, study the rules of seamanship, as applied to sailing a boat tacking against a head wind. As there is a lack of standard rule as to the height of steps to aid you in your manoeuvring, take a quick look at the general scheme of elevation before lifting your foot to the first step, and then arrange to have your knees respond automatically to the plans and specifications of the stairway, going up zig zag to the left and then to the right, and so on to the top. Don't try to go in a straight line up the stairs. Something might give—besides, it's not graceful.

"Don't try to go in a straight line up the stairs—take a zigzag course."

In coming down stairs, above all things, beware of stepping in the fashion used by the ordinary run of human beings. It's reckless. You must jump down gently, a step at a time, keeping your knees and heels close together, not because it is the most comfortable way of proceeding, but because it's a great deal safer.

You will, let me assure you, find the balustrade of great assistance. In fact, if no one is looking, it is permissible to slide down.

Women were never intended to hurry and the hobble skirt makes a leisurely, dignified gait imperative. Unless you are an unusually proficient hobbler, you should allow for your shopping tours and other appearances in public about twice as much time as would be necessary if you were not encased in a hobble.

Never venture out on your first walk unaccompanied, for much of a hobbler's success in getting along depends upon the ability of her escort. Escorts should be carefully picked these days. When I look upon one of these hobbler's assistants I am reminded of the cavaliers of the swashbuckling age, who were always in readiness to help the ladies, even at the risk of life and limb.

If you want to venture on a brief shopping trip for practice, and no escort is handy, don't fail to take along a parasol with a long, crooked handle. This precaution is imperative, if you wish to escape possible humiliation. It is no uncommon thing for a woman to drop a bundle on the store floor or on the street. Now, under ordinary circumstances a woman can pick the bundle up, but if you're clad in a hobbler YOU CAN'T.

Wouldn't you feel nice standing on a crowded sidewalk, seeing your bundle being kicked about, unable to pick it up, waiting for some gentleman to perceive the situation and come to your assistance? And the chances are that the man would smile a very unwelcome smile and say something to the effect that he "knew you couldn't stoop," so don't forget the long-handled parasol with the crooked handle. With this you can pick up your own bundles, and also maintain your equilibrium if you want to stand still for a few moments.

"Jump down the stairs gently, a step at a time, keeping your knees and heels together."

It is in this latter attitude, I believe, that the wearer of the hobble is seen to best advantage. She is far more graceful in that posture than when she tries to walk downstairs—and can't, or when she tries to enter a street car as street cars were meant to be entered—and doesn't.

But if you practice long enough, Sister Hobbler, you will be able to walk with as much grace, ease and comfort as in your old-fashioned seventeen-gored skirt. I'm not saying how long you will have to practice, but don't get discouraged. One thing is certain, we hobblers can go through the Common on windy days without showing our—er—peevishness, can't we?

FULL DRESS HAT OF FEATHERS MALINE AND VELVET SHOWING INTERIOR DETACHABLE LACE THEATRE CAP WHICH REMAINS ON THE HEAD AFTER THE HAT IS REMOVED

Paris, September 20

HERE are some of the newest pictures of that latest French creation in millinery—the "two-story hat."

Parisian genius designed it for three things. First, because of picturesqueness and prettiness, second, as a boon to theatregoers, and third, as a means of changing the fashions in enormous puffed up masses of hair, real and false, into a normal fashion of wearing one's own locks.

Out of these three desires came the fascinating double-decker, or two-story hat.

Madame or mademoiselle is going to the theatre. She arrives at the theatre. She has on a ravishing hat like this shown at the top of the page. It is a confection of feathers, maline and velvet. Will she take it off—wonder all those about her, divided between admiration and anxiety. They note a dainty little fringe of lace, with delicate roses embroidered on it, and a gleam of jewel or sheen of pearl here and there. It seems to be an accessory to the interior of the hat brim.

Madame or mademoiselle reaches up, pulls out a few pins and, hey—presto! The big hat is on her lap. The delicate, dainty lace that seemed to be a part of it rests on her head still. It is the edge of a cap, lace or silk, shot with gold or silver thread, and holding her coiffure in place.

It is the under part of the new double-decker!

And see what is accomplished! Madame has a perfect head covering that lends itself to her general charm, her neighbors are not annoyed by either towering hat or enormous coiffure, the stage is plain to the eyes of those behind—and every one is satisfied.

Yet the new two-story hats are not entirely designed for theatre use. In cloche or bell form and in modifications of the quaint Dutch cap the interior of the double-decker comes. They are the modes for teas, restaurant parties—everywhere that fashion decrees the hat may be left off or on.

Mademoiselle Gaby Deslys, the Parisian beauty and actress, made the mode her own and set the fashion-rolling. All new fashions need this touch of beauty's approval to give them their proper standing. Here Mademoiselle Deslys is seen in three of the very latest versions of the two-story.

And versions can be quite as varied as there are wearers. There is a wonderful variety in shapes, and as in all such dainty bits of a woman's dress, individuality is shown in the lace or fabric and in the ornamentation.

Madame Maeterlinck's favorite is made of rich old yellow Spanish lace, that falls two inches below the band of the upper hat. A band of wonderfully made deep tan roses encircles it. Above the lace is a cap covering of gold shot silk. An enormous emerald held between clasps of old gold clasps the lace to the silk.

In others of the Dutch cap persuasion little folds of lace drop down over the ears when the upper story is removed, adding a greater coquettish touch to the whole.

The adherents of the new fashion claim for it a hygienic value, too. One had to wear these masses of false hair, they say, before the advent of the double-decker. One's head was not dressed otherwise. And false hair hurts the real hair, makes one "headachy" and nervous. Now one is just as "dressed" and still can do without the puffs.

Only the hairdressers are not pleased. Their warfare with the hat is like the battle between the gunproof battleship and the armor-defeating gun. Each one's success is continuous. And so the hairdressers expect soon to invent a coiffure which will defeat the double-decker.

Another of the newest millinery fashions is the velvet and silk turban. This looks precisely like a long ribbon knotted about the head in real Turkish style, and is on view in sizes ranging from a small barrel to a discreet little affair that is not much larger than a peach basket.

But the point is that the turbans, too, have discovered their little brother, and have joined in the double-decker movement. So that when the enormous hat is removed there clustering under it is a tiny reproduction of it, usually in some vivid tint—blue, scarlet, coral, green—and with a row of barbaric jewelled ornamentation clustered about it. Sometimes a jewelled snake writhes among the coils of the fabric or a big jewel flames out.

Just how far this theory of double-decked clothing will go is rather difficult to say.

The Spider Men of New York.

—A "Web" of Iron and Steel Which They "Spin" in Perfect Safety —and "Moldy Cracks Called Streets" Full of "Bugs."

"Waiting for a girder to come up and connect me with the rest of the structure."

As Told by Jimmy Clancy

Iron and Steel Construction Worker.

SPIDER MAN?—Who, me? Well, I guess that's right. I'm a spider man, and the iron and steel construction of New York's sky-scrapers is the web that I and my comrades spin.

Now you mention it, that's the way New York looks to me when I'm straddling a girder as it swings into place five hundred feet above the sidewalk, getting my web ready for you bugs crawling about down below.

When I'm up there where I belong, spinning my web, that's how you look—just like bugs. Up there I'm safe—as like a spider. Looks risky to you? Say, did you ever see a spider fall? Of course not. He's all right up there in his web where he belongs. It's only when the spider goes doping about on the ground that he's in danger—liable to get stepped on see?

Well, that's how we spider men feel—nervous as cats when we're on the ground. Afraid of being stepped on.

Every time I knock off work and get down on the level I feel like I was taking my life in my hands, walking such swarms of people. Coming out of the subway, automobiles, trolley cars, in a coal hole. It's enough to give a person the heebie-jeebies.

Up there on my web there's elbow room. I'm up so high there's nothing to fall on me, and you folks in the street are so far down that you don't look any more than so many tumble bugs.

You say I'm crazy and couldn't give me a seat on the top of the Metropolitan tower. Well, I'll bet I can get a seat placed in position on a corner of the Metropolitan tower. Anybody going to step on me? Not on your life.

You get dizzy? Use the 'girl trolley cars'

Say, there's nothing in that dizzy stuff. It's all a bone-head proposition—solid ivory. Does it make you dizzy to walk across a floor on one board a foot wide? Do you fall off that board? Course you don't. You don't need the other boards on each side of you at all. Get that idea in your head and you're just as safe walking a girder five hundred feet up in the air.

Say, any girl can do it. Remember those two chorus girls that did the dance on the top floor level of the Singer Building tower? They got out and hung by their hands from the end of a girder, with six hundred feet of air between their feet and solid bottom—remember that? I was there and saw it. Never feased 'em.

A lot safer than dancing on a theatre stage. Say, how many actors have been killed or crippled on the stage by having things fall on 'em? That's the answer. Get up with the spider men, where there's nothing but the blank to fall on you!

In fact, I'm sure your streets are terribly reckless. I mean it gives a spider man heart failure to think of it. Just look at the people you jam into passenger elevator cars. Packed like sardines, and into express elevators and trust to luck that the cables don't break. Every time you hang on a strap in the subway I did it once when I was in a fool hurry to get to Harlem. Never again—not for Nicky Mac!

Then there's getting up and down. Some of the ends of a chain we're using now I told Tom Kennedy at the top of the Singer tower I'd as swinging clear for fifty feet, and nothing to do but take in the view from Atlantic Highlands to Yonkers, and Jamaica Bay to the Orange Mountains over in Jersey.

It's a combination of a map and a moving picture—boats moving up and down on two rivers, cars crawling up and down and crosswise in half the streets of Manhattan while I with my six feet in space hooks go dangling aloft like a spider and no danger of being stepped on!

Say, the doctors and the newspapers are always giving you advice about fresh air. Their points of fresh air they tell you.

Ha, ha! It makes me laugh to think of it, as I sit on the top of a steel column, on a level with the Brooklyn Bridge towers waiting for a girder to come up and connect me with the rest of the structure. Up where I am there's fresh air for you! You don't have to go to the trouble of breathing. Open your mouth and you get fresh air at the rate of forty miles an hour.

And all the time I'm watching you bugs—"fresh air" cranks—tumbling over each other in the dark bottoms of those moldy cracks they call streets. Gee! all I'm afraid of is that some crank Mayor will come along with a law stopping new buildings down below the fortieth story. Where'll the spider man be then? Not high enough to keep you from breathing in fresh air.

You're right. It's time for more New York. What do you bugs down there in the bottom of those dark

"With my two feet in those hooks I go dangling aloft like a spider—and no danger of being stepped on!"

cracks you call streets know about New York, anyway? You can hardly see further than the ends of your noses in any direction. You go groping about all day, and are dragged through the subway at night. Maybe once a year or so you walk across the Brooklyn Bridge, or take a ferry across the Hudson. This gives you an idea of a bit of downtown skyline, and that's about all.

Any one of us spider men could draw from memory a fairly accurate map of Manhattan Island, the two rivers that bound it, and the general features of the whole of Greater New York.

It's a picture photographed through our eyes on our brain every working day of our lives. It's a grand picture, too! I tell you, little old New York is a bigger wonder every time you see it while you dangle from a derrick tackle ten or twelve stories above the top of the Wall Street district.

Sundays you're riveting trusses four or five hundred feet up in the air, catching 'em red hot in a bucket from the tongs of your mate forty feet away, and they're coming now. You don't find time heavy on your hands with that map of little old New York spread out far below you.

You're a spider man—and that's YOUR New York. Nobody else has any share in it to speak of. And I tell you right here, it's worth having!

"Say, any girl can do it! There's nothing in that 'dizzy' stuff!"

A Remarkable Photograph from the Thirtieth Story of a Sky Scraper. To Get Its Best Effect, Lay the Page on the Floor and Look Down On It.

Looking Into Your Lungs

MOST people nowadays have learned that successful warfare on the "White Scourge"—consumption—depends mainly on an early and correct diagnosis. As the lungs are invisible, ordinarily tuberculosis may not manifest its presence with certainty until the disease is too far advanced to be controlled by any means now known.

Recently new hope has been given to victims of this dread disease by improvements in the X-ray apparatus which make that instrument capable of revealing to its operator the very earliest appearance of the germs of consumption.

Long before the sounds obtained by tapping on the lungs, listening through the stethoscope, and even the wonderful tuberculin test, can prove the presence of the tubercle bacillus, the X-rays can warn the examining physician of the undermining process which is going on deep in the lungs.

So accurate have been the results obtained that a careful X-ray examination of the chest is now the routine treatment for all new lung cases, the symptoms of which give the slightest difficulty to the examining physicians in the receiving wards.

The patient takes his place on a bicycle seat fixed on a pedestal. Close to his back is a large black box which can be raised or lowered, or swung to one side or the other, by a delicate system of balancing weights, in the X-ray room. All but a small area of its luminous surface is protected by a lead glass screen, so that only a narrow stream of light falls on the patient's back. When the patient is in position the examiner puts on a pair of thick lead glass spectacles to protect his eyes, pulls over his hands a large pair of lead impregnated gloves, and wheels into position between himself and the patient a thick lead screen four feet in height.

With a movement of his foot he touches a button and the room is in absolute darkness. Then he waits ten minutes until his eyes get used to the darkness, for experience has taught that after the eyes have become thoroughly accustomed to the absence of white light the sensibility of the retina to the light of the fluorescent X-ray screen is increased from fifty to two hundred times.

With another touch of the foot the X-ray current is turned on and the bones and tissues of the patient's chest are visible on the screen. The upper parts of the lungs, the points most likely to be attacked first by tuberculosis, are then carefully studied. The patient is told to empty his lungs of air by slowly exhaling his breath. The lung tissues become more pervious to the rays and the whole surface brightens in color.

The failure of any portion of the lung to brighten evenly with the rest of the tissues shows some abnormality and strongly suggests deficient air entry to the part, one of the earliest signs of consumption.

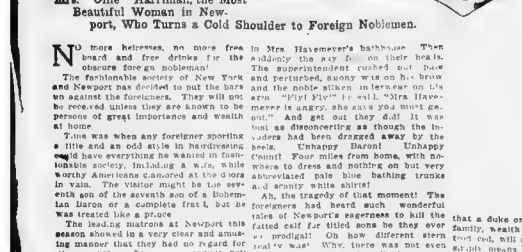
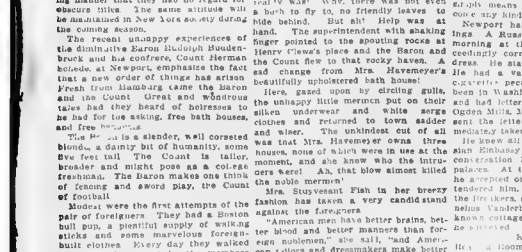
Bars up to Those Penniless, Heiress Pursuing Nobles.

Society Bars— Not Their Favorite Ones, Oh Dear No!— And Here Is Why.

Mrs. "Ollie" Harriman, the Most Beautiful Woman in Newport, Who Turns a Cold Shoulder to Foreign Noblemen.

"No more heiresses, no more free board and free drinks for the obscure foreign nobleman!"





"It was just as disconcerting as though the invaders had been dragged away by the heels."

The Haughty Mrs Harry Havemeyer, Who Contemptuously Ordered the Nobility Out of Her Bath House.

NO more heiresses, no more free board and free drinks for the obscure foreign nobleman!

The fashionable society of New York and Newport has decided to put the bars up against the foreigners. They will not be received unless they are known to be persons of great importance and wealth at home.

Time was when any foreigner sporting a title and an odd style in hairdressing could have everything he wanted in fashionable society, including a wife, while worthy Americans clamored at the doors in vain. The visitor might be the seventh son of the seventh son of a Bohemian Baron or a complete fraud, but he was treated like a prince.

The leading matrons at Newport this season showed in a very clear and amusing manner that they had no regard for obscure titles. The same attitude will be maintained in New York society during the coming season.

The recent unhappy experiences of the diminutive Baron Rudolph Buddenbrock and his confrere, Count Herman Behelde, at Newport, emphasize the fact that a new order of things has arisen. Fresh from Hamburg came the Baron and the Count. Great and wondrous tales had they heard of heiresses to be had for the asking, free bath houses, and free boarding.

The Baron is a slender, well corseted blonde, a dainty bit of humanity, some five feet tall. The Count is taller, broader and might pose as a college freshman. The Baron makes one think of fencing and sword play, the Count of football.

Modest were the first attempts of the pair of foreigners. They had a Boston bull pup, a plentiful supply of walking sticks and some marvelous foreign-built clothes. Every day they walked in the shadow cast by the members of the Circus Set. They yearned with all their noble souls to be admitted to the tonsorial circle. But unluckily, ridicule was cast upon them by the haughty Mrs. Harry Havemeyer, and crimes may be lived down, but ridicule never!

The Baron and the Count wearied of bathing with the hot police at Easton's Beach, and one day in Mrs. Havemeyer's absence they persuaded the superintendent at Bailey's Beach to let them enter that sacred demesne. They were having a beautiful swim, their ambitions satisfied for the nonce and their heavily silken underwear and white serge clothes hanging on brass hooks in Mrs. Havemeyer's bathhouse. Then suddenly the sky fell on their heads.

The superintendent rushed out pale and perturbed, sweat was on his brow and the noble silken underwear on his arm. "Fly! Fly!" he said. "Mrs. Havemeyer is angry, she says you must get out." And get out they did! It was just as disconcerting as though the invaders had been dragged away by the heels. Unhappy Baron! Unhappy Count! Four miles from home, with nowhere to dress and nothing on but very abbreviated pale blue bathing trunks and scanty white shirts!

Ah, the tragedy of that moment! The foreigners had heard such wonderful tales of Newport's eagerness to kill the fatted calf for titled sons he they ever so prodigal! Oh how different stern reality was! Why, there was not even a bush to fly to, no friendly leaves to hide behind. But ah! Help was at hand. The superintendent with shaking finger pointed to the spouting rocks at Henry Clews's place and the Baron and the Count flew to that rocky haven. A dress change from Mrs. Havemeyer's beautifully upholstered bath house!

Here, gazed upon by circling gulls, the unhappy little mermen put on their silken underwear and white serge clothes and returned to town sadder and wiser. The unkindest cut of all was that Mrs. Havemeyer owns three houses, none of which were in use at the moment, and she knew who the intruders were! Ah, that blow almost killed the noble mermen!

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish in her breezy fashion has taken a very candid stand against the foreigners.

"American men have better brains, better blood and better manners than foreign noblemen," she said, "and American tailors and dressmakers make better clothes than foreigners."

Mrs. Ollie Harriman, generally considered the handsomest woman in society, is hopelessly snubbed in Newport and found an ill-fated bride in Pittsburg.

There were splendid pickings for needy noblemen in the days when the foreign Embassies held their Summer posts in Newport. It then earned its title of Summer Capital. Of course, the secretaries and various attaches were all of good family, and supposedly honest. They were vouched for by their Governments, but they all had their eyes on the Almighty Dollar and more than one married millions.

Newport has a own cool toward foreign noblemen, partly on account of a close familiarity with the ways of attaches of the foreign legations. One of these young artistocrats, stealing at a fashionable boarding h[illegible] on the town this season, pained the other visitors by the manner in which he seized the bone of a porterhouse steak and worried it. When ever a bone was put on the table, in fact, he leapt upon it like a hungry dog. He also splashed around and other desecrated through his whiskers in a very careless way.

A former attache of the Mexican Embassy in Washington named Civilo Carday, has just been arrested in Berlin for swindling. He was a well known character during his Washington career. He "went everywhere." He was called by courtesy a count, but he was not, of course. He played the social game splendidly, made love to the debutantes, and finally won black looks from the men at the Metropolitan Club, because he told tales out of school. He was recalled by the Mexican Government, and his recent career in Germany speaks for itself.

A German Count once appeared in Newport. His name was Von Hernbridge. He had a real job in some express company, but talked much of his native land and his estates there. He was in this country just to learn business methods. Newport grovelled at his patent leather feet, she dined and wined him. The Count had but to snap his fingers and the little world danced at his bidding. He married Margot Stone. The Countess is living now with her mother in Newport and the Count's name is never mentioned.

One wonderful day seven years ago, a beautiful being appeared on Bellevue avenue. He was tall, slender, dark of eye and dark haired. He had dainty feet, such feet as common clay should never touch. His mustachios were dainty and pointed. He wore a monocle and he was supercilious to a marked degree. Newport looked him over and wondered. Before long some of the men scraped acquaintance with him at Canfield's, and he finally let it be known that he was the Baron Hoffhausen of Germany. He was a desperate gambler. He had travelled through the West and had learned the American game of poker there. He played with some of the old stagers at the Reading Room and won everything in sight. He bluffed old timers like Jimmy Van Alen, Tom Fearing and Robert Gammell. Newport accepted him unquestionably. He was quite the rage. His telephone jingled every hour of the day and the door man at the Pocklee had a hard job during his stay. Mrs. Astor invited him to her August ball, the famous American Beauty dance, the last she ever gave here.

How he did love to prattle about his castle and how he would sigh for a wife to reign over that castle.

"My heart will break," he would murmur into the debutante's ear, "I do not go home this year." The Baron Hoffhausen made no bones about his poverty. His own ancestral castle was good enough for any number of new American millions. He looked very raw for him, when one day some one took him down to Bailey's Beach to join the morning walk.

The Baron's figure did not show up well in bathing togs, his lovely black hair floated off on a rude wave and his legs were somewhat thinner than a hoopskirt. When his hair floated off he gave a mad dive, coming up with his noble mouth full of water and terror in his eyes. He never got over it. He left Newport the night and the last thing heard of him was that he had returned to his German castle unhonored and unsung.

Having had so many rude shocks Newport looked very coldly on the Marquis of Torre Hermosa, who appeared not long ago. All sorts of stories floated around Newport during the Marquis's first week. His title was all right, but there was still something to be desired.

Billy Brokaw and his beautiful black sloop, the Sybarite, saved the nobleman's life many a time. The Sybarite always had an extra bed for him, and he spent many wonderful days a-sailing the waters blue with "Billy" Brokaw and his set. Queer tales filtered into Newport from Jamestown, Saunderstown and Narragansett Pier when the Sybarite anchored between cruises up the bay and Sound.

Saunderstown, the quiet little hamlet where Owen Wister, Grant La Farge and Mrs. Wells Mitchell have their homes, had an exciting experience one Sunday afternoon. It may figure in Mr. Wister's new book. The "Sybby," as the yacht is commonly known, anchored off the La Farge cottage and sent a boatload of luncheon guests ashore. They were very happy. The most conspicuous one was the tall Marquis. He measures six feet two inches, is very dark, and has all the hallmarks of an oldtime stage villain. The party of the party. Oh, they had a lovely time! woke the quiet hamlet and kept it awake.

The ferry for Newport was late; the Marquis looked pe sive and said, "Let's Foreigners get busy, and the noble Spanpay leaps da-frogs!" guid no longer chose the Queen City for

And they leaped. The Marquis played a resting place. da frogs," and the men—and women. All these incidents have led Newport to too—tired to "leaps." Some succeeded others failed. One blonde girl landed on ing noblemen. The tragedies and near the noble Spaniard's back, and he went tragedies of the last fifty years will not Marquis. He measures six feet two inches, fail. Then he ambled over the lawn on be duplicated in the future. Newport and his hands and knees, snapping at the feet her sister cities know too much now, and of the girls. Oh, they had a lovely time! the Society for the Suppression of Foolish

But when Newport heard the story, the Foreigners has branches in every port of

Then a duke or a prince of unquestioned family, wealth and position, properly introduced, will not be received kindly. It simply means that society will not welcome any kind of nobleman.

Newport had several rude awakenings. A Russian Prince appeared one morning at the Casino. He was exceedingly correct in his manners and dress. He stayed at the Stevens villa. He had a valet, a blooded dog and cigarettes peculiar to Russia. He had been in Washington the Winter before and had letters of introduction to Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. Astor and others. He sent the letters by mail and was immediately taken up by the Cliff Dwellers.

He knew all the members of the Russian Embassy in Washington and his conversation bristled with titles and palaces. At the end of the third day he accepted one of the ten invitations tendered him. He spent one week at the Breakers, as the guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, dined at every well-known cottage and was monarch of all he surveyed.

Kane put him up at the [illegible] Room and he soon found his way to Beck Canfield's Bath Road Club. For three weeks he lived in clover. He never paid for one meal and for very few nights' lodgings.

He returned all the favors by giving a large dinner. Sherry did the catering and the Prince did the rest. [illegible] very too.

The day after the wonderful party the Prince left town, leaving his dog, his new friends and all his bills behind him. When Newport took account of stock the Queen City found that the Prince had cost her several thousand dollars.

Luckily he had not courted any particular girl. He had made love collectively, not individually, so that no fair maiden was compromised. The affair made a tremendous sensation, but Newport did her best to suppress the worst features and tried to laugh it off. The Prince, it soon became known, had been a valet in the employ of a secretary of the Russian Embassy.

Just about this time there was an enterprising man who made a regular business of supplying Newport with titles. It was a perfectly safe business. He knew that Newporters, like many other people, enjoyed being fooled part of the time. He took titles of petty German, Austrian and Italian noblemen and got men to suit the titles. The original holders of the titles never travelled far from home and at that time Newporters were not apt to invade out of the way places. The motor car has driven the poor man out of business.

All sorts and conditions of noblemen have tried their hand at "bouncing" Newport. The "fakes" have not been so plentiful as the natural born Counts—and no-accounts. If the truth were told, the fakes were frequently better men than many of those who were born to the purple.

There was the noble Earl of Yarmouth, who, in spite of his undoubted lineage, took the same stand against the nobility.

The younger set showed themselves in complete sympathy with the great patriotic movement. Miss Gertrude Sheldon, daughter of George R. Sheldon, the prettiest blond at Newport and a great heiress, too, showed a charming contempt for the foreign noblemen who sought her. She has become engaged to Samuel Stevens Sands, son of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt by her second marriage.

This reform does not mean, of course,

THE [illegible] only increasing cause of infantile paralysis [illegible] disease, most mysterious of diseases which [illegible] baffles a healthy baby in one night—has set every great medical intellect [illegible] United States and Europe in work in the desperate effort to determine the cause of the scourge and its remedy.

Upsetting certain theories held by the medical world this season, the horrifying spread [illegible] related the year [illegible] of the total [illegible] life, three per cent [illegible] enough. For [illegible] infantile paralysis has [illegible] a germ [illegible] it paralyzed [illegible] showed a minimum of [illegible]

Serums have been cleaned in the hope of stopping the spread of the disease, and the same course has been pursued in Washington, D. C., and in other cities, but without very much success. It has also been found that breast-fed babies are liable to be attacked as are bottle fed babies, and that no amount of caution in the matter of food or surroundings prevents the infection.

The New York Medical Journal of [illegible] cases in New York, a added case is due to a very virulent and active poison generated in the intestinal canal.

Whether a poison or a germ, the latest researches have shown that the agent operates entirely on the spinal cord, the cellular nerve structure of which it destroys. It affects only the anterior or forepart of the cord. When its work is done, the nerves surrounding the affected portion are in the same plight as the roots of a tree the soil around which has been poisoned or polluted. The nerves wither, starve and finally die. The muscular portion of the body which they have controlled, deprived of their force and feeding directions, finally withers also. Hence come distorted backs, shrunken arms and legs and twisted faces.

The hospital of which Dr. Frauenthal is the head treats thousands of cases of infantile paralysis a year. By that one means that the hospital treats the after-effects, because, it has cause the blighting cause itself is no subtle that nothing can be done to check it once it has started. The real work of saving comes in after the paroxysm has spent itself. Then begins the task of getting the nerve affected and the muscles that nerve feeds back to normal.

Dr. Frauenthal, from his most recent researches, cannot tell whether a poison or a germ is responsible. But he believes that the poison or germ is generated in the intestinal canal. It then, most probably, is carried by the slight sinews and nerves of the sympathetic system, whose great brain is the solar plexus, to the spinal cord.

In its passage to the front or anterior part it causes the infiltration of blood in the vertebra. Locating in the front of the cord, it breaks down the ganglionic cells, of which the gray matter of the cord is composed, and a "mash" of infantile paralysis is broken cells and blood gathers. Paralysis of limbs, face and other portions of the body controlled or in sympathy with the nerves emanating from the [illegible] of parts follows. If the breaking down is very great, death ensues.

The Rockefeller Institute surgeons are still convinced that a minute germ is responsible for the disease. But they admit that although various bacteria have from time to time been isolated in cultures from the fluid obtained by puncturing the lumbar section of the spinal column of patients suffering from the disease, or from specimens of the central nervous system removed at autopsy, these germs did not conform to any one species of micro-organisms and were unable to reproduce the disease in animals. Dr. Flexner believes they are to be regarded more as secondarily invading bacteria than as the cause of the disease itself.

The bacteria cannot be found in the blood of children suffering from the disease, nor from one who has died from it. But about a year ago the Institute secured the spinal cord from two cases of fatal paralysis in children, and elaborate experiments have since been conducted upon animals. As a result, Dr. Flexner concludes that the virus of epidemic poliomyelitis obtained from the spinal cord when introduced into the body by means of either the brain, the blood, subcutis, peritoneum, spinal canal or large nerves, tends to localize in the spinal cord and brain and produce typical infantile paralysis.

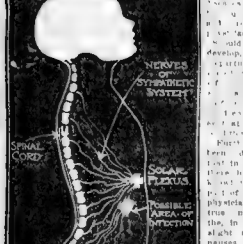
Experiments made to produce infection by feeding the virus to monkeys were unsuccessful. It was also determined that not only the spinal cord itself, but the fluid contained in the spinal column of a person suffering from the disease is capable of setting up the disease in animals. The blood of infants suffering from the disease injected into monkeys uniformly failed to produce paralysis.

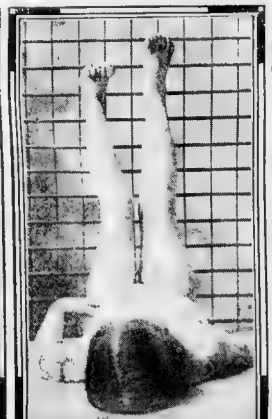
Dr. Flexner found that the abnormal conditions in the spine and medulla oblongata were visible to the naked eye and consist of congestion and hemorrhages of blood in the gray matter chiefly, although the white matter was also similarly affected to a certain degree. The severest lesions occur at the points in the spinal cord corresponding to the most marked paralysis of muscle groups.

Another interesting conclusion arrived at from these experiments by the surgeons at the Rockefeller Institute is that immunity is afforded by an attack of the disease, and no patient can have it twice.

It is a curious fact that although scientists succeeded in producing the disease in eighty-one monkeys [illegible] inoculated with the spinal virus, they were unable to produce similar results with other animals.

It is certain that as far as prevention of the disease is concerned, while the after paralysis is on a par of its treatment, while the after paralysis is on a par success is as far away as ever it was. But [illegible] that the effects of paralysis can be cured. To say that they can be cured in all cases would be [illegible] but in the war against such a devastating [illegible] terious disease as this, the fact that the last of the cord affected can be relieved of its [illegible] the cells can be restored and with them [illegible] nerves and withered limbs, is warrant that some [illegible] medical science will be able to wipe out all the effects of this [illegible] science even if it is not able to prevent the plague from striking.





The Diagram at the Top Shows Probable Course of Infection from Intestines Through Sympathetic Nervous System Controlled by the Solar Plexus and Communicating with the Spinal Cord. Right, Infantile Paralysis Victim with Withered Right Arm Showing Excellent Results After Three Months' Treatment. Next, Exercise to Restore the Nerve Force and the Muscular Action to Paralyzed Left Leg of Another Victim. Last, How Paralysis Has Withered the Left Side of a Boy of Ten After Eight Years.

THE causes of infantile paralysis are so obscure that no one can rightfully claim that he knows them. The study of a very large number of cases has convinced me that it is due to a very virulent and active poison generated in the intestinal canal, which filtrates into the spinal cord and there brings about [illegible]lysis, and sometimes death.

It is of primary importance that children should have the best possible food, in a sanitary condition. The fact that infantile paralysis is a warm weather disease points directly to the fact that it is due to some chemical changes in the food brought about by the weather and acting as a poison upon the child-system.

The symptoms, such as fever, vomiting, pain in the bowels and diarrhoea, are well known, and the careful physician, noting these symptoms, examines at once for paralysis and treats the case accordingly.

We may rest assured from clinical deductions along [illegible] that there is hyperemia—abnormal accumulation of blood—of the spinal cord, which has the effect of inhibiting temporarily or actually destroying certain ganglion cells in the anterior horns of the [illegible] part of the spinal cord. These cells [illegible] nerves as well as motor function and [illegible] to them gives rise not only to certain paralysis, but to impeded circulation and arrest of growth.

The high frequency current used along the spinal column to contract the vessels in the cord and overcome congestion and compression of the nerve cells should be administered after the paroxysm. No drugs, adrenalin, ergot, etc., can do this as efficiently as high frequency electric current.

To prevent the muscle fibre from atrophying, while resolution in the cord is taking place, the sinusoidal current is most efficient; hand and mechanical massage will assist in preventing wasting.

The [illegible] treatment should consist of sinusoidal electricity and high frequency for five minutes, to the point of tolerance, followed by a uniform interrupted galvanic current, having mounted the anodes in a ten per cent solution of strychnine nitrate. The galvanic interrupted current should be given for about seven minutes. In the application of the electric current it is very important that the origin and insertion of the affected muscles treated should be as closely approximated as possible to obtain the best effect.

Most of the massage treatment given to affected children consists of rubbing the skin or moving the skin on the underlying fascia. To obtain the result desired and do the most efficient work, we grasp between the thumb and first finger all the tissue between the skin and bone, and by a process of pressing and milking, going from the extremity toward the body, the veins and lymphatics are emptied and elimination and assimilation improved. Deep kneading and striking with the back of the first phalanx add to produce hyperemia. Vibration prop rly given is a good substitute for massage. By such an application of thorough massage the temperature of the skin is raised from one to three degrees.

Before retiring the alternate application of hot and cold water improves the vitality of the affected limb.

In children over three years great benefit is derived from a systematic, rhythmic drill before a mirror or by going through a series of movements which compel the child to concentrate its attention on the physical effort.

The child is made to contract and relax the muscles involved, or if there is an inability to do this muscular effort, the nurse aids the child to go through each movement slowly, but keeps his attention concentrated on the effort.

One of the prevailing errors of the present treatment of infantile paralysis is the locking up the limb in plaster boots, etc., which simply increases the atrophy (or wasting) of the affected muscles.

The application of braces should be [illegible] locomotion and prevent deformity.

"YOU SAVED MY WIFE—MARRY ME TOO FOR YOUR REWARD!"

The Maharajah of Kapurthala.

Calcutta, Aug. 19.

HASTILY and somewhat mysteriously, Miss Virginia MacDonald the beautiful Canadian-American guest of the Viceroy and Countess of Minto, has ended her visit to British India and sailed for home. About the time this reaches you she is due to meet relatives in Canada, to whom, doubtless, she will relate her extraordinary experiences in the domain of the Maharajah of Kapurthala, before proceeding to Texas, where her parents are now located—not far from Dallas.

Outside of the family of the Viceroy—including the Countess and their charming daughter, Lady Eileen Elliot—probably there are not half a dozen persons at this seat of British-Indian Government who know the secret of Miss MacDonald's sudden desire to return to America.

Her reason, however, is no secret to the Maharanee of Kapurthala—that dazzlingly beautiful creature who, not so long ago, danced in the cafes of Malaga, Spain, while her father sold roasted chestnuts outside. Indeed, the former Anita Delgado is wiser even than Miss MacDonald herself, the Maharanee's ready wits having extricated the beautiful American girl from the dilemma which so nearly added her to the ranks of the Maharajah's secondary wives.

This particular Indian potentate, as you have known ever since his visit to America and his ardent suit for the hand of Mrs. George Law, is a well educated, widely traveled man of the world, quite at home, and a real acquisition in the best society of London and Paris. It is true that the Oriental in him lies always close to the surface, as when he gave the Malaga chestnut vendor $30,000 to let him make a Maharanee of his dancing daughter. Another can it be denied that, up toward the head waters of the Ghara River, tributary of the mighty Indus, where Lahore is the Indian metropolis, the Maharajah has a magnificent new palace which includes a harem containing—according to common report—something like half a hundred common or garden wives, besides his Spanish-born Maharanee.

When in Calcutta, however, the Maharajah is apparently no more numerously wived than his friend the Viceroy, being accompanied only by his Maharanee. It was in such circumstances that Miss Virginia MacDonald, Canadian-American girl chum of Lady Eileen Elliot, met him and, at the Maharanee's expressed wish, accepted his urgent invitation to be a guest at his new palace built by celebrated French architects.

Accordingly, Miss MacDonald was presently amid the scenes of an adventure to her more amazing than any of which she had read in the Arabian Nights' Entertainments.

She had her own suite of rooms quite near the private apartments of her sworn friend, the Maharanee—rooms fitted with every modern convenience and with more than modern European luxury. Here the four sweet-faced dusky little sons of the Maharajah were brought to visit her—for they were being reared in the royal Oriental manner and had no part in the almost English domestic life of the Maharajah and Maharanee.

The Maharajah was fond of telling of his travels. He recalled his meeting in Paris with Thomas Ross Winans, who had lately married Victoria Delgado, sister of his Maharanee, and his own oft-quoted remark that Mr. Winans and himself possessed as wives "twin pearls of women."

It was all very pleasant, and Miss MacDonald was soon as much at ease as in her own Texas home. Then, quite suddenly came the awakening.

The Maharajah's stables were filled with thoroughbred driving and saddle horses. One of the latter—a magnificent Arabian—was allotted to Miss MacDonald.

One day the Maharajah proposed a hunt for a species of small deer in a neighboring forest. So the trio were presently off, armed with rifles of American make, and in the highest spirits. Entering the forest, the Maharajah and Miss MacDonald were riding in front, the Maharanee following a few furlongs behind. All ceremony had been discarded. So when Miss MacDonald wished to dismount and pluck with her own hand some beautiful flowers growing a little way back from the bridle path, the Maharajah simply rode on slowly, without comment.

Tossing her bridle rein over a low branch, Miss MacDonald busied herself gathering flowers. She heard the Maharanee approaching on her horse and looked up to greet her. At that instant she saw, crouching beside the path a wild beast with the yellowish, striped skin of the tiger species.

She recognized it as a cheetah—from having seen the tamed and harmless variety in the royal stables, kept for hunting hares. But this one was wild, and dangerous! The thought caused Miss MacDonald instinctively to bring her rifle to her shoulder. It was not a moment too soon. The cheetah had sprung.

Miss MacDonald fired just as the savage beast was landing behind the saddle of the Maharanee. The latter's shriek of fear followed close on the rifle's report. The beast had hardly fallen to the ground, shot through the head, when the Maharajah came back at a gallop, saw the smoking rifle of the American girl, the dead beast almost under the feet of his wife's horse—and understood that Miss MacDonald had saved the Maharanee's life.

He tried to express his gratitude, but was voiceless all the world knows that the Maharajah of Kapurthala adores his Spanish consort.

There was no further thought of the hunt. Back they rode toward the palace, Miss MacDonald having the place of honor at the Maharajah's side. Suddenly the Maharanee, being some paces in advance of them—he seized her hand and burst out:

"You saved my wife's life. Marry me for your reward!"

Imagine the American girl's consternation. All at once, without warning, the Oriental, the barbarous side of her surroundings was turned toward her. She felt that harem she had heard about opening to receive her. The Spanish woman's proud position existed only at the pleasure of this autocrat. Her exemption from the fate of those half a hundred imprisoned women in some remote part of the palace would be even harder. Yet, so far from any Christian influence in this same old India, how could she dare to repulse the ruler in whose absolute power she was?

She was confused, she stammered and was so embarrassed that the Maharajah was touched and said:

"Not now—more of this to-night, when you are composed."

There was no lagging of events now! That very evening after dinner the Maharajah visited her in the drawing-room of her suite, carrying in his own hands an immense jewel casket, from which he showered upon her gems of inestimable beauty and value which were to be "not a part of what she would own as 'best-beloved wife, saviour of the Maharanee.'" Like a Faust in real life, the Maharajah tempted her with priceless jewels.

Poor Miss MacDonald could only entreat the Maharajah for more time in which to reflect upon the great honor offered to her.

Within an hour Miss MacDonald had another visitor. It was the Maharanee, who looked upon her mournfully, and asked her to come and see a seldom-exhibited curiosity belonging to the "possessions of the harem." Miss MacDonald followed her silent hostess to a distant, gloomy chamber upon whose wall hung an immense scimetar. The Maharanee took the weapon in her small hands, and looked fixedly at her guest.

"Tula," said the Maharanee, "is the very scimetar that severed the head from the body of the last royal favorite of whom he had tired."

Miss MacDonald, in what terror can be imagined, fell on her knees at the feet of the Maharanee.

"Save me!" she said. "You have divined my awful dilemma, and you alone can extricate me. Save me—as lately I saved you from a fate but little less terrible!"

It will be seen that the Maharanee, though grateful to her rescuer, had no intention of unduly submitting to the Maharajah's wish of "marriage." Now she felt that she could do nothing to fear so far as Miss MacDonald was concerned, and knew that the plans she had already made could not miscarry.

"I will save you!" she said. "I will save you for a—a—a—" she said of wise counsel would await. Just outside the great gate. Come with me."

It was now clear enough to Miss MacDonald had already observed that the Maharanee's slightest gesture was so promptly obeyed by officers and servants of the palace as that of the Maharajah himself. So she was not surprised when, without a word from the mistress of the palace, every door opened as they approached it.

It was the same with the great gates. Miss MacDonald felt the fullest confidence in the Maharanee's power to save her. What now occurred so amazed her that she was powerless to utter a sound.

As the Maharanee approached her through the gates she was suddenly confronted by two burly ruffians in the hands of one was a scimetar. Before she realized what had happened she felt herself lifted up—then an acrid odor in her nostrils. Then nothingness.

A roar of wheels on iron tracks was Miss MacDonald's next sensation. She opened her eyes and found herself in bed with the luxurious appointments of a private railway car all about her. A neatly dressed native waiting-woman was fanning her gently.

"Where am I—where am I going?" she asked.

In slightly broken English the woman answered:

"To Calcutta"—and went on with her fanning.

As her mind cleared all was plain to Miss MacDonald. The Maharanee had saved her by having her kidnapped, and sent on her way—as comfortably as possible—to her friends in Calcutta, trusting her to discreetly forget the whole incident.

It is no reproach to Miss MacDonald's discretion that the facts are stated now. The incident was a bit too sensational, even in India, to be kept entirely unexploited during the interval before Miss MacDonald took passage for America.

"Miss MacDonald fired just as the savage beast was landing."

"Like a Faust, the Maharajah tempted her with priceless jewels."

Miss Virginia MacDonald, the Canadian-American Girl Who Saved the Life of the Maharanee.

"She was suddenly confronted by two burly ruffians."

"The very scimetar that severed the head of the last royal favorite."

WAR'S NEWEST TERRORS

The New Gigantic Searchlight for Use in Discovering War Aeroplanes.

GENERAL SHERMAN is the author of the tersest, most descriptive definition of war ever made. "War," said General Sherman, is hell!"

Quite recently an immense and extraordinary stimulus in the invention of death-dealing implements of battle has been shown. Much of this impetus is due to the arrival of the aeroplane, with its tremendous epoch-changing possibilities. But a greater part is due to man's feeling that war is a thing which should be settled as soon as possible.

The days of heroic hand-to-hand encounters are past; so is the romance—the false romance—the monstrous pride that delights in blood-soaked battlefields, mangled bodies and darkened homes.

Mankind has come to the conclusion that if it MUST have war, it is best to have that war as effective and as short as possible. Hence the new guns which send cyclones of bullets sweeping over the fields, the gas-filled bombs which can kill every living thing within a radius of five hundred yards, the new gas-driven battleships whose sole purpose is to destroy—the hundred and one Titanic and Satanic creations of the mind of man.

And yet by these means mankind is moving swiftly on to the day when its inventions will make impossible any further war.

New Weapons That Make War Impossible.

EVERY day the invention is announced of some new and fearfully death dealing instrument of war.

Chemistry has hitherto played a minor part in war but it will certainly play an important one in the future. Poisonous and suffocating gases will be largely used.

The Krupps, who supply guns to the German Empire and to half the world besides, have invented a terrible weapon known as the bomb gun. It fires a huge, very brittle bomb containing 160 pounds of chemicals. As it bursts, it fills the air with poisonous gases, in which no human being can live. The gases from one bomb will kill everything within a radius of 500 yards. This weapon, it is said, will make it impossible for soldiers to remain in open trenches.

In experiments on animals with the bombs it was found that the fumes turned them green. The men who are killed by them in war will therefore be left with green skins and hair.

The aeroplane is admittedly destined to introduce an exciting element in the warfare of the future. As a means of spying on the enemy and incidentally attacking him, it will have great value. It will add enormously to the discomforts of the soldier. He will never have an hour's rest, for an enemy swift as the wind may flash through the air above him at any moment and drop a bomb on him.

It is extremely difficult to hit an aeroplanist at a height, but scientists are working on several weapons to accomplish this end. The Japanese army is experimenting with a bomb that will fill the air with poisonous gases at any desired height and thus make the aeroplanist tumble unconscious to the ground.

The Krupps have produced several weapons for shooting at air vessels. One of these is mounted on a tremendously powerful automobile. The gun can be fired in a vertical position straight up into the air. The recoil is taken up by a combination of springs, which is naturally kept secret.

This gun solves a problem which has hitherto baffled artillerists—the problem of firing vertically into the air. United States naval officers still assert that it is impossible to mount such a gun on a ship, because the recoil would wreck the vessel.

Many new problems are faced by European experts in constructing guns to fight airships. In firing at an object on the earth it is easy to aim the gun so that the shell will hit the ground and explode near a certain spot, but when firing into the air it must explode spontaneously near the airship. The charge must be regulated exactly to carry a certain distance. If it is too light the shell may come back and land among the firers and destroy the gun and its operators.

Indeed, it seems certain that in future warfare against air vessels the guns will often be destroyed by their own projectiles returning to the earth. A very heavy charge is needed to carry a projectile high into the air, and it returns with corresponding violence.

Aviators up to a height of 3,000 feet may be destroyed by the present weapons, but above that they are reasonably safe.

The French army is studying a method of bringing down the aviator by an electrical lightning like discharge directed at the metal work of his machine.

An inventor has offered the Government a gun for shooting aeroplanes, specially adapted to use on shipboard. This gun will project above the deck when fired and then drop completely out of sight.

The United States army is also experimenting with a novel bomb that will be serviceable in assisting aviators in war. This bomb can be sent up to any desired height up to three thousand feet. On exploding it produces a cloud of smoke by day or a blaze of light at night. The smoke or light remains visible and, if there is no wind, in the same position for about half an hour. Thus it will guide an aviator on his way and enable him to fly at night over an enemy's territory into his own lines.

Immense progress is being made with quick firing machine guns, which literally throw out eyelones of bullets. It seems that a point must soon be reached, if it has not already been reached, when these guns will make it impossible for soldiers to advance in the open.

The other day it was announced that an automobile gun had been invented in the United States which would throw 2,000 000 bullets an hour. It requires only two men to handle it, and does the work of thirty regiments.

A wonderful machine gun has been introduced in the German army. It throws two hundred bullets a minute. It separates into two parts and is carried by two soldiers, who work it together when it is in action. This little gun does the work of a whole battery of horse artillery.

The French Government has adopted a new type of submarine boat. The new boat has a long, sharp steel projection in front, making the whole affair look like a swordfish. This steel projection can be run through the bottom of a ship and then broken off, releasing a mass of poisonous gases which suffocate the occupants of the ship and make them unable to save their vessel from sinking.

Meanwhile an officer of our own navy, Commander Cleland Davis, has invented a very successful fish torpedo, which contains a gun and fires it on striking the target ship.

Experiments have been in progress for some time in this country looking to the development of a "wireless" dirigible torpedo, which, propelled by compressed air and a screw, will be steered accurately toward an enemy's vessel after it has been discharged. This will be accomplished by the use of a special kind of wireless apparatus, the "sending station" being either on land or on the deck of a ship. It is thought that the movements of such a torpedo, when perfected, ought to be controllable at a distance of five or six miles.

Our army has developed its signalling system far ahead of any other nation. Of course it uses the "wireless" freely, but in battle, or any kind of field operations, it gets rid of all the old-fashioned methods of communicating intelligence, such as heliographing, wigwagging, and the like, by carrying its telegraph and telephone outfit right up to the firing line, or to the advance outposts. Vehicles resembling artillery wagons transport the simple instruments requisite, as well as the wire, which, wound on reels, is paid out behind as fast as four horses can gallop. Thus the commanding general, though many miles distant, is able actually to speak, if he chooses, to the skirmishers who are engaging the enemy.

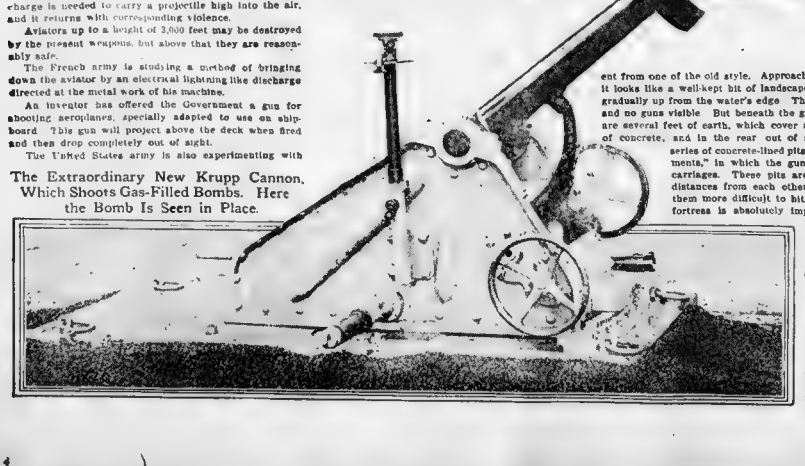
Our new submarine defense system is now nearly completed—a system which provides for the mining of every one of our important harbors, so as to make their channels impassable to the most powerful fleet within forty-eight hours after warning of expected hostilities has been received. The mines used for this purpose are hollow spheres of galvanized iron, filled with either guncotton or dynamite. They are anchored a few feet below the surface, in a series of lines across a channel, thus forming what is called a "mine field." One of them, exploded within seventeen feet of a battleship, will destroy it.

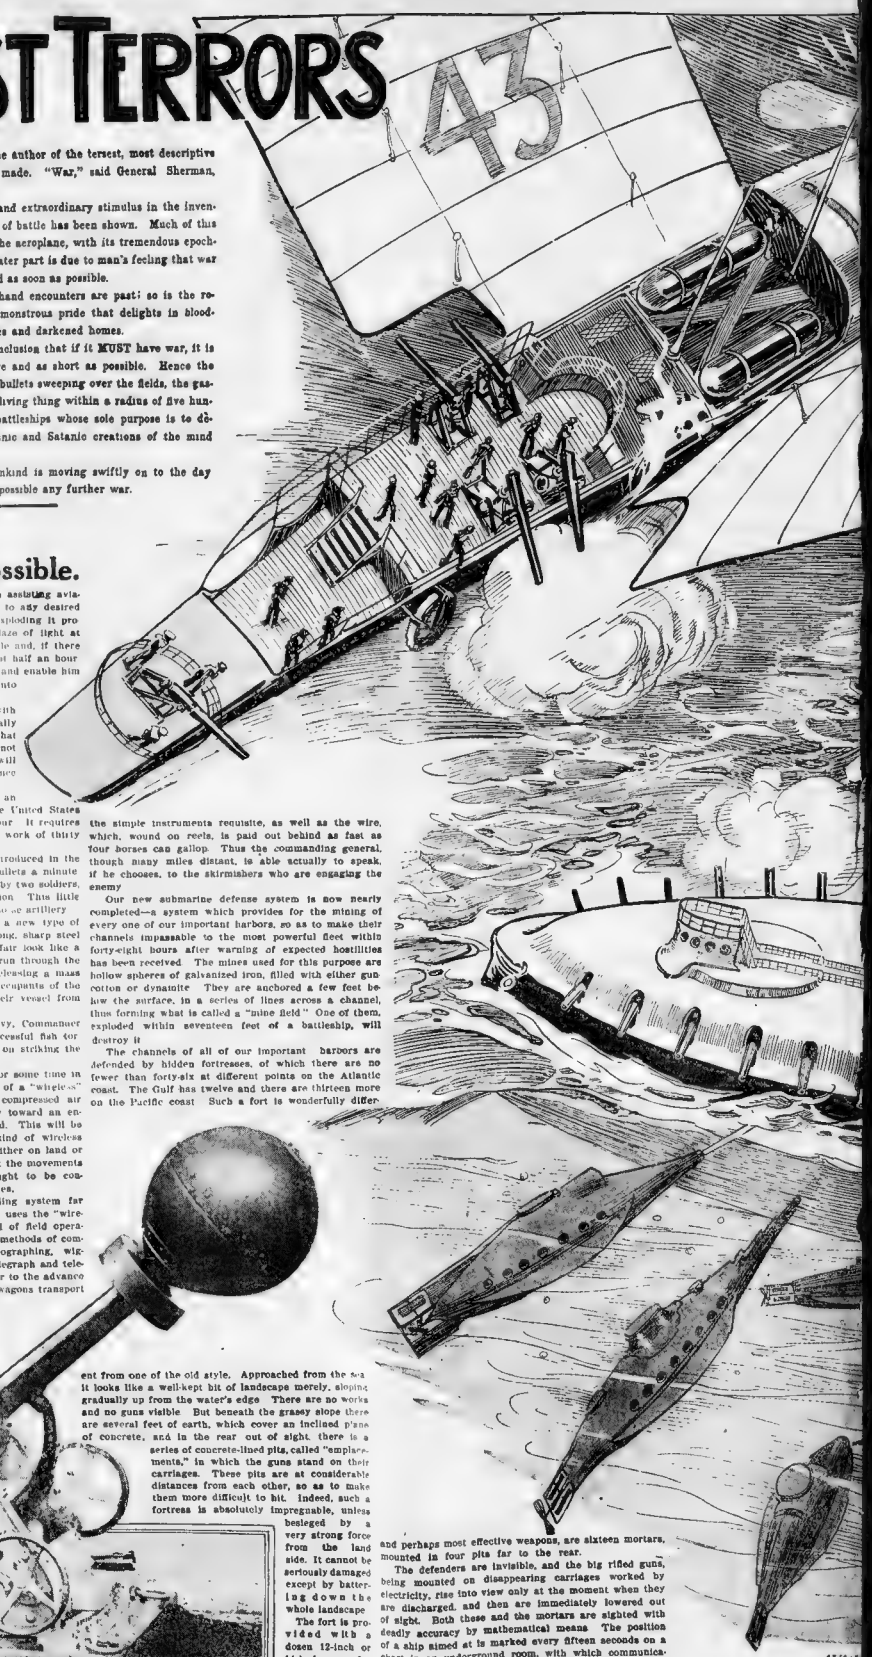
The channels of all of our important harbors are defended by hidden fortresses, of which there are no fewer than forty-six at different points on the Atlantic coast. The Gulf has twelve and there are thirteen more on the Pacific coast. Such a fort is wonderfully different from one of the old style. Approached from the sea it looks like a well-kept bit of landscape merely, sloping gradually up from the water's edge. There are no works and no guns visible. But beneath the grassy slope there are several feet of earth, which cover an inclined plane of concrete, and in the rear out of sight, there is a series of concrete-lined pits, called "emplacements," in which the guns stand on their carriages. These pits are at considerable distances from each other, so as to make them more difficult to hit. Indeed, such a fortress is absolutely impregnable, unless besieged by a very strong force from the land side. It cannot be seriously damaged except by battering down the whole landscape.

The fort is provided with a dozen 12-inch or 14-inch guns for attacking battleships; but its most remarkable and perhaps most effective weapons, are sixteen mortars, mounted in four pits far to the rear.

The defenders are invisible, and the big rifled guns, being mounted on disappearing carriages worked by electricity, rise into view only at the moment when they are discharged, and then are immediately lowered out of sight. Both these and the mortars are sighted with deadly accuracy by mathematical means. The position of a ship aimed at is marked every fifteen seconds on a chart in an underground room, with which communication is maintained (by telegraph and telephone) by observers with telescopes at two widely separated points, whose lines of sight cross each other at the spot where the hostile vessel floats.

The Extraordinary New Krupp Cannon, Which Shoots Gas-Filled Bombs. Here the Bomb Is Seen in Place.





With

Racing Motorboat Battleships Which Fire Twenty Enormous Guns at Once—And Will Send the Billion-Dollar Navies to the Scrap Heap; Bombs Filled with Death-Dealing Gases; Artificial Lightning to Destroy the Fighting Aeroplanes; Submarines to Smother a Ship; Beacon Shells That Lure to Destruction; Bullet Cyclones—Titanic Devices with Which Civilization Is Increasing the Horrors of War and Which May End War FOREVER!

The New Smoke Bombs, Which Mark the Paths for the War Aeroplanes.

THE British Admiralty has decided upon the immediate construction of a first-class battleship with gas engines of the internal explosion type.

This means that all the existing dreadnoughts, all the existing navies of the world must within a short time be thrown to the scrap heap, because an old-fashioned coal and boiler ship will be as much at the mercy of a gas engine ship as a lamb at the mercy of a tiger.

The British experts have been experimenting for some years on the new type of engine, they have installed it successfully on several small cruisers and the fact that they have decided to apply it to a great battleship indicates that they have proved its practicability.

The change may bankrupt the world. England alone has $842,688,740 invested in warships built since 1900. Her ships built during the present year have cost $163,914,980. Only last week a new 26,300 ton, 75,000 horsepower armored cruiser, costing $8,000,000—the Lion—was launched. This and every other existing ship will be rendered obsolete by the new gas engine ship.

So will the ships of all the other Powers be rendered obsolete. The effect of the new invention upon existing warships may well be compared to what would happen among men if a malevolent creature from another planet with infinitely greater powers than man, suddenly appeared on earth.

The value of the warships possessed by the six leading naval powers may be estimated at $5,000,000,000. All the machinery represented by this colossal expenditure must be thrown away, if the gas engine ship proves a success.

The gas engine ship will be relatively invulnerable, will present a target reduced by half to the enemy, and will double the striking power of the same number of guns in the present ships.

Now a great castle-like structure of funnels and ventilators rises to show the enemy where to aim at the vitals of the ship. A shell that penetrates these will cripple the ship. A shell that hits a funnel will litter the deck and kill every man within a certain radius. A shell may drop down the funnel and wreck the engine room. With the gas engine there will be no funnels and ventilators to aim at and wreck, no weak spots where shells may drop through. There will only be a long, low, evenly armored hull marked by steel turrets—a real sea serpent. No spot will be specially vulnerable. A shell striking amidships, instead of landing in a mass of relatively fragile superstructure, will hit a curved steel surface.

Then the guns will be able to fire all round the circle, whereas at present they must fire on one side or the other.

Imagine a ship of the new type carrying twelve 12-inch guns, matched against a dreadnought like the United States ship Arkansas, carrying the same number of guns. All twelve guns of the gas engine ship will be aimed at the dreadnought's vital centre at one instant, while she will only be able to reply with twelve guns and not know where to aim them.

The dreadnought will be helpless. But the new ship will also be able to carry more and bigger guns than the old.

The gas engine ship will also forestall the coming use of aeroplanes in naval war to a considerable degree, for she will present a smaller, less vulnerable target to the aerial antagonist and will be able to mount guns to fire straight into the air. She will shoot all round and overhead as well—everywhere, in fact.

Although it is announced that England will be the first Power to build a ship of the new type, it is known that Germany is working on the same problem.

The British are aiming to solve it by the employment of the gas engine; the Germans are seeking the same end through an oil motor. It is probable that the two great naval rivals will launch their revolutionary ships at nearly the same time.

Germany is believed to have solved her problem. The Diesel oil motor (in the development of which the Kaiser is taking an enthusiastic interest), affords, it is said, much promise. The Hamburg-American line of passenger steamships is now building a boat which is to be driven by two motors of this type, of 1,500 horse power each. If she proves as successful as is hoped, similar engines will be introduced into one or more of the battleships or armored cruisers now in process of construction in German yards.

What is a battleship? Primarily, it is a gun-platform. But, such being the case, it ought, when cleared for action, to be a platform for guns and nothing else. It ought not to get in its own way. The new fighting vessel will be built on this principle. When stripped for a fight there will be nothing above the level of the deck except her turrets and the formidable cannon which, arranged in pairs, those turrets contain.

With the abolition of top hamper there will be room for more guns and complete rearrangement of turrets in the new ship.

The turrets will be on different levels, so as not to interfere with each other's fire. Thus, midway on the deck, and uplifted therefrom relatively high, there will be one great one—a steel, shell-proof citadel, with two 14-inch guns, perhaps, able to throw (as such guns can), 1,400-pound projectiles a distance of twenty-five miles, or as far as from the Battery Park in New York City to Yonkers. There will be several other turrets, possibly housing twenty or more 12-inch weapons.

One battleship of this type could smash half a dozen of the strongest dreadnoughts of to-day. Say, rather, that it will smash them; for it is sure to arrive.

Then there will be the enormously increased areas of fire. Every one of the turret guns of such a craft could fire in a complete circle—that is to say, shoot in any direction. In technical naval parlance, each gun would have a "train" of 360 degrees. Some of the guns on our battleships and cruisers to-day have a "train" of 180 degrees, even 160 degrees, but most of them cover only ninety degrees at utmost.

We shall also probably see a new type of battleship looking like a shiny convex-sided water beetle, which no enemy can hit by horizontal fire.

Steam engines are enormously wasteful of fuel. A modern warship carries enormous quantities of coal; she is obliged to do so. The weight of the coal is a frightful burden, and occupies a great deal of space, which is extremely precious. To take it on board occupies the whole services of the crew for many days during the year. Every cubic foot taken up by fuel on board of a fighting vessel is subtracted from room that is badly needed for other purposes. Here is a noteworthy advantage of oil, or gas, which, carried in tanks, is much less bulky.

Not only the raw material for locomotion, but also the apparatus, will be greatly condensed in the new style battleship. With the huge boilers removed, there will be more room for ammunition. Furthermore, it will be practicable to place the magazines and shell rooms under the turrets, so as to have the benefit of what mechanicians call a "direct hoist." Obviously, the more accessible the ammunition in a fight at sea, the more rapid the stream of projectiles that can be directed against an enemy.

The introduction of the new ship must instantly change the naval programmes of the world, now concentrated on producing dreadnoughts. These monsters cost $8,000,000 apiece. Great Britain has sixteen of them. Other battleships average about $6,000,000. Great Britain has sixty-seven battleships in all, built or building. Germany has forty-two. We have forty. Japan has eighteen. France has thirty-seven. Italy has eighteen. Austria-Hungary has six. Russia has twelve.

Yet another new terror in naval warfare is promised. The perfection of the gas-driven ship will probably be soon followed by the arrival of the partially submersible battleship, for the first step will render the second more practicable. Battleships will then grope for one another with only their guns above water. At a distance they will be invulnerable. Therefore, they must come close together. Sometimes they will not discover one another until they are in collision, and then each will destroy the other with a shell that will set off all the explosives in the ship and all the men in both ships will die under water.

It will be another step in the race to make war impossible.

SHOULD HE HAVE KILLED HIS WIFE?

How Would You Have Met the Problem That Faced James MacDowell Who Shot His Bride To Save Her From Torture?

James MacDowell, the Prospector Who Killed His Wife to Save Her from Torture or Death by Wolves.

"I knelt by her side. We prayed together for the repose of her soul and for forgiveness for my act. Then I killed her!"

"No Man Has a Right to Take a Life."

By CARLETON SIMON, M. D.

THERE is no possible justification for a physician, as a layman, to hasten the death of a patient suffering from an incurable disease, not only because there are on record cases where recovery has taken place, or where a mistaken diagnosis has been made, nor because science may at any hour discover a cure for an incurable disease, such as cancer, as an example—not because of these reasons, but because no man has a right to take a life.

Suffering can be relieved by suitable remedies, and while a merciful tendency should be cultivated to the highest degree, there is no combination of circumstances possible that vindicate the destruction of the life of a patient by the physician. In the number of instances where such acts were committed by members of the family, the depressed, tortured mind yielding to overpowering emotions or hysterical bias that in cooler moments of reason would have been rejected.

The viewpoint of life makes up the misery and happiness of this world's kaleidoscopic phases. If we could only think out our problems serenely and in our despair listen to wiser and cooler counsel, they would no longer be vexing.

The physician must be an optimist. Hope is his cornerstone and his keystone, and the whole rock upon which rests the basic principle of his profession lies in the words, "Where there is life there is hope." Hope is the light of life. Without it we might all of us at times wish we were dead. Who or where is he who has not at times felt his blood flow faster with renewed hope, with its wonderful rejuvenating radiations of joy and its marvelous tonical effects upon the mind and body?

The grave responsibilities that rest with the physician, commencing with the birth of his patient, and which cease only when nature calls back her gift, tend to make him strong, self-reliant and merciful, but his ears must be deaf to appeals for the ending of life. He must fight for the preservation of the last spark of life.

"Right in Theory, Doubtful in Practice."

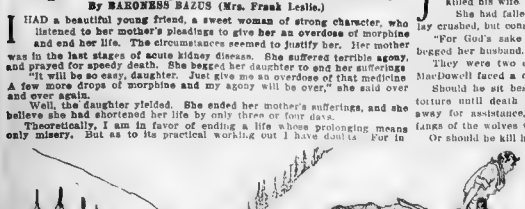
By BARONESS BAZUS (Mrs. Frank Leslie.)

I HAD a beautiful young friend, a sweet woman of strong character, who listened to her mother's pleadings to give her an overdose of morphine and end her life. The circumstances seemed to justify her. Her mother was in the last stages of acute kidney disease. She suffered terrible agony, and prayed for speedy death. She begged her daughter to end her sufferings.

"It will be so easy, daughter. Just give me an overdose of that medicine. A few more drops of morphine and my agony will be over," she said over and over again.

Well, the daughter yielded. She ended her mother's sufferings, and she believe she had shortened her life by only three or four days.

Theoretically, I am in favor of ending a life whose prolonging means only misery. But as to its practical working out I have doubts. For instance, Dr. Crippen might set up as a defense that he killed his wife because she was suffering from an incurable disease and begged him to shorten her life.



"Then began my haunted walk to civilization."

Like hypnotism, it is capable of good uses and bad, and we have more reason to fear the bad than to hope for general benefits from the good. I have lived long enough and mingled enough with humanity to have reached the conclusion that there are more bad people than good in the world. There are many persons who, while not bad, are not actively good, so their influence is the same.

By James MacDowell.

I AM a broken man. When I killed my wife, my interest in life ceased. I do not reproach myself now for ending my wife's sufferings in the way I did—I took the hardest part, for the memory of her passing away is always with me. Now that I am baring my soul to the world, I may perhaps find peace. I have tried everything else, and have yet to find it.

Fanny was my child-wife. She was the daughter of my best friend, and I had watched her and loved her from her cradle days, and when I married her I combined the love for a child with the love for a wife.

At the time of our tragedy we were about 120 miles from Calgary, the nearest inhabited place, and were approaching the wildest section of our journey. We had been riding for four hours without a break, because I wanted to complete our trip as soon as possible. Fanny was a few feet ahead of me, and the pack-mule brought up the rear.

We were both drowsing in the saddle, more or less overcome with fatigue and the intense heat from which the heavy woods afforded us little protection, when suddenly I was aroused by a cry and, looking up, saw Fanny's mule rearing on his hind legs. I thought that he had been stung by a hornet, and hurried toward him. Before I had advanced a yard, the brute toppled over the edge of the precipice which yawned, and disappeared.

I came upon the dead mule first. A few feet away I found the shapeless form of my wife—every bone in her body broken.

Her head and face were not badly injured. She had fallen 2,000 feet. I pressed my canteen to her lips, and the brandy and water it contained brought her back to consciousness.

"Jim," she moaned, "if you love me, end my agony!"

I put my head in my hands and groaned. I knew that it would take me ten days to bring help from Calgary, and I believed that poor Fanny could not survive as many hours. I heard the howling of the wolves, and the horrible truth that if I left her to summon help the beasts could make short work of her came to me so clearly that I at once banished the idea. I stood by and watched the woman I loved better than anything else in the world suffering the tortures of the damned with not a single chance of recovery.

Every now and again, Fanny would lapse into unconsciousness, and during these periods I would walk up and down, wondering what course to pursue. Should I kill my wife? I felt that to accede to her request would be murder in the eyes of men. But that did not worry me. I was willing to commit murder to end her terrible sufferings. But was there the faintest chance of saving her? That was the great point upon which the whole thing hinged.

Again she opened her eyes. "You are a coward, Jim," she said, "or you would kill me. You know I haven't a chance to live and I may suffer this torture for many hours."

"But, Fanny," I groaned, "I can't kill you. Some one may come along and we could get you to help."

"It's ten days to Calgary. What chance have I for living that ten days?" she asked. "I can't live, say way. I am all broken inside of me. You are a coward!"

For five hours this went on. Alternately there were spells of consciousness in which my wife moaned and shrieked with pain and reviled me as a coward, and then came unconsciousness, during which I saw that pain still persisted.

At the sixth hour I could endure it no longer. I kissed her good-by. I took my pistol and pressed the muzzle of it against her head. She closed her eyes and said "fire," but I had not strength enough to press the trigger, and my arm dropped to my side.

"Oh, you coward, you coward!" she cried.

I walked away that I might think it out all over again. The same problems presented themselves to me, and I could see only the one answer. Death alone could end my wife's tortures. Natural death might be delayed for hours, perhaps even days. There was nothing at hand to relieve the pain. If I fell asleep, as I was bound to sooner or later, we would fall ready victims to the wild beasts. The wolves were already closing in on us.

For three hours I debated the question, and again I decided to kill my wife. And again I faltered at the last moment. And so it went on until the tenth hour.

My wife's agony seemed to increase. Finally, I knelt by her side. We prayed together for the repose of her soul and for forgiveness for my act.

Then I killed her!

I covered my wife's remains with stones and rocks and grass, and returned to Calgary. I gave myself up to the sheriff. A party was made up to verify my story and to hold the inquest. I was exonerated by the coroner's jury, but it is not within the power of man to obliterate from my mind the memory.

The Scenario of MacDowell's Tragedy.

She had fallen down a 2,000-foot wall of rock and lay crushed, but conscious, at its foot.

"For God's sake kill me and end my agony," she begged her husband.

They were two days' march from the nearest help. MacDowell faced a clear cut problem of three sides.

Should he sit beside his wife and let her suffer her torture until death came? Should he hopelessly start away for assistance, leaving her to face death at the fangs of the wolves which were circling about them?

Or should he kill her?

MacDowell after hours of anguish, shot his wife through the head.

Is James MacDowell to be condemned as a murderer or to be acclaimed as a hero? On this page is his clean cut narrative of his experience to guide the judgment. And here is the scenario of his tragedy:

Among MacDowell's intimate chums is John Crawford, also a miner and prospector. Crawford has a pretty daughter, a bright, vivacious, courageous girl of the real northwestern type. MacDowell has watched the girl from the cradle up, and when she is twenty-two he marries her.

He has a rich claim near Castle Mountain, in the British Columbia extension of the Cascade range, and soon after he is married he decides to visit it.

The trail leads through a very rough country, but MacDowell's bride insists upon accompanying him. They have three mules—one for the wife, one for the husband and one for provisions and implements. The mountain trails are very narrow and steep, and one day, as the little cavalcade is traveling along slowly, the wife's mule, which is somewhat in the lead, suddenly brays, as if in pain, and the miner, looking up, sees him rearing on the very edge of the precipice. Before he can reach his wife's side, the mule has plunged over the edge of the cliff, carrying the wife with him!

MacDowell follows the edge of the canyon until he comes to the mouth and makes his way to the point of the catastrophe.

There he finds the body of the mule and, fifty feet away, the crushed and mutilated body of his wife. Every bone is broken, although her head and face have somehow escaped serious injury. He mixes some brandy and water and forces it down her throat, and she revives. She recognizes her husband and begs him to put her out of her misery.

MacDowell realizes that her case is hopeless and that her death can only be a matter of hours. The nearest help of any kind is 120 miles away.

In the distance, he hears the howling of the wolves and knows that the cougar or mountain lion will make short work of his suffering wife if he leaves her.

For thirty-six hours he has had neither sleep nor food, and he is unable to maintain the strict watch which will be necessary to save his wife and himself from the wild beasts of the region.

And all the time his bride of nine months is begging him to put her away, to release her from her agony. For ten hours he debates whether or not to yield to her request, and then decides to do so. He presses his revolver against his wife's head and fires.

Then MacDowell faints. When he recovers, hours later, he covers his wife's body with stones, rocks and grass, and starts for Calgary, where he gives himself up to the sheriff. He is tried by a coroner's jury and exonerated. The terrible experience he has gone through almost drives him insane. He becomes a physical and mental wreck. Now he is haunted by his deed, and has come to New York to recuperate.

Did James MacDowell commit murder, or not?

"The Acts of Such Men Are Splendid!"

By MRS. JEAN NORTON, Pastor of the New Thought Church.

THE men who, moved by love and sympathy, ended their wives' sufferings by killing them were heroes! Their acts were splendid!

The medical world has discussed these questions before. It has divided along radical and conservative lines. I knew an instance of such a merciful act. The patient was a lovely young woman—my niece. She was dying of tuberculosis and the doctor had been administering morphine to make her sleep. At last he gave her a larger dose, and the end came. I have always thought he did this to end her suffering and that he was right.

I have a son, a handsome, fine boy of twenty-one. I have all of a mother's love for and pride in him, but if he were in physical agony that could not be relieved and asked me to end it for him I would.

"Justifiable in the Eyes of God."

By REV. MADISON C. PETERS, Pastor of the People's Church.

THE taking of human life, except in self-defense, is never justifiable in the eyes of the law; but contingencies sometimes arise where such an act is justifiable in the eyes of God. To my mind, the MacDowell case was one of them.

The fine feelings which every man has for his fellow man, the still finer feelings which a husband bears for a wife, he sacrificed on the altar of love. James MacDowell did what every right-thinking man believes ought to be done in such a case, but which very few would find the courage to do.

Even though I have nothing but praise and admiration for this man, I realize the great danger which lies in countenancing the deliberate taking of human life under any considerations.

This same obstacle is met with in the consideration of another phase of the same question—the disposition of the new-born babe who is physically deformed or mentally deficient. Should these little ones be put away or should they be permitted to develop into lifelong cripples or idiots? If it were possible to regulate and safeguard the dispatch of the child who is suffering from an absolutely incurable and agonizing disease and the baby who is born to a life of torture in such a way that it could not be subjected to abuse, I should be inclined to say that, in the cause of humanity, an end should be put to such suffering.

I believe the time will come when the problem will be solved in this way.

A Tailor-Made "Lucile" Novelty of Satin, Soft Blue Cloth and Sable.

"Lucile's" Latest Scheme for Coat and Skirt Costume.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London and the foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the Fashion Page for this newspaper, illustrating her article with sketches or photographs of her exclusive London and American models and of Parisian fashions.

This week she describes two of her new tailor-made dresses and a few other dress novelties.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

THE tailor-made coat and skirt costume being, perhaps, the form of attire favored beyond all others by the American woman—and being, indeed, of vital importance all the year round to every woman who would be well dressed—is essentially a suitable subject for discussion at the moment. For this is the month when such costumes come into a prominence to which both Dame Fashion and the clerk of the weather contribute almost equally and which will continue far into the Spring. Fortunately there is nowadays hardly any limit to the fascinating variety displayed by garments which were once of almost monotonous uniformity and of a somewhat severe simplicity of style.

Not that I have a word to say against simplicity. Far from it, as indeed I have, I think, already and amply proved to you by my own productions. But an unrelieved severity is, sometimes, rather hard in its effects and therefore distinctly unbecoming to many types of women, and so it is delightful to find in place of the buckram-like stiffness of the one-time tailor-made, a supple softness which just suggests the lines and curves of the figure and never by any chance compresses or over-accentuates them. In fact the value of the straightly cut coat which only displays the merest suggestion of an inward curve about the waist, has been so fully recognized by the makers—and the followers—of fashion that though this particular style has already dominated the tailor-mades of the last two seasons, there is no slightest sign or desire for any change, which surely proves that when we do find something to suit us exactly we are not as fickle as the proverb presupposes all women (and fashion, of course, is feminine) to be.

It is time that, in the matter of length, we have made certain changes in our coats. But we now seem to have arrived at a truly "happy medium" which is becoming to most figures. I wonder if you [illegible] a new scheme which, as you [illegible] see from the sketch, marks the lost [illegible] of the long coat by means of a double skirt whose upper part reverses [illegible] order by being of absolutely [illegible] simplicity, while it is on the [illegible] skirt that there reappears the [illegible] first shown on the coat [illegible] faces the form of many [illegible] loops of cloth piped with satin [illegible] over [illegible] combination [illegible] oxidized braid. This touch of silver which [illegible] looks so well with certain soft [illegible] of gray and blue in the cloth of [illegible] model—is in one such gray being accentuated by the bordering on the quaint collar, where the lace is worked on [illegible] background of soft blue satin matching [illegible] piping of these aforementioned [illegible] This collar only adorns one side of the coat, you will notice, and at the back lapel runs to a mere piping in the centre, in which form it finishes off the collarless curve of the coat at the other side, it being one of the fashions—and some would say the freaks—of this season to make the two sides of gown or coat quite distinctively different in the way of both shaping and trimming, sometimes, too, even of color and fabric, though, of course, such striking diversity must needs be restricted to the more elaborate afternoon and evening gowns. In this particular and pictured model the coat is cut seamlessly over the shoulders, but if the introduction of a shoulder seam be considered advisable—and certainly it simplifies enormously the work of fitting and cutting—see to it that it is set well forward and that the sleeve is put in without the least suspicion of fulness. Then in this form the [illegible] may worthily represent [illegible] which, without [illegible] for ordinary and every day [illegible] of the [illegible] play something of [illegible] novelty.

The second model, on the other hand, can recommend the coat and skirt form of attire to even those women whose preference for softly clinging gowns might cause them in the ordinary way to forgo such costumes for a Princess dress and companion cloak. But here in the dual garments they have practically the same lines and softness as in the one gown. Even the [illegible] waist effect is secured and [illegible] sateen soft cloth is [illegible] kimono [illegible] over the [illegible] after [illegible] its ease [illegible] merges [illegible] long sleeves [illegible] almost glove-like [illegible] to the wrist, [illegible] jet is [illegible] bordering. I should like to [illegible] costume in cloth of fine [illegible] with either [illegible] one side of the coat [illegible] straight and [illegible] over [illegible] skirt. [illegible] scheme [illegible] adorn [illegible] [illegible] vided [illegible] er blue [illegible] adornment of skunk or [illegible] which, just at one side, two or three little pink roses are fastened.

Another and somewhat similar phase of the up-to-date tailor-made—designed for those women who want something rather different from the ordinary coat and skirt—is arranged with a quaint little jacket of bronze brown satin, whose shawl collar is narrowly bordered with beige satin and turns right over the left side with a big button ornament in which the two colors of satin are combined. Cuffs to match are [illegible] to the sleeves, and then the skirt is of that double tunic variety of which I have already given you one example. The upper part is of the beige and the under skirt of the darker brown. Still again, a coat of dark but bright blue satin with big frilled revers, whose pointed effect is repeated in the basques in front, is added to a skirt of faintly striped serge, deeply hemmed with satin, while another somewhat extreme but distinctly elegant phase of the Autumnal tailor-made is carried out in [illegible] face cloth—and made with an absolutely plain and straight skirt, which covers the ankles completely. Though it just clears the ground, and so will save its wearer from any anxiety as to damage from dust, the coat straight and short and single-breasted, fastening down the centre with many cloth-covered buttons, is banded just beneath the bust line with a wide scarf of violet satin looped over at the left side and having its long ends deeply fringed with silk. There are several [illegible] of violet worked into the embroidery which borders the curve of the coat about the neck and finishes off the sleeves.

Beautiful Cretonnes.

By which you will see that many things—and much smartness—are possible to the wearers of the coat skirt costume of this particular season. While if you should favor the somewhat more strictly tailored models, you may make a choice of material from many charmingly patterned and colored tweeds, cloths and serges, and of trimmings from soutache and Russian braidings, facings of Paisley or Indian patterned cashmeres and cottons and many beautifully colored cretonnes, too. These latter are figuring most effectively on any number of the newest [illegible] creations, and where they are [illegible] a good plan to choose for [illegible] millinery one of the [illegible] is (similar in shape to the one sketched on the blue model of the pictures) covered in the same prettily patterned material, lined with satin in one of the softest of the many shadings which are there brought together, and trimmed with a bordering band of fur and just a cluster of little silken roses.

This same cretonne is to be noticed again on the long coats of black velvet (which will be worn by the moneyed minority), and others of black velveteen (which will be chosen by the vast majority), during the coming season, when a decorative and at the same time protective addition is wanted for princess gown of cloth or satin or cashmere. In such cases the cretonne will generally be almost entirely covered with a fine scroll bordering of dull gold thread and soutache, and it will also give a groundwork of color to the big buttons which fasten the coat low down at the left side, so that altogether these garments, being distinctly smart and also quite serviceable, are likely to be chosen by a good many women to bridge over the time between their discarding of the Summer wraps of ninon and their donning of the long Winter coat of seal musquash.

Tapestry from decorating walls, has come to be used as in trifles of feminine adornment. It is quite the newest thing in ornamentation, and when skilfully used not at all bad.

You will see the tapestry head dress and head band, and here is a photograph showing the use of tapestry on a fur neck piece, muff, hat and opera bag. The design is the same on all the articles. I dread to think how many pieces of tapestry are to be snipped to pieces.

And here is a French model which sounds a new note in scarfs. The dress is of chiffon over white satin, embroidered in silver beads, white beads and spangles. It is fur-trimmed, following the prevailing mode. The scarf is of chiffon trimmed with fur, and is attached to the left shoulder of the gown. It is capable of tremendous artistic manipulation.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY

No. 92—That 3 Guinea Treatment.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri the Most Famous Living Beauty

MME. CAVALIERI'S study of the methods of her brother and sister beauty experts on the other side of the Atlantic, results to-day in an entertaining and instructive article on a facial treatment for which she paid an English specialist three guineas, or fifteen dollars and seventy-five cents. It is a high price, but the beauty specialist's luxurious surroundings, correct prescriptions, and defness of touch seem to have been value received, to Mme. Cavalieri, at least.

Next week Mme. Cavalieri will write about "Walking as a Beautifier."

Starving 100,000 Dogs to Death..

How the Turks, Barred by Their "Religious Scruples" from Killing Outright the Famous Scavengers of Constantinople, Have Banished Them to a Desert Island to Slow Torture.

The Dogs of Constantinople Dying on the Desert Island.

Constantinople, Sept. 1, 1910.

THE Turks, barred by their religion from killing the pariah dogs, which for centuries have been the scavengers of Constantinople and have formed one of the distinctive features of the East, have banished them to the deserted island of Oxia, in the Sea of Marmora, where they are now slowly starving to death.

One hundred thousand dogs within the last six weeks have been sent to this uninhabitable islet to succumb to the tortures of thirst and starvation. The dogs are dying at the rate of two hundred a day. The island is a scene of misery and savagery which would enable another Dante to add another circle to Hades.

This is one of the reforms of the young Turks, and it is one that has excited the horror and indignation of the whole civilized world.

I have paid a visit to this canine land of banishment and I shall never forget what I saw there. A dog is a dog, of course, and not a human being, but it has been the friend of man for ages and its semi-human appeal is demonstrated by the numerous societies for its protection throughout the world. No horrors of vivisection could compare with what is going on here in the queer blue sea that surrounds Oxia. There is some reason and use in vivisection, but the treatment of the Constantinople dogs is only the most horrible cruelty.

It appears that among the matters which demanded the reforming energy of the Young Turks this matter of the dogs was considered paramount. Every traveler in Turkey knows the Turkish dog with its pointed nose, bushy tail, gray red fur and his general wolf-like appearance. He is a familiar sight, of the half-wild dogs which followed the invading Turkish hosts from Asia Minor. Half wolves they were called by the historians of the time.

The Desert Island of Oxia Where the Dogs Are Marooned.

For four hundred years the dogs, protected by the sentiment of charity toward animals imposed by the Koran, have increased and multiplied, and by the general consent of the inhabitants of the towns and villages became licensed scavengers, disposing of the offal and refuse of the streets which, as in most Eastern countries, are the dumping-ground. It was so in the Middle Ages in the West; it is so still in the unchanging East. And into the Turkish dog found a living everywhere, ranging far and wide for food by night like a jackal. Being unpersecuted and, on the whole, treated kindly, he lost long ago the ferocity of his supposed ancestors and became partially tame.

Victims of the Exile Watching with Despairing Eyes the Boat Leave Them.

But the new Turks began to waken to a sense of cleanliness and the Western municipality ideas are making their way among the astonished citizens. It began to be understood that the street's mind need not be used as dustbins and that offal and such matters should be disposed elsewhere than in the nearest gutter. The effect of this reform on the thousands of dogs who were born in and lived and died in the streets, gaining a precarious living at the best, was that they began to starve by hundreds and became a more serious nuisance than ever.

It was decided that they must go. But at once the municipality found considerable difficulty in carrying out their intentions.

When it was proposed long ago in the reign of Ahmed I, that the dogs of Constantinople should be got rid of lest they should help to spread the plague, the Grand Mufti was consulted. He ruled that as dogs have souls it was unlawful to destroy them.

At another time many of the dogs were caught and marooned on an island, but they swam back to the mainland and popular rapture effervesced. Then a big one survived all to no purpose. At last in exasperation the Turks made a law to the effect that the dog should be killed, but this appears to be the end of the matter.

The first move of the Young Turks was to send them each day is not enough to feed five hundred dogs. A man has been

When a Woman Is Thirty-Five

"THIRTY-FIVE and pretty yet!" queried Sweet Seventeen, with dubious uplifting of eyebrows. How can she think thirty-five horrid. How can one be pretty after thirty? To be more than twenty-something-or-other means the end of all things for a woman, the very word 'thirty' has a menacing sound. Why, one must almost be getting gray! The Man regarded her with a smiling indulgence. "You are forgetting cultivation," said he, "and cultivation puts age out of the question. In these times thirty spells nothing to a woman. The modern cultured woman has a charm beyond compare, and what matters thirty, thirty-five, even forty, Sweet Seventeen, you small bud of innocence? For women are as the flowers—some of you roses, gentle, fragrant as the violet; elegant and stately as the lily; and even, I grieve to say, handsome and flaunting as the poppy with poison in its heart. You, Sweet Seventeen are yet but the smallest of the white violet buds."

"I don't see what that has to do with a woman being thirty-five and old," pouted Sweet Seventeen, "and I don't want to be bought. When I am thirty-five I shall quite have left off caring about being pretty, or thinking about clothes, or—or, even anything that I like to think about now."

"It is possible," said the man, very slowly tenderly plucking at his hat and smoothing out the fingers of his gloves, "it is possible for a woman to be at the zenith of her beauty even after thirty-five. Many of the lovely women of history are to me instances of beautiful maturity in life that I think you, Sweet Seventeen, that beauty is only the beginning of beauty; that life is the beginning of beauty; the lovely bud may become a far far lovelier flower. You are at the beginning of life, and life is beautiful, absorb its wonders and reflect its glories.

"Admire all that is often unto you to admire. Colors, flowers, sweet odors, atmosphere, pictures, music, books, curves, grace, the loveliness of Nature, and children and all young things. Regard them with an appreciating mind, and realise the appeal they make to your emotions, culling for yourself the best, as it seems to you, and storing your heart against all that tends to lower your standard of what is right.

"You may dwindle from the smartness of a young racehorse to the unkempt depression of the average peddler's donkey, if you neglect your grooming. Don't you see," groomed the Man, reaching for his hat, "that it is good grooming that keeps a woman going and holds the years in check? Will you let a meaningless, dis-

Be a Doctor of Mechano-Therapy

The Recognized Method of Drugless Healing

Earn $3000 to $5000 a Year!

We Teach You by Mail or in Class

Are you tired of working for wages which barely keep body and soul together? Then you should make up your mind to get out of the rut and start in business for yourself. To get busy and show your fellow men what your head, backed by natural talent, can do for you personally. Mechano-Therapy is the latest up-to-date recognized method of Drugless Healing, and you have here placed before you in detail the theory and practice of this exact and best method of healing and having a correct way to master disease without the use of medicine or habit-forming drugs.

SEND FOR OUR FREE BOOK

Entitled "How to Become a Mechano-Therapist." It tells how every man and woman, with an ordinary education and no medical training can acquire a profession with a few months which will insure financial independence for life. GET IT & THINK—it costs you nothing.

A Personal Word

From the President of the College

Have you ever thought of going into business for yourself?

Then send for our FREE book. It will tell you how others are enjoying a life of luxury, while putting money away in the bank. How YOU can work out this same independence, but be a benefit to humanity and a highly respected citizen with an income of $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

All I ask is that you send me the coupon below for my FREE book. You can then decide in the privacy of your own home whether you wish to embrace the opportunity which I offer you, or whether you will continue to plod along the balance of your days working for others.

What Is Mechano-Therapy?

Mechano-Therapy is the art, or science of treating disease without drugs. It is simple, understandable and far superior being the most up-to-date method of locating disease by the Natural Laws of Health as Nature built us originally with a brain.

The Mechano-Therapist, as the name plainly says, is a thinker. His methods are not drugs, but scientific, common-sense food, exercise, sleep, water and sunshine.

The Mechano-Therapist is skilled in overcoming the basic TOXIC CONDITION itself with its own force, rather than with poisonous drugs of the old school practitioner.

CAN I LEARN IT?

Have you asked yourself this question? We answer, unhesitatingly, YES

If you have so much as an ordinary, common school education, you can learn.

If you have the ambition to better your condition to earn more money—to have more leisure—you can learn.

Nor does it require years of patient study to learn Mechano-Therapy—we can teach you in a very short time, so that you may enter it as a profession and when you do, go about to make money. No text books are required. Personal thought is furnished by us. We supply all lessons and necessary text books free of cost to you. No apparatus is used. You do not have to quit a place to work. All you require is your two hands.

We Teach You in Your Own Home

We can teach you as honorable and profitable profession in a few months, which will insure your financial independence for life. We can make you master of your own time—will come and go as you will—an honored and respected citizen with an income of $3,000 to $5,000 a year. We teach you this pleasant, profitable profession by mail, right in your own home at your own convenience, and without interfering with your present duties. It makes no difference how old you are, any person—male or female—with just an ordinary, common school education can learn Mechano-Therapy. It is easy to learn and results are sure.

It is simply drugless healing. A common-sense method of treating human ills without dosing the system with poisonous drugs—Get at it. We have taught hundreds of men and women who were formerly clerks—farmers—stenographers—telegraph operators—insurance agents—railway employes—in fact, nearly every known occupation—old men of 70 years who felt discouraged and hopeless—young men of 20 years, who never had a day's business experience—salaried men, who could see nothing in the future but to become Obscure—laboring men, who never realized that they had within themselves the ability to change their condition. Write for our FREE book, which explains all—to-day.

Try to realize what this opportunity means TO YOU. If you are contented and willing to drudge for others all your life for a mere pittance, our proposition may not interest you. But if you have a spark of manhood left—any ambition whatsoever to improve your condition socially and financially learn this pleasant profession. It will make you independent for life. It is so easy—so VERY easy—to get all the details—without trouble or expense. Simply sign and send us the coupon now.

American College of Mechano-Therapy
Dept. 374, 120-122 Randolph St.,
Chicago, Ill.

No matter what your occupation may be, Mechano-Therapy offers a new field for improving your social and financial condition. Hundreds of men and women have taken up Mechano-Therapy and many are to-day independent and earning big money.

Makes $25 to $30 Per Day.
P. L. Hecht, M. T., Wis., writes: I now make as high as $20. to $30 per day. I feel that in Mechano-Therapy there is financial success for all who will put forth the necessary energy.

Make $10 to $15 Per Day and Work Seven Days a Week.
Dr. W. C. P., Lyons, Ill., writes: I am making from $10 to $15 per day and work seven days a week. I am busy all the time.

$5 For a Single Treatment.
P. W. Dykens, M. T., writes: In my year's practice I have never given a single treatment for less than $5.00 and my fee is most $5.00.

Became $15 a Day Formerly a Blacksmith.
W. S., Medford, Wis., writes: The practitioners of the Mechano-Therapist are ordinary educated men, who after taking the course in Mechano-Therapy was formerly a blacksmith with an ordinary education. Today he is practicing drugless healing with an average income of $15 per day.

One of our most successful Graduates, Leavitt in New York City writes: I cleared $60 above all expenses in four days' time.

MEN AND WOMEN

For nearly a quarter of a century have used Mrs. Gervaise Graham's Quick Hair Restorer for restoring to its natural color prematurely gray or faded hair.

This clear-as-water, absolutely harmless, odorless and non-sticky remedy is best for brown or black hair that is not more than one-half gray.

It will not wash off, wear off or rub off and positively cannot be detected

Hair Restorer is put up in a red glazed wrapper and bears my portrait of 1888 and my signature, without which none is genuine. I have used it myself on my own hair for over seventeen years.

It keeps the hair fluffy and natural, as it contains no poisonous sugar of lead and is not sticky or greasy like lead and sulphur preparations.

My Hair Restorer is for sale by druggists everywhere and will be sent by prepaid express upon receipt of price—$1.00 per bottle. Sample free if you will send me a small lock of your hair and state what the original color was.

For light shades of hair that are turning gray or where the hair is pure white in streaks, be sure to send me a lock of hair and ask for personal advice.

LET ME SEND YOU FREE
my instructive 64-page book on the complexion and scalp, together with free samples of Kosmeo Cream and Kosmeo Face Powder and free sample of my Quick Hair Restorer if you need it.

When asking for Hair Restorer sample, be sure to send lock of hair. Address

A New Handy-Size, Flexible Leather, Unabridged

This is an unprecedented and liberal offer that you can't afford to overlook. You need a Dictionary in your home or your office—not a big, clumsy volume, but a dainty, handy book that will contain not merely a few words, but all the words that the larger sized and heavy Dictionary contains. You can get this dictionary free by complying with conditions set forth below.

This new dictionary is just the very thing—light weight, small, bound in flexible leather, contains 1,224 pages of Oxford Bible paper that is very thin but very opaque, and it is not abridged

The only dictionaries with which this can be fairly compared are the unabridged editions of older dictionaries—the one so widely advertised as sold by subscription—and these range in price from ten to fifty dollars, according to the binding

We commend this book to those who want a strictly reliable dictionary, full of meat from cover to cover. We state positively that there can not be found elsewhere in the world a dictionary of the English language of the same size that defines as many words, or contains as many pages and as much information as this one does. If any person possessed a vocabulary of as many words as can be found on a fraction of the pages in this book, he would have a command of language greater than that of Shakespeare

The accuracy, reliability and excellence of this work have been secured because it was prepared with unremitting care under the supervision and close personal attention of Thomas H. Russell, LL.B., Editor-in-Chief.

This great Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary is free to any one who takes this offer:

Send 50 cents now (using the coupon) and we will send you a copy of Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary in full flexible leather binding and enter your name for a complete two years' subscription for Cosmopolitan Magazine, the great national magazine of fact and fiction. Then, if you are satisfied with the dictionary, send us the balance, $2.10. If you are not satisfied send the book back at our expense.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine, the most popular and widely read magazine in this country, is 15 cents a copy. If you bought a copy regularly for two years—24 months—it would cost you $3.60. All we ask is the $3.60 now, and you get free this remarkable Dictionary. Act now before this offer is recalled.

COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, 381 4th Ave., New York.

For the enclosed 50c. in advance payment, send me at once, prepaid, your Webster's Intercollegiate Dictionary, in full flexible leather, and enter my subscription for Cosmopolitan for two full years. I will pay the balance, $2.10, or return book, at your expense within 5 days.

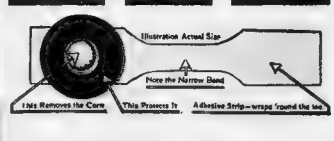
Every Corn Comes Away Freely



This is the "Blue-jay way" to remove corns:

Place the downy felt ring of a Blue-jay Corn Plaster directly over the corn so the medicated center rests on top.

The ring prevents chafing and stops all pain instantly.

At the same time that wonderful medication begins its persuasion—no pain whatever.

In 48 hours the thing is completed—you simply lift the corn out.

Neat, simple and safe. Absolutely effective.

No spreading liquid to make the toe sore—no mushy salve. Nothing at all hurtful or disagreeable.

Millions today are free from corns because of these marvelous little corn plasters. More than 10,000 are sold every day.

But the one way to know is to try them. Get a package today of any druggist.

We will make good the above if you wish, before you pay any money. Just say "Blue-jay" on a postal and we'll send you a plaster—free.

Every Girl in the United States May Have These Prizes

PRIZE NO. 1 This French Doll is the handsomest dolly ever brought to the United States. She is dressed exquisitely, and with the very best materials. She has genuine eyelashes, 3-inch long which make her wonderfully beautiful. Her eyes close when she lies down. Her knees, legs, arms, elbows, and head are jointed in a unique manner, so that they move in a wonderfully lifelike way. Her clothing is in separate garments; each piece can be taken off and they can be dressed and undressed as often as you wish, and she is a big, fine, large doll, measuring fifteen inches in height.
PRIZE NO. 2 is a stocking filled with all sorts of toys. This stocking will bring a happy surprise to everybody, as it contains presents for your papa, your mamma, your brothers, your sisters, cousins, and friends, as well as extra toys for yourself. This stocking contains from nine to twelve extra presents.
This Fine Big French Doll with Genuine Eyelashes and the Stocking Full of Toys will make you happy.
